Tahsildar's pay Rs. 250. Area 542 square miles. Pop. 360,829. Language Tamul. Greatest length from E. to W. about 36 miles; greatest breadth from N. to S. about 30 miles. S. of district. Divided into two almost equal portions by Cauvery, which crosses its entire length from W. to E. Bounded on N. by Moosiry and Perambalore talooks, on E.

by Oodayarpolliem talook, Tanjore talook, on S. by Poodoocottah territory and on W. by Coolitalay talook. Prior to 1861 the portion of the talook lying north of the river was termed Laulgoody, and that to the south Conaud talook. Of the 437 villages 49 are inam [q.v.]. There are no zemindarry [q.v.] villages. To the south are 15 villages, known as the Ilooppore division, separated from the rest of the district by Poodoocottah territory. On the whole very flat, and no hills of importance. South indian railway runs across talook from W. to E. and across the S.W. extremity. The soil of greater portion of fields irrigated by the Cauvery and its channels has been enriched by alluvial deposit. In the Ilooppore division the soil is hard and gravelly, interspersed with tracts of land impregnated with saltpetre [shorah]. There is however considerable cultivation under tanks [q.v.] in this portion. Paddy [q.v.] is principal grain. The most important dry grains [q.v.] are cholum [q.v.], varagoo [q.v.] and cumboo [bajrah]; oil-seeds [yennay], raggy [q.v.], gram [q.v.], dholl [common dholl] are also grown, and sugar-cane [q.v.], indigo [q.v.] and cotton [q.v.] are cultivated, especially north of the Coleroon. A large amount of rice is exported every year principally to Madura. Principal sources of irrigation are the Cauvery and its channels [q.v.], of which the following are the most important:—Ayyan vycaul, Nautt vycaul, Pervala vycaul, Poothoo vyttalay, Wyacondaun, and Yelanda vyttalay. The principal tanks are Coottapaur, Kileyore, and Vaulavondauncottay. Camping grounds:—Alloor, Naugamungalam, Pettah vyttalay, Samayaupooram, Shilayautty, Toovacoody. Places of archæological interest:—Anacaray, Jambookeshwaran, Javantinautapooram, Keel ambil, Laulgoody, Malavanore, Maungoody, Pitchaundarcoil, Poottore, Samayaupooram, Shreerungam, Tirmullaynullore, Tirpalatoray, Tirvausy, Trichinopoly, Trivellary, Warriore, Wyacondaun, Yelmanore, Yeroombeshwaram. Resorted to for bathing by a large number of people in Arpisy [mausam] or October.——(3) Sub-magistracy, Trichinopoly district. Pay Rs. 100.——(4) Town, Cantonment, Head-quarters of Collector, Judge, Railway station; Trichinopoly dist., Trichinopoly tal.; pop. 90,609; acres 3,052; lat. 10° 49′; long. 78° 46′; height 274; from Ariyalore S.W. 34 miles; from Madras S.S.W. 191 miles; from Moosiry E.S.E. 20 miles; from Shreerungam S. 4 miles. On the Cauvery about half a mile from its right bank. The Mahomedans call it Nutternagar, from a saint Nutter whose tomb still exists. Its position on banks of Cauvery and proximity to holy island of Shreerungam render it a place of great attraction to natives from all parts of India. For history see district notice in vol. II, 136. The principal monuments are the following:—the rock, and its temples; the teppacoolam, at the foot of the rock to the west; a fortified pagoda at Wyacondaun tirmullay; Chundah sahib's tomb; the Daur ool imaura, palace of the Nawaubs [q.v.] of the Carnatic [q.v.] and mosque [musjid]; the tank where Bishop Heber was drowned; the great temple of Shreerungam; the temple of Jambookeshwaran. Previous to the demolition of the ramparts in 1845 the rock formed the citadel of a large fort, one mile long by half a mile wide. Now only the fortifications of the rock remain. The rock is of syenite, 600 feet above the alluvial plain from which it rises, and is a very striking object viewed from a distance. The ascent to the rock is partly by a covered stone staircase and partly by steps cut in the rock itself. Upon it is a Shiva temple and at the top a small temple dedicated to Pillaiyaur or Ganapaty [vigneshwaran]. In August a festival at this temple attracts a crowd of pilgrims. The teppacoolam [q.v.] has steps down to the edge of the water. In the centre is a mantapam [q.v.] or pillared porch. The houses round the tank were once occupied by Europeans, and one is pointed out as having been Clive's residence. The different gateways or gopoorams [q.v.] are covered with inscriptions, but at present nothing is known of the history and date of the buildings. The districts of Madura and Trichinopoly were constantly devastated by the incursion of the Mahomedans, and it is probably due to this that the pagoda was fortified and made a stronghold. The peculiar design renders the place specially interesting, apart from its more modern associations. The remains of Chundah sahib, murdered in 1752 by Manikjee commander of the Tanjore force in alliance with the English, are interred at the shrine of Nutter owlia. The tomb of this latter saint has the appearance of having been converted out of the materials of Hindoo buildings, and may have been erected about the time of the invasion of Malik caufoor, who came from Delhi in A.D. 1310. Chundah sahib built the dome of the edifice. The railings round the two tombs in the building are of pierced metal-work of very singular design. The group of palaces and gardens, known as the Daur ool imaura, was built about A.D. 1660 by Chokka naick, when he removed his capital from Madura to Trichinopoly. The architecture is Saracenic [maunasauram, staupatyam]. Trichinopoly is the largest city south of Madras and of considerable commercial importance being situated at the trijunction of the Madras, Madura and Erode branches of the South indian railway. The town is famed for the skill of its inhabitants in the manufacture of hardware, cutlery, and jewellery [nagay, zewar]; their harness and saddlery are also excellent in workmanship and materials. Large quantities of cheroots [q.v.] are manufactured from tobacco [pogauk] of superior quality, grown in the neighbouring districts. It is the residence of a Roman catholic bishop. There are several Roman catholic churches, two of which are large and important. The S.P.G., Wesleyans, Lutherans, and Jesuits, have missions here and two first grade colleges, S.P.G. and Saint Joseph's. The cantonment is about 3 miles south-west of the fort, on an extensive open plain studded with masses of granite [caroom cull]. It is extensive, covering an area of from 6 to 8 miles in circuit. The following are the travelling distances by road from Trichinopoly to different places:—

TRINAM (तृण - trina, San.). From (trin, san. to injure), as eaten by animals. Grass [ghaus, ghiyah].——Trinarajan (तृणराज - trinaràja, San.). Means king of grasses. Same as Palmyra.

TRINOMALLEE (திருவண்ணாமலை - tiruvannámalai, Tam.). From (tiru, tam. sacred + aruna, san. red + malai, tam. mountain) [shree, tir]. Tam. also (annámalai), meaning same as sanscrit; also (arunai), meaning same. Sanscrit name (arunáchala), meaning red + mountain; also (arunagiri), meaning same; from red flowers of the butea frondosa [palaus] trees once found on the hill. Distinguish from Trincomalee.——(1) Talook, South arcot district. Tahsildar's pay Rs. 150. Includes the mittah of Vettavalam. Area 1,010 square miles. Population 205,403. Language Tamul. N.W. of district. Boundaries:—N. Tripatore talook, Salem district, Polore talook, North Arcot; E. Tindivanam and Villoopooram talooks; S. Tricalore and Cullacoorchy talooks; W. Ootancaray talook, Salem district. Regar [q.v.] and sandy soil [manal]. Cheyaur irrigates a portion of the Chengam division by three anicuts [q.v.] across at Chengam, Cottacoolam, and Yerayore. Places of archæological interest:—Auvore, Bhootamungalam, Caunjy, Chengam, Cullote, Gungavaram hills, Keel sangam, Malamanjanore, Malayanore, Manicull, Mekkanore, Moodiyanore, Peroongalattore, Shekkady, Shiviyampett, Tandausampett, Taunapaudy, Trinomallee, Varagore, Vayalore, Vettavalam. South arcot dist., Trinomallee tal.; pop. 12,155; acres 4,222; lat. 12° 15′; long. 79° 07′; height 2,669; from Chidambaram N.W. 70 miles; from Cuddalore W.N.W. 57 miles; from Madras S.W. 100 miles; from Tindivanam W. 38 miles; from Tricalore N.N.W. 19 miles; from Vriddhauchellam N.N.W. 50 miles. The first town on the road from the Baramahaul [q.v.] through the Chengam pass, and roads diverge north, south and to the coast. It is thus the entrepôt of trade between South arcot and the country above the ghauts [q.v.], and its fortified hill was always an important military point. The town is well built. The hill consists of three fortified peaks. The isolated Trinomallee peak is covered with jungle and accessible only on foot. From the top of the hill a natural column rises perpendicularly, which Sheiva bramins hold to be a lingam [q.v.]. It is the subject of a legend in the Scandapooraunam. Between 1753 and 1791 it was besieged on ten separate occasions and was six times taken, thrice by assault; besieged unsuccessfully by Moortezah ally khan in 1753, occupied by the French in 1757, recaptured by Krishna row in August 1758, retaken by the French in September, taken by the British in 1760. From 1760 it was a British post, on which Colonel Smith fell back in 1767, as he retired through the Chengam pass before Hyder ally and the Nizam. Here he held out till reinforced, when he signally defeated the allies. The last time it was taken was in January 1791 by Tippoo. Trinomallee is one of the five main Shiva centres [punch lingam]. The Caurtigay [pundigay, 5c] feast in November and December lasts ten days. From the nature of the soil and rock the hill appears red before sun-rise. An annual ceremony takes place in the plain below the hill by setting fire on the hill to a large torch. After some rites a light is kindled towards dark in the evening, when immediately the top of the torch on the hill becomes ignited. This is taken as a miracle. The staple articles of commerce at the festival are cattle [maud], woollen cloths [cumbly], and brass [pittalay] utensils. There is a tamul proverb:—விஷ்ணுவைப் பெரிது என்பார் ஸ்ரீரங்கத்தில், சிவனைப் பெரிது என்பார் அருணசலத்தில்—"the inhabitants of shree-"rungam say that vishnoo is great, those of arunachellam say "that shiva is great." TRIPALAM (त्रिफला - trip'halá, San.; ترپهلا - tirphala, Hind.; ತ್ರಿಫಲಿ - trip'hali, Can.; త్రిఫలము - trip'halamu, Tel.; ത്രിഫല - trip'hala, Mal.; திரிபலம் - tiribalam, Tam.). From (tri, san. three + p'hala, san. fruit); three myrobalans [tri]. The fruit of two species of indian Terminalia [belleric myrobalan, chebulic myrobalan], and one Phyllanthus [emblic myrobalan]. In each case a winged drupe of a dingy yellow color, and containing a hard stone. The myrobalans [q.v.] have been a common dyeing material in this country from time immemorial; with alum [fatakree, padicauram], they yield a good durable yellow [shauyam] and with salts of iron [annabhaidy], a black color little inferior to that produced by oak galls [mauchicoy]; they also make good ink [mashy, shye]; kernels of the nuts are eaten by the natives; in large quantities they produce intoxication; used in almost all diseases. Term Tripalam applied also:—to three spices, nutmeg [jauty], areca nut [q.v.], and cloves [lavangam]; and to three sweet fruits, grape [angoor], pomegranate [anaur], and date [kharjooram].——Belleric myrobalan (विभीतक - vibhítaka, San.; बेहडा - béhadá, Mahr.; गोटिंग - gótinga, Conc.; شجر بليلج - shajaribalílaj, Ar.; درخت بليله - darakhtibalílah, Pers.; بهيڑے كا پيڑ - bharlekáper, Hind.; بلڈے كا جهاڑ - baldekájhár, Dec.; ملك - malaka, Malay; ತಾರೆ - táre, Can.; ಶಾಂತಿಮರ - shántimara, Too.; తాడి - tádi, Tel.; ତର - tara, Oor.; താന്നി - tánni, Mal.; බුලු - bulu, Singh.; தான்றி - tánri, Tam.). Title from arabic. San. from (vi, san. preposition of intensity + bhí, san. to fear), from supposed haunt of devils. Mahr. from sanscrit. Ar. from (shajar, ar. tree + balílaj, ar. belleric myrobalan). Pers. from arabic. Hind. and Dec. from sanscrit. Mal. from tamul. San. also (aksha), from seeds used as dice; (tusha), meaning pleased with little water; (karshap'hala), meaning furrow-fruited; (bhútávása), meaning devil's abode; (kalidruma), meaning caly's tree, the haunt of goblins; cf. bonduc. Hind. also (bhairekáper), meaning myrobalan tree; (balrekájhár), meaning myrobalan tree, cf. belleric above. Malay also (kadondong). Can. also (tari); (shánti); (yehela); (bhirda). Too. also (dandi). Tel. also (tándi); (táni); (tándra). Tam.

also (káttiluppai), meaning forest + bassia longifolia, linn. [wild mohwah]; (akkandam); (ambalatti), meaning growing in open space. Title otherwise Baldah, Bedda, Bhirda, Devil's abode, Shaunty, Taniky, Taundry, Taurey. Botanically Terminalia [antya parny] belerica, roxb., combretaceæ [vricsham, 55]. Alias Myrobalanus belerica; Terminalia punctata. Tree, 100 feet; leaves about the extremities of the branchlets, long-petioled, obovate, quite entire, glabrous; spikes axillary, solitary, almost as long as the leaves; bisexual flowers sessile; male shortly pedicellate; drupe obovate, obscurely five-angled, fleshy, covered with greyish silky down; flowers fetid, small, greyish green. Has straight trunk and spreading head; narrow lance-like leaves, growing in tufts at the tops of the branches; flowering in march-april; common forest tree. The belleric myrobalan is the dried ripe drupe or fruit; it is about the size of an olive [zeitoon], of yellowish grey color, obovate shape, and marked with five longitudinal furrows; downy; size when dry of a gallnut [mauchicoy], and dirty-brown color; very astringent. Insipid gum [gond], resembling gum arabic [q.v.], issues from trunk when wounded; soluble in water, but inflammable, and will burn like a candle. Powder of the dried fruit is medicinally astringent in small doses and cathartic in large ones; in pharm. non-officinal; astringency nearly equal to that of emblic myrobalan; mixed with honey [shahad], the kernel of the nut is used in ophthalmia. Fruit eaten when fresh by goats [vellaud], sheep [aud], cattle [maud], deer [mrigam] and monkeys [bandar]; kernels eaten by natives, and slightly intoxicating. Oil [yennay] expressed from seed used for strengthening hair; fruit used in the arts as the basis of several colors [shauyam]; by itself forms a dingy yellow dye; employed in making ink [mashy]; also used in tanning [chamrah]; gum of no use. Wood white and rather soft, but durable; answers for packing-cases, sometimes hollowed out for canoes. There are three varieties of the belerica:—typica, leaves without glands at the apex of the petiole; belerica proper, leaves with two glands at the apex of the petiole and laurinioides.——Chebulic myrobalan (हरीतकी - harítakí, San.; हिरडा - hiradá, Mahr.; شجر هليلج - shajarihalílaj, Ar.; درخت هليله - darakhtihalílah, Pers.; ہڑّے کا پیڑ - harrekáper, Hind.; ہلڈّے کا جھاڑ - haldekájhár, Dec.; ಅಳಲೆಮರ - alalemara, Can.; ಅಣಿಲೆಮರ - anilemara, Too.; కరక - karaka, Tel.; କରେଧ - karedha, Oor.; കടുക്കായ - katukkáya, Mal.; අරළු - aralu, Singh.; கடு - kadu, Tam.). Title from arabic meaning cabool myrobalan. San. from (hri, san. to remove); from clearing bowels. Mahr. from sanscrit. Ar. from (shajar, ar. tree + halílaj, ar. chebulic myrobalan). Pers. from (darakht, pers. tree + halílah, pers. chebulic myrobalan). Hind. from (harrá, hind. chebulic myrobalan + per, hind. tree). Dec. from (haldá, hind. chebulic myrobalan + jhár, hind. tree). Can. from (alale, can. gallnut + mara, can. tree). Too. from (anile, too. gallnut + mara, too. tree). Tel. means black color, probably from the black color given by the fruits [wild papaw]. Mal. from tamul. Tam. meaning sharpness. San. also (pat'hyá), meaning agreeing with; (káyast'há), meaning supporting the body; (pancharasá), meaning five tastes; (abhayá), meaning relieving from fear; (avyat'há), meaning relieving from pain; (pútaná), meaning cleansing; (amritá), meaning nectar [emblic myrobalan, goolancha, wild bachnaug]; (pránadá), meaning life-giver; (sudhá), meaning nectar; (bhishakpriyá), meaning physician's favorite [goolancha]; (haimavatí), meaning produced on the himalayas [vashamboo]; (réchakí), meaning purgative [turbith]; (shréyasí), meaning leading to happiness [elephant long pepper]; (shivá), meaning auspicious [purple datura]; (harí), meaning yellow; (hémavatí), meaning golden colored; (chétakí), meaning reminding; (vijayá), meaning conquering; (jayá), meaning victorious [jayah]; (pramat'há), meaning destroying; (amóghá), meaning efficacious; (jívaníyá), supporting life; (nandiní), meaning happy; (róhiní), meaning red. Ar. also (shajarihalílajiasfar), meaning yellow myrobalan tree; (halílajikábulí), meaning cabool chebulic; (halílajiaswad), meaning black chebulic myrobalan. Pers. also (darakhtihalílahizard), meaning yellow myrobalan tree; (halílahikalán), meaning small myrobalan; (halílahisiyáh), meaning black myrobalan. Hind. also (píleharkáper), meaning yellow myrobalan tree; (harkáper), meaning chebulic myrobalan tree. Dec. also (halrekájhár), meaning chebulic myrobalan tree; (harlekájhár), meaning chebulic myrobalan tree; (pílehalekájhár), meaning yellow myrobalan tree. Can. also (aralekáyemara), meaning gallnut + tree; (anilekáyi); (kárekáyi); (herdekáyi); (atala); (pillamaradu); (allimara). Tel. also (karakamaddi), meaning gallnuts + terminalia arjuna, bedd.; (velamakaraka), meaning white + the tree; (pillamaddi), meaning small + terminalia arjuna, bedd.; (shringitíga), meaning top + creeper; (kappatíga), meaning frog + creeper [creeper mooshty]. Title otherwise Black myrobalan, Caraga, Common myrobalan, Country gall nut, Doum palm of egypt, Galled myrobalan, Haritakee, Indian myrobalan, Ink-nut tree, Negroe's olive, Oval-leaved terminalia, Yellow myrobalan. Botanically Terminalia [antya parny] chebula, retz., combretaceæ [vricsham, 55]; specific from hind. meaning from cabool. Alias Melanoxylon cadikamarum; Myrobalanus chebula; Terminalia myrobalanus citrina, reticulata. Cadikamaram from mal. Tree, 40-50 feet; trunk rarely straight, short; bark, ash-colored; branches numerous and spreading; leaves nearly opposite, shortly petioled, ovate oblong, obtuse or cordate at the base, quite entire, when young clothed with glossy silky hairs, particularly above, adult ones glabrous, sometimes glaucous, upper surface inconspicuously dotted, under closely reticulated with purplish veins; glands one on each side at the apex of the petiole; spikes terminal, often panicled; drupes oval, glabrous; nut irregularly and obscurely five-furrowed; flowers numerous small, whitish, fetid; found throughout forests, sometimes planted; from cabool, where it is very abundant. Fruit is Chebulic myrobalan. These are arranged into six classes, the fruit dried when just formed and the size of cumin-seed [jeerah], the fruit dried when the size of a barley-corn [jow], the fruit dried when the size of a raisin and black larger than last and greenish, the fruit near maturity and yellow, the fruit at full maturity. Chebulic myrobalans are of an ovoid shape, about an inch in length, sometimes tapering towards the lower extremity, round or obscurely five or six-sided, more or less furrowed longitudinally, smooth, of a yellowish-brown color, and astringent taste. They contain about 45 per cent. tannin, also gallic acid, mucilage and a brownish yellow coloring matter; the black articles contain an oleo-resin of a green color soluble in alcohol, ether, petroleum, spirit and oil of turpentine; named myrobalanin, is colored red by nitric acid [shorey ka tezaub]. Fictitious myrobalans of very large size are manufactured by glueing slices of the pulp upon a natural fruit. From seeds is expressed a clear, transparent, almost colorless fluid oil [yennay]; galls also are found on the leaves, the tender leaves being punctured by an insect and its eggs deposited therein, which by extravasation of the sap, become enlarged into hollow glands of various shapes and sizes; these more astringent than the fruit. When Indran [q.v.] was drinking amritam [q.v.] in heaven a drop of the fluid fell on the earth and produced the plant. Fruit, gall nuts, and flowers are all used medicinally; fruit is cathartic in large doses and astringent in smaller ones; substituted for british rhubarb, jalap, gallic and tannic acids; gall nuts used like oak [belote] galls; well rubbed with an equal proportion of catechu [q.v.] are used in aphthous complaints; flowers powdered are astringent, expectorant, febrifuge; all in pharm. officinal; medicinally in fine same as terminalia belerica, roxb. [belleric myrabolam] but more generally used. Leaves eaten by cattle; kernels also eaten and taste like filberts [findak], in large quantities produce intoxication. The galls with iron salts give a black dye [shauyam]; with turmeric [country saffron] and indigo [q.v.], a green; and with catechu, a brown; used in preparation of ink [mashy] along with iron [auhan]; with alum [padicauram], gives a yellow dye; used by chucklers in tanning and preparing leather [chamrah]; fruit more astringent than that of terminalia belerica, roxb., much more used by natives in arts and manufactures; plant gives a gum [gond]. Wood very hard, brownish-grey, with a greenish or yellowish tinge, fairly smooth and close-grained, seasons well, and takes a good polish. There is a Tamul proverb:—கடுக்காய்க்கு அகணி நஞ்சு சுக்கிற்குப் புறணி நஞ்சு—"the kernel of the gall-nut "and the skin of dried ginger are poisonous." The two are rejected before using in medicine.——Citrine myrobalan (ہڑّا - harrá, Hind.). Same as Harra.——Emblic myrobalan (आमलकी - ámalakí, San.; अवळा - avalá, Mahr.; आंवळो - ávaló, Conc.; أملج - amlaj, Ar., آمله - ámlah, Pers.; آنولہ - áunlah, Hind., Dec.; ನೆಲ್ಲಿ - nelli, Can. and Too.; ఉసిరిక - usirike, Tel.; ଓହଳ - ohalu, Oor.; നെല്ലി - nelli, Mal. and Singh.; நெல்லி - nelli, Tam.). Title from sanscrit. San. from (ámla, san. sour). Ar. from persian. Pers. and Hind. from sanscrit; cf. tamarind. Mahr., &c., from sanscrit. Drav. from (nel, mal. rice), from small leaves. San. also (amritá), meaning nectar [chebulic myrobalan, goolancha, wild bachnaug]; (dhátrí), meaning nourishing; (ámrap'halá), meaning sour fruit; (ádip'halá), meaning first fruit; (tishyap'halá), meaning pooshyam [caurtey] fruiting; (vayast'há), meaning keeping or preserving health. Hind. also (aungra); (aruli). Oor. also (gondhona) [buffalo moonnay]. Tam. also (káttunelli), meaning forest + the plant; (tóppi); (tóppunelli), meaning garden + the plant. Greek μυροβάλανος ἐμπλέτζ, μυροβάλανος ἐμβλικά. Title otherwise Awla, Garden gooseberry, Nelly, Shrubby phyllanthus. Botanically Phyllanthus [aumlacam] emblica, linn., euphorbiaceæ [vricsham, 118]. Alias Cicca emblica; Emblica officinalis; Myrobalanus emblica. Tree; crooked, thick as a man's body; leaves alternate, bifarious, pinnate, flower-bearing; leaflets numerous, alternate, linear-obtuse, entire; petioles striated, round; calyx six-parted; flowers in the male very numerous in the axils of the lower leaflets and round the common petiole below the leaflets; in the female few, solitary, sessile, mixed with some males in the most exterior floriferous axils; stigmas, three; drupe globular, fleshy, smooth, six-striated; nut obovate-triangular, three-celled; seeds two in each cell; flowers small, greenish yellow. Cultivated in native gardens; fruit globular, like common peel. Fresh emblic myrobalans are globular, fleshy, smooth, six-striated, of a yellowish-green color, and sometimes as large as a walnut [acroot]; they contain an obovate obtusely triangular, three-celled nut, each cell of which contains two triangular seeds; the taste of the pulp is acid, astringent, and somewhat acrid; the dried fruit is the size of a cob nut, sub-hexagonal, wrinkled, of a grey-black color if it has been collected when immature, but yellowish brown if mature; the latter upon pressure breaks up into six parts, each of which consists of a section of the pulp and nut, and contains one triangular brown seed. Fruit in fresh state has purgative properties, but when dry astringent, contains a large proportion of gallic acid; the exudation from the incisions on the fruit is used as an external application in inflammation of the eye; fruit substituted for british gentian [chiretta] and calumba [q.v.]; flowers are refrigerant and aperient; the seeds in infusion are cooling remedy; infusion of leaves applied to sore eyes; bark of root mixed with honey [shahad] applied to aphthas; bark used in diarrhœa; gives to pharm. dried fruit, like oak galls [mauchicoy], extract from wood, like catechu [q.v.]. Fruit made into pickle [chutney]. Bilˈloban [q.v.] is prepared by melting together impure muriate of soda and emblic myrobalans; fruit used as an adjunct to hair-dyes; black dye [shauyam] obtained from the fruit, along with myrobalans and sulphate of iron [annabhaidy]; chips of the wood clear muddy water; cf. clearing nut; branches sometimes placed in wells to impart a pleasant flavor to the water; the bark is used for tanning purposes [chamrah]; gives a gum [gond]. Has a wood very hard and durable, stands water well, is used for gun stocks, color reddish. There is a Tamul proverb:—உள்ளங்கையில் நெல்லிக்கனிபோல—"like the "nelly berry in the palm of the hand;" said of something unmistakably evident, from transparent skin and pulp of fruit. ——Indian myrobalan (هليلج هندى - halílajihindí, Hind.). Same as Chebulic myrobalan.——Wild almond myrobalan (جنگلى بادام - janglíbádám, Hind.). Same as Catapang.——Yellow myrobalan (پيلا هرّا - pìláharrá, Hind). Same as Harra.

TRIPATORE (திருப்பத்தூர் - tiruppattúr, Tam. tirupatur *). From (tiru, tam. holy + pathi, tam. place + úr, tam. village) [shree, tir].——(1) Talook, Salem district. Tahsildar's pay Rs. 200. Area 539 square miles. Population 188,826. Language Tamul. N.E. of district between N. lat. 12° 16′ and 12° 47′ and between E. long. 78° 27′ to 79° 04′. Extreme length from north to south about 31 and from east to west about 40 miles. Bounded north by Goodiyattam and Vellore talooks, North arcot, east by Polore talook of North arcot and Trinomallee talook in South arcot, south by Ootancaray talook, and west by a portion of the latter talook and by Krishnagherry. The talook may be compared to an isosceles triangle with the apex to the north-east and the base running from north-west to south-east. The greater part is plain country, blending to the south and south-west with Ootancaray and Krishnagherry. West and east the Baramahaul hills and the Jawaudy respectively separate the talook from Krishnagherry and South arcot. To the north centre the Yelagherry hills enter the talook like a wedge. The soil is composed of regar [q.v.], chiefly loamy, and red soil. The formation is gneissic of the quartzo-felspathic variety. Chief industries are trade in grains, oil-seed [yennay] and skins [chamrah], tanning [chamrah], and dealings in barks for dyeing [shauyam] and tanning [chamrah]. Chief products are cumboo [bajrah] and raggy [q.v.], the staple grains used as food, wheat [geung], cholum [q.v.], varagoo [q.v.], shaumay [q.v.], gingelly [q.v.], dholl [common dholl], oolandoo [black gram], horse-gram [q.v.], and beans [country bean]; these are grown on dry lands and hills. In wet lands and gardens, rice [q.v.], tobacco [pogauk], chillies [q.v.], cocoanut [q.v.], areca-nut [q.v.], ground-nut [q.v.], plantains [q.v.], and sugarcane [q.v.] are raised. Coffee [q.v.] is produced in small quantities on the Jawaudy. Paddy [q.v.] is exported to Calicut, rice to Avanashy and Bangalore, and wheat to Madras. The Yelagherry or Vaniyambaudy wheat is noted for fineness. Areca-nut [areca] and yarn are imported from Shirmoogay and Berar. Pepper [q.v.] comes from Palghaut and salt [ooppoo] from Madras. Ghee [q.v.], lamp-oil [q.v.], dholl [q.v.] and jaggery [q.v.] are also exported in different directions, and tamarind [q.v.] fruit goes to Pondicherry and Madras. Auvauramputtay [tungaid], hides [chamrah] and ghee [q.v.] are imported from the adjoining talook of Ootancaray. The chief rivers are the Palaur, which flows through the north-western corner, and the Paumbaur, which flows through the centre and south with their tributaries. There are ferries at Vaniyambaudy at different points on the Palaur and its branches. The principal tanks are Tripatore periyairy tank, which succumbed to the cyclone of may 1874; Agrahauram tank; Irnamputt yegilairy which burst in the cyclone of may 1872; the Vaniyambaudy naugalairy; the Koratty periyairy; and the Coonitchy periyairy. Camping grounds:—Alangauyam, Mottore, Nunnery, Poohoopett, Tripatore, Vaniyambaudy. The camping ground at Muttrapully is indifferent. Zemindarries:—Alanjicolam, Amboor pettah, Anayairy, Bommeycooppam, Candily, Casinaickamputty, Cathirimungalam, Caucangaray, Chiccanacooppam, Chinnacandily, Chinna veppamputt, Cunnaulaputty, Devastaunam, Lakkinaickamputty, Madanancherry, Moocanore, Nuttam, Pauchal, Periyagaram, Poottaharam, Pulliputty, Rauchamungalam, Shammandicooppam, Shelathampully, Tauthavully, Tiriyaulam, Yelagherry-mittah, Yilayanagaram. Places of archæological interest:—Madagadappa droog, Vaniyambaudy, Yelagherry hill. The leading places, &c., in the talook are the following.——Agrahauram (அக்கிரகாரம் - akkiragáram, Tam.). Bounded east by Sydapett and Ponnairy talooks; east and north by Calastry and Vencatagherry zemindarries; west by Vencatagherry, Calastry and Carvetnugger zemindarries; and south by Conjeeveram talook. The talook generally is flat and uninteresting, but it is altogether the best wooded in the district. At the northern end the Naugalaupooram and Suttivaid hills relieve the monotonous plain. The rainfall, which averages about 61 inches, is the highest in the district. The soil is generally either sandy, or red ferruginous loam. The soils soak up so much moisture that in spite of the heavy rainfall, the talook is no better off in the quality of its dry crops [dry grain] than neighbouring tracts with stiff black soil and less than half the rainfall [mazhay]. The principal crops are paddy [q.v.], raggy [q.v.], indigo [q.v.], varagoo [q.v.] and cumboo [bajrah]. Weaving is carried on in many villages, but only for the supply of local demand. English cloth is dyed for male and female garments. Red handkerchiefs [roomaul] and Mussalman cloths are manufactured in Suttivaid division. These are sent to Bangalore, whence they find their way to Madras, Penang and Singapore. Rivers are the Corteliaur, which flows eastward through the centre of the talook; the Aranyanuddy, which runs across its northern borders; the Cooum, which supplies irrigation to several villages near the line of railway; and in the Suttivaid division of the talook a jungle stream called the Yellappa naidoo pettah stream which irrigates Amboor, Collattore, Pandore, and a few other villages in that part. Town is about two miles north of railway station. The large Vishnoo temple at each new moon [amavausyay] attracts crowds of natives from Madras, who perform ablutions [snaunam] in the tank. There are two specially great fixed festivals, Bramhotsavam [pundigay, 6a] on the new-moon day in Tye [mausam], or january and floating festival on that in Auny [mausam] or june. The nucleus from which the present building sprung was a small village pagoda [q.v.] containing a double shrine, under the name of Veera raghava sawmy, dedicated to Vishnoo and his wife. This stands in a cloistered court, measuring 192 feet by 156 feet, with one tower or gopooram [q.v.] in the front wall. Another court was afterwards added, measuring 470 feet square, with two towers in the walls. Some time afterwards a third and last court was added, measuring 940 feet by 701 feet, ornamented with five towers and containing several new shrines. It was designed to erect a mantapam [q.v.] or hall of thousand pillars in this outer court. The builders set up 688 of these, about half of which were covered in, when want of funds stopped further progress. This is the head-quarters of the Ahobala mutt [q.v.], the head of which is styled Jiyyar [q.v.], the high priest of Vadagalays [q.v.]. There is also a Shiva temple called Teerteshwara sawmy's pagoda [q.v.] older than the Vishnoo temple.

TUSSER (تسر - tassar, Hind.). From (tasara, san. shuttle). An inferior silk [puttoo], the product of Antheræa mylitta, drury, found especially in the Carnatic [q.v.] uplands. These caterpillars are about four inches long, green, with reddish spots and a reddish yellow band running lengthways. They feed on several plants, including the teak [q.v.], the bair [q.v.], the saul [q.v.], and semal trees [red-cotton tree], and the castor-oil plant [aumanac], and produce ten-fold as much as an ordinary silkworm. They hang their gray-white cocoons on the branches by thick hard cords of silky matter, so that they look like fruit. The cocoons are killed by placing in boiling water, then taken to the market, and reeled like the ordinary silk cocoon. The raw silk is either employed alone or mixed with cotton [q.v.]. The Tusser silk fabrics are of an uniform greyish drab color, and have a glossy appearance due to the fact that the fibre is flat and not round as is that of ordinary silk. Tissues are exported largely. This silk moth cannot be domesticated.

TUTICORIN * (தூத்துக்குடி - túttukkudi, Tam.). From (túttu, tam. to scatter + kudi, tam. habitation). The final n was added for some such euphonic reason as turned Cotchy into Cochin and Coomary into Comorin. Sanscrit name (mandiranagara), meaning sea city.—"a" Deputy tahsildarry, Tinnevelly district. On the north-west shore of the Gulf of Manaar near Paumben passage and between the mouths of the Tamrapurny and Veippaur. The general appearance is unattractive. Chief port of the district. There is a fine harbour for boats, since extended, and a short public jetty as well as several private ones. The anchorage for ships, about two and-a-half miles out is sheltered on the west, north, and south by the mainland of Tinnevelly, and on the east by a group of islets, extending about 8 miles from north to south. In the north-east monsoon it is especially well-protected. Light, north extreme of Hare island or Paundyan teev, 2½ miles east of Tuticorin; lat. 8° 47′ 10″; long. 78° 11′ 20″; white; fixed; 14 miles range; visible from all directions seaward; sandstone column, colored brown, lantern white; guide to the anchorage. The Dutch obelisk light is in lat. 8° 47′ 17″ N. and long. 78° 11′ 17″ E. Tuticorin was first a Portuguese settlement about 1540; taken by the Dutch 1658; taken from the Dutch by the English 1782; restored to the Dutch 1785 in consequence of the treaty of 2nd September 1783; again taken by the English in 1795; captured and held for a short time by the Poligar of Punchaulamcoorchy during the last Poligar war in 1801; ceded to the Dutch in 1818; and again ceded back to the English in 1825. In 1700 the Jesuits spoke of Tuticorin as having 50,000 inhabitants but the place has decreased in importance since then. It is still the centre of pearl [moty] and conch [chunk] shell fishery. The trade is chiefly in cotton [q.v.], and there are several steam cotton-presses and spinning mills. Coffee [q.v.] from the ghaut [q.v.] estates, salt [ooppoo], chillies [q.v.], and palmyra [q.v.] jaggery [q.v.] are other exports. Imports are chiefly English piece-goods and yarn, paddy [q.v.], rice [q.v.], metals [loham], and betel-nuts [q.v.]. Much rice, as well as cattle [maud], horses [ghorah], sheep [aud] and poultry are sent to Ceylon. There are several European merchants. Trade has much increased since the opening in 1875 of the South indian railway, of which Tuticorin is a terminus. Water-supply is derived from the Tamrapurny, being brought from a reservoir 4 miles distant in open channels and masonry conduits and stored in dipping wells and tanks. The local wells are all salt. Of the inhabitants about 30 per cent. are Parava [q.v.] roman catholics, fishermen by profession. Tuticorin is the chief town and residence of their headman. There are several Catholic churches and a convent of European nuns. Old cemetery with elaborately-carved Dutch tomb-stones, having coats of arms on them.

Title otherwise Arrack acacia, Kateerah gum tree [golden silk cotton], Panicled acacia, White babool, White-bark acacia, White toomma. Botanically Acacia [cantalam] leucophlæa, willd., leguminosæ [vricsham, 48]. Alias Acacia alba; Mimosa alba, horrida, leucophlæa. The specific name from whitish color of bark. Tree, armed with stipulary thorns; leaves bipinnated; pinnæ seven to twelve pair, leaflets numerous, oblong-linear, slightly pubescent; panicles terminal or from the upper axils; branches and peduncles shortly tomentose; corolla five-cleft; stamens distinct; legumes narrow, long, curved, shortly tomentose when young; heads of flowers globose; flowers small, pale yellow; flowers june to september. Gum [gond] resembles gum bussorah [q.v.]. Gives to pharm. velvail bark, mentioned but non-officinal; astringent like that of acacia arabica willd. [babool]; used in native medicine. Young pods and seeds and even the whitish bark are eaten in times of scarcity; bark used to flavor native spirits [sharaub], and to increase quantity of alcohol from the sugar [arrack]. A fibre [naur] from the bark by maceration after four or five days' beating; it is used for large fishing-nets [valay] and coarse kind of cordage, being tough and strong; leaves give a black color as dye [shauyam]. Timber hard and strong, much like babool, but closer-grained and of a deeper color; used for the same purposes; makes excellent fuel for locomotive purposes.——White vail (வெள்வேல் - velvél, Tam.). Same as Velvail.

VAILAY (सूर्यावर्त्त - súryávarta, San.; तिळवणी - tilavaní, Mahr.; शिर्काल - shirkála, Conc.; هرهر - hurhur, Hind.; هلهل - hulhul, Dec.; ನಾರಂಬೇಳೆ - nárambéle, Can.; వామింట - váminta, Tel.; വേള - véla, Mal.; වේලා - vélá, Singh.; வேளை - vélai, Tam.). Title from tamul [vem]. San. from (súrya, san. sun + ávarta, san. turning); cf. soorycaunty. Can. from (náru, can. to smell + béle, can. the plant). Tel. from (vámu, tel. omum, carum copticum, benth. + antu, tel. to stick), viscous plant with peculiar odour. Mal. and Tam. from (vé, tam. to burn); from vesicant leaves. San. also (arkapushpiká), meaning sun + flower; (varvara), meaning covering, medicinal [babool, fragrant toolsy, knotted bhraungy]. Can. also (shirikála), from conçany; (tilónigida), from mahratta. Tel. also (ajagandhi), meaning goat + smelling; cf. ajwaun. Mal. also (taivéla), meaning young + the shrub; (káttukatuku), meaning wild mustard, brassica juncea, h. f. t.; (nallavéla), meaning good + the shrub; (kárvvéla), meaning black variety. Tam. also (náykkadugu), meaning dog + mustard; (taivélai), meaning the month + the plant; (nallavélai), meaning good + the plant. Title otherwise Black vailay, Dog mustard, Five-leaved cleome. Botanically Gynandropsis pentaphylla, dc., capparideæ [vricsham, 11]. Alias Cleome pentaphylla; Gymnogonia pentaphylla; Gynandropsis affinis; Podogyne pentaphylla; Sinapistrum pentaphylla. Annual, 1 foot; calyx sepals four, spreading; petals four, open, not covering the stamens; stem more or less covered with glandular pubescence or hairs; middle leaves five-foliolate, lower and floral leaves trifoliolate; leaflets obovate, puberulous, entire, or slightly serrulate; flowers white or flesh-colored, with pink stamens and brown anthers; siliqua stalked. Common weed in gardens and fields, flowering nearly all the year; the whole plant is viscid and covered thickly with glandular hairs; it has a strong peculiar odour like the black currant leaf or asafœtida [q.v.]; the seeds are black, of the same shape and size as those of cleome viscosa [dog vailay], but rougher; they have a very faint flavor of mustard [rayaun]. The plant when crushed in the fresh state develops an acrid volatile oil [yennay] having the properties of garlic [lussoon] or mustard [rayaun] oil; the dried plant exhausted by alcohol yields a deep green tincture, this on evaporation leaving a brown soft resin [raul] which has no irritant action when applied to the skin. The seeds, leaves and roots are medicinal, the seeds anthelmintic and rubefacient, the leaves remedy for diseases of the ear, the root febrifuge. The seeds are prescribed internally in powder with sugar [q.v.], and externally in poultice or paste by bruising them with vinegar [candy], lime-juice [lime] or hot water. For the use of the ear, the juice of the leaves is pressed out by bruising them without water. The root is employed in decoction, prepared thus:—take of the root, cut into small pieces and bruised, three ounces; water, one pint and a half; boil on a slow fire till the liquid is reduced to one pint, and strain when cool. Doses; of the powder, from thirty grains to one drachm, morning and evening for two days, followed on third morning by castor [aumanac] oil; of the decoction, from one to three fluid ounces, four or five times a day. Substituted; the seeds for the mustard [rayaun] imported from europe, and for santonin [absinth]; the leaves for glycerine; the root for pulv. antimonialis. Leaves eaten in curries [q.v.] and used as famine food; pungent taste. Seeds yield oil [yennay]. A variety with rose-colored flowers, in flower gardens. Another species called Triphylla.——Dog vailay (आदित्यभक्ता - ádityabhaktá, San.; वेडमोहरी - védamóhari, Mahr.; शिरिकाल - shirikála, Conc.; هرهر - hurhur, Hind.; هلهل - hulhul, Dec.; ಕಾಡುಸಾಸಿವೆ - kádusásive, Can.; ಸಂತೆಮು - santemi, Too.; నేలవావింట - nélaváminta, Tel.; കാട്ടുകടുക - káttukatuku, Mal.; වලඹ - valaba, Singh.; நாய்வேளை - náyvélai, Tam.). Tam. from (náy, tam. dog + vélai, tam. plant, gynandropsis pentaphylla, dec.); from pungent leaves. San. also (shvánavarvara), meaning dog + gynandropsis pentaphylla, dc.; (shunakavarvara), meaning dog + gynandropsis pentaphylla, dc.; (arkakántá), meaning sun loving. Mahr. also (kánap'hutí), meaning ear + breaking open, from its use in curing deafness; (pivalátilavaní), meaning yellow + the plant, gynandropsis pentaphylla, d.c. Hind. also (chhoríajwán), meaning false ajwaun; (janglíhurhur), meaning wild cleome. Dec. also (janglíhulhul), meaning wild cleome. Can. also (náyibele), meaning dog + the plant, gynandropsis pentaphylla, d.c.; (huççusásive), meaning mad + mustard plant. Tel. also (kukkáválu), meaning dog + mustard, brassica juncea, h. f. and t.; (peddaváminta), meaning large + gynandropsis pentaphylla, dec.; (kukkaváminta), meaning dog + gynandropsis pentaphylla, dec. Mal. also (áryavéla), meaning noble + gynandropsis; (náyvéla), meaning dog + gynandropsis; (náykatuku), meaning dog + mustard. Tam. also (náykkadugu), meaning dog + mustard, inferior mustard, from feeble taste of seed; (káttukkadugu), meaning forest + mustard; (peruvélai), meaning big + gynandropsis pentaphylla, dec. Herbe puante or Brede puante of french settlements in east; Bredo mamma of portuguese. Title otherwise Deaf mustard, Dog mustard, Viscid celadine, Wild mustard. Botanically Cleome viscosa, linn., capparideæ [vricsham, 11]. Alias Cleome dodecandra, epilobioides, icosandra, viscosa; Polanisia icosandra, viscosa. Small plant, 2–3 feet; stem covered with viscid glandular hairs; leaves three to five foliolate; leaflets obovate-cuneate or oblong, pubescent, scarcely longer than the petiole; siliqua terete, striated, rough with glandular hairs, sessile, acuminated; flowers small yellow; flowering nearly all year. One of the commonest weeds in fields, particularly those of indigo [q.v.]; flowers curious for the great distance the pistil with the seed-vessel at the end projects out from among the stamens; flowers are clumped several together in a tuft-like head on the summit of the plant; the whole plant pubescent and extremely viscid; many of the hairs are surmounted by a round gland, from which a reddish viscid secretion exudes; the plant has a powerful odour like black currants; the capsules are from 2–3½ inches long, striated, pubescent, tapering towards the point, which is surmounted by the style; the seeds are dark brown or nearly black, reniform, and granular, about the size of black mustard [rayaun] seed; the leaves have a pungent flavor, and the seed a feeble taste of mustard. Seeds are medicinally anthelmintic, rubefacient and vesicant; leaves rubefacient, vesicant and remedy for diseases of ear. Seeds used internally in powder with sugar [q.v.], and externally in poultice by bruising with vinegar [caudy], lime-juice [lime] or hot water. Leaves applied to skin in poultice or paste by bruising them with vinegar, lime-juice or hot water; juice for use of ear is pressed out by bruising and rubbing them without water. Dose of powder, from thirty grains to a drachm, twice a day for two days, followed on third morning by purgative. Substituted; the seeds for santonin [absinth] and mustard [rayaun] flour from europe; leaves for last-named and for glycerine. Seeds are, as a drug, same as gynandropsis pentaphylla [vailay], but leaves much superior. Fresh plant eaten as greens, and has a warm taste like mustard; seeds used in curries [q.v.] like mustard [rayaun]. Seeds, when subjected to very powerful pressure, yield an oil [yennay] which is of a light, olive green color; ashes used as mordant [cauram]. As this plant and Vailay [q.v.] are often confounded, the following distinctions can be noticed:—Cleome viscosa; siliqua flat, striated, pubescent, and sessile or short-stalked; flowers yellow; stem and branches quite covered with viscid, glandular hairs; smell very fœtid and strong. Gynandropsis pentaphylla; siliqua round, glabrous; stalk generally long and sometimes as long as the siliqua itself; flowers almost always white; stem and branches slightly covered with glandular hairs; smell fœtid, but generally very indistinct; seeds more rough. Other species of cleome are:—aspera, burmanni, tenella. Purple dog vailay, or blue as called in vernacular, is cleome chelidonii, linn.; erect growing pot plant, large rose colored flowers; moist soil by borders of rice-fields; flowering in rainy season; seed used like viscosa. Tye vailay so called from the month, otherwise cat's cleome, is cleome felina. Small vailay, otherwise simple-leaved cleome, is cleome monophylla, linn.; flowers small, pale rose-colored; common weed in waste places.——Gram vailay (கொள்ளுக்காய்வேளை - kollukkáyvélai, Tam.). From resemblance to horse-gram. Same as Zanzibar indigo.

VAIMA (వేమ - véma, Tel.). From (vé, san. to sew). A loom [tarry].——Vaimareddy (వేమరెడ్డి - vémareddi, Tel.). From (above + reddi, tel. caste title). Title of rulers of Condaveed. One attained to some distinction after the fall of Warangal [raj]. See vol. I (150).

VAITASAM (वेतस - vétasa, San.). From (vé, san. to plait); useful in plaiting. Botanically the Calamus genus, palmaceæ [vricsham, 149]. Canes. Climbing palms [taur]; sometimes occur as stunted erect bushes, constituting impenetrable clumps; at other times by their prickly tendrils clasping trees of the forest they ascend as climbers, attaining a length of even 600 feet; stems, leaves and tendrils are covered with spines and prickles; fruit hangs in large clusters, inner succulent layer of which is edible; stem when freshly cut contains much liquid; roots and young shoots edible; outer layer of canes very strong and to this is due their strength; many species, from girth of goose-quill to that of a stout walking-stick. The species best known to the natives are:—draco [sumatra dragon's blood], fasciculatus [walking-stick rattan], rotang [country rattan]. Other s. indian species indigenous or naturalized are:— erectus, extensus, gracilis, latifolius, pseudo-rotang.

VAJ (वज् - vaj, San.). To be strong.——Vajracaroor (వజ్రకరూరు - vajrakarúru, Tel.). From (vajra, san. diamond + karúru, tel. village so named). Village; Anantapore dist., Gooty tal.; pop. 2,473; acres 11,265; lat. 15° 02′; long. 77° 26′; from Anantapore N.N.W. 28 miles; from Gooty W.S.W. 18 miles. Diamond [vajram] mines worked in former days by Tippoo. Europeans recently carried on operations.——Vajram (वज्र - vajra, San.; الماس - almás, Ar.; هيرا - hírá, Hind.; ವಜ್ರ - vajra, Can.; రవ - rava, Tel.; വൈരക്കല്ലു - vairakkallu, Mal.; வயிரம் - vayiram, Tam.). San. from (vaj, san. to be hard). Ar. from (lamasa, ar. sparkle). Hind. from (híra, san. indra's thunderbolt). Tel. means a particle. Diamond. Crystallised mineral, the most valuable gem [ratnam]. Occurs in single or unattached crystals, sometimes with plain, but more frequently with rounded surfaces. Colors commonly white or grey, sometimes red, brown, yellow, green, blue and black; the two last rare. Chiefly found disseminated in gravel [kankar] or embedded in sandstone [manal cull]. Generally brought from Golcondah, Bundelcund, Borneo, and Sumbulpore in Orissa. These are reckoned superior in transparency and purity to those of Brazil. The Maturese diamond of Ceylon, or yellow tourmaline [q.v.], is a topaz [pookhrauj] of a greenish-yellow color. ἀδάμας or dimonds were exported from Mouziris [cranganore] and Nelkunda [cullada] according to the Periplus. The Tamulians value diamonds in jewellery [nagay] for their decorative effect, but they also prize them as a talisman; this is specially so when the natural crystal is so perfect and clear that it requires only to have its natural facets polished; this is what jewellers call a point diamond. The rose diamond is a hemisphere covered with facets; and the brilliant, cut above with thirty-two facets, and below with twenty-four. Diamonds are classed by natives as follows:—Bramin, white pure water; Cshatriya, rose or reddish; Veisya, smoky; Shoodra, dark and impure. Diamond powder is much used in native medicine. It is purified by being enclosed within a lemon [q.v.] and boiled in the juice of Sesbania grandiflora [sesban]. The powder acts as a powerful alterative tonic. It is also and more familiarly known as a powerful mechanical poison. There is a Tamul proverb:—வைரத்தை வைரம் கொண்டே அறுக்கவேண்டும்—"a diamond must be cut with a diamond." Diamonds are weighed by the carat [q.v.] as in England; and rough or unwrought diamonds are generally valued according to the square of their carat weight. Wrought diamonds are supposed to have lost half their original weight and therefore they are valued according to the square of double their actual weight. See vol. II, 29.—"a" Vajram means also the thunderbolt, the weapon of indran [q.v.]; otherwise Vajrauyoodham. Sometimes described as quoit-shaped like the Chuckram [q.v.] of vishnoo [q.v.], and sometimes as consisting of two transverse bolts. Vajrapauny, from (páni, san. hand), is indran [q.v.] himself. Varauha mihiran [q.v.] says that when two winds come in collision, that which being struck falls on the earth is known as a thunderbolt.—"b" Vajram means also glue. This is of three kinds; skin or leather glue, bone glue, and fish glue also termed isinglass [meen vajram]. Dubbers for holding oils and other fluids are made of gelatine prepared by boiling cuttings of skins [chamrah] shaped on earthen moulds.—"c" Meen vajram, meaning fish glue, is Isinglass. Commercial term for the swimming or air-bag of the sturgeon, Accipenser huso, and of some other fishes. According to the form in which it is prepared it is termed leaf, staple, ribbon, or book isinglass. Soluble in water, insoluble in alcohol. Ichthyocolla of chemists. The following are Isinglass-yielding fish here:—Accipenser huso, Corvina miles, Lates calcarifer [cock up], Lobotes erate, Osteogeniosus militaris [cat keliroo], Otolithus biauritus, maculatus, ruber, versicolor, Polynemus indicus [screw-pine robaul], Pristipoma hasta [caukkan], Sciæna maculata [striped cuttalay].—"d" Vajram in the sense of adamantine is plant first term. Ex., where transl. is of second term:—Cannabis sativa (vajradru), tree; Euphorbia antiquorum (vajrakantaka), thorn;

Euphorbia tirucalli (vajradruma), tree; Euphorbia tortilis (vajratunda), stem; Vitis quadrangularis (vajrakanda), root, (vajravallí), creeper. See gloss. paragraphs.

VAJAH (وضع - vaza, Hind.). From (vaza, ar. to place down or remove). Deduction [minhah].

VAJEE (وجه - vajíh, Ar.). Support. Part of lacab; as Vajee ood deen, support of religion [ism].

VAKEEL (وكيل - vakíl, Hind.). From (vakala, ar. to entrust). Delegate, agent. An authorized attorney. A pleader in a court of justice.——Vakaulat (وكالت - vakálat, Hind.). Agency. Vakaulat nauma is a power-of-attorney [adhicaurapatram, adhicaurapatricay].

VAL (வல் - val, Tam.). Strength. Beauty.——Valam (வலம் - valam, Tam.). From right arm being stronger of the two. Cf. dacshinam, dexter. Right.——Valam (வளம் - valam, Tam.). Fertility.——Valamboory (வலம்புரி - valamburi, Tam.). Turned to the right, from screw-like pods or markings on fruits. Plant name common to:—Eriolæna candollei; Guazuma tomentosa; Helicteres isora. See gloss. paragraphs. For the valamboory chunk see under Chunk.——Valanaud (வளநாடு - valanádu, Tam.). From (valam, tam. fertility + nádu, tam. country). Ancient name of Tondaimundalam [q.v.].——Valanaudan (வளநாடன் - valanádan, Tam.). Owner of fertile tract. Title of Chola rulers. See vol. I (141).——Valangay (வலங்கை - valangai, Tam.). From (valam, tam. right + kai, tam. hand). Right-hand [yidangay]. Righthand faction. See vol. I (67), (69); II, 229 [jauty].——Valavan (வலவன் - valavan, Tam.). Means strong one. Vishnoo.——Valavan (வளவன் - valavan, Tam.). Owner of a fertile tract. The same as Valanaudan.——Valavanaud (വള്ളുവനാട് - valluvanátu, Mal.). See sep. title.——Valay (வலை - valai, Tam.). See sep. title.——Valiya (വലിയ - vâliya, Mal.). From (val, tam. powerful). Large. Plant first term, often joining two genera. Ex., where transl. is of second term:—Cordia obliqua (valiyavaniççi), diospyros embryopteris; Pupalia atropurpurea (valiyakotuvéli), plumbago zeylanica; Vitis latifolia (valiyaparpátakam), mollugo cerviana. See gloss. paragraphs.——Vallanang (வல்லணங்கு - vallanangu, Tam.). From (above + anangu, tam. woman). The malevolent goddess Bhadra cauly [q.v.].——Vallinam (வல்லினம் - vallinam, Tam.). Hard letter. One of the three tamul classes of letters [mey]. க், ச், ட், த், ப், ற். None of these can end a word. See vol. I (52); II, 205, 209.——Vilaugam (விளாகம் - világam, Tam.). From (vilar, tam. fertility + agam, tam. home). Suffix in place names. Also means battle-field.——Vullam (வல்லம் - vallam,* Tam.). From (val, tam. hillock + agam, tam. place). Sanscrit name (indrakílaparvata), meaning indran, the god + shiva + mountain; after a shrine of shiva erected by indran. Tam. also (valliyammainagaram), meaning vully ammay, the mother of caulacunta cholan, the founder + town.—"a" Deputy tahsildarry, Tanjore district. Pay Rs. 70.—"b" Town, Head-quarters of Collector, Registrar, Deputy tahsildar and Sub-magistrate; Tanjore dist., Tanjore tal.; pop. 8,097; acres 2,030; lat. 10° 43′; long. 79° 06′; from Combaconam S.W. 27 miles; from Madras S.S.W. 180 miles; from Mayavaram S.W. 48 miles; from Munnargoody W. 27 miles; from Negapatam W.S.W. 53 miles; from Tanjore S.W. 7 miles. On an elevated level. Considerable trade in dholl [common dholl] and ground nut [q.v.]. Strong fort built presumably by the Naick [q.v.] rajahs in the sixteenth or seventeenth century. Taken by the English for the Nawaub [q.v.] of the Carnautaca [q.v.] payeen ghaut [q.v.] in 1771, and remained in their occupation until its restoration to rajah Toolsajee together with the whole Tanjore country in 1776. Very few traces of the fort, except the moat, now remain. The population consists chiefly of Nuttamaudies [nuttamaur] and Lubbays [q.v.]; the former engaged in agriculture and the latter in trade. Old Shiva temple with a number of inscriptions. The temple tank is of great depth. Mission station. Quartz crystals [palingoo cull] found here are made into spectacles.——Vulloovan (வள்ளுவன் - valluvan, Tam.). From (vallu, tam. to be able). Pariah priest common to the Pariahs [q.v.] and Pullar [q.v.]. The Vulloovan is consulted when horoscopes [jenma puttricay] are to be cast. He wears the braminical thread or poonool [q.v.]. The Vulloova kone of Valavanaud formerly presided at the great assembly of Keralam [q.v.], when a new Permaul [q.v.] was chosen every twelfth year [mahamagham] to rule over the whole of Malayalam [jauty]. See vol. I (68).——Vully (வள்ளி - valli, Tam.). From (val, tam. beauty). Consort of Soobramanyan [q.v.]. The principal goddess in Triplicane, who as amman [q.v.] presides over the cshetram [q.v.] and to whom the temple compound belongs, is Vedavully; the god Partassauraty or vishnoo is only lodging there as her guest. In Trivellore the amman is called Canacavully; in chidambaram Pankajavully; in shreemooshnam Ambojavully. In combaconam there are two, Comalavully and Vijayavully. In munnargoody is a Champakavully. In tirmaul irpom sholay as well as in negapatam there is a Soondravully, &c. [matam]. Vully is female proper name among the lower orders; also suffix in female proper names, as Comalavully, Vijayavully [peyar].——Vundan (வண்டன் - vandan, Tam.). From (val, tam. strength). Mal. from (vattu, mal. round + valli, mal. creeper); from leaves. Mahr. also (máravéla), meaning exuberant creeper. Title otherwise Torique with portuguese, Pensbout with dutch. Botanically Cosmostigma racemosum, wight., asclepiadeæ [vricsham, 88]. Leaves large, rather coriaceous, smooth, ovâte-cordate acuminate, but sometimes rounded with an obtuse tip, readily distinguished by a group of small, brown, dusty, prominent glands at the junction of the petiole with the leaf; roots from ¼ to 1 inch in diameter, externally light brown and scabrous; fracture starchy and friable, a transverse section shows them to be composed of a central woody column and a very thick greyish-white cortex; in the circumference, and sparingly scattered through the root, light yellow brown hard cells are seen; the root has no taste, and a faint ipecacuanha-like [indian ipecacuanha] odour, which is more marked in the seeds; the latter are contained in a large, smooth, green follicle; large woody climber running over high trees. Has a medicinal reputation on west coast where its leaves cure ulcerous sores and root bark is administered internally in indigestion; root bark in five grain doses three times a day found an efficient cholagogue. The flowers [phool] are sweet and are eaten by the natives.——Vilaiyaudal (விளையாடல் - vilaiyádal, Tam.). From (vilaiyádu, tam. to sport) Sport of gods; in other words a miracle [leelay]. For the miracles of Shiva at Madura see Tirvilaiyaudal.——Vilaiyaudoo (விளையாடு - vilaiyádu, Tam.). To move in a circle. To sport.

VALAVANAUD (വള്ളുവനാട് - valluvanátu, Mal. walawanád *). From (valluvan, mal. member of the caste so called + nátu, mal. country) [val]. Talook; Malabar district. Tahsildar's pay Rs. 200. Area 963 square miles. Language Malayalam; in Attapaudy valley, Tamul. E. inland of district. Bounded north by Yernaud talook and portion of Neilgherry district; east by Coimbatore talook; south by Palghaut talook, Cochin state and Ponnany talook; and west by Ponnany and Yernaud talooks. Soil is chiefly red loam, except where black alluvial clay [calimunn] is found in the valleys. Extends along the foot of the Western ghauts [q.v.], many spurs of which run into it. A part of Aracoorchy amshom lies east of the ghaut and is known as Attapaudy valley, which contains the head waters of Bhawauny river. The area of this valley is about 200 square miles. The whole talook may be said to be one series of hills and dales, the latter being cultivable with paddy [q.v.], while the borders of the former are covered with gardens, containing jack [q.v.], areca [q.v.], and various other trees, in the midst of which stand the houses of the people. Madras railway passes through the talook. Staple produce is rice [q.v.], though areca [q.v.], jack [q.v.], and plantain [q.v.] are also grown largely and cocoanuts [q.v.] on a small scale. Principal rivers are Ponnany, which forms southern boundary of the talook; Malapooram or Anakkayam river, which forms northern boundary; and Munnarcaud or Tootha, tributary of Ponnany. All these are perennial and largely used for floating timber in rafts from hills to the coast during the rainy season and are also passable for small boats except in the hot season. VALAY (जाल - jála, San.; جال - jálá, Hind.; ಬಲೆ - bale, Can.; వల - vala, Tel.; വല - vala, Mal.; வலை - valai, Tam.). San. from (jala, san. water). Drav. from (val, to pull) [val]. Net. The following are the principal kinds of net made use of by Madras fishermen.——Caray valay (కందలము - kandhalamu, Tel.; അരിപ്പുവല - arippuvala, Mal.; கரைவலை - karaivalai, Tam.). Tel. from (kande, tel. roll of thread). Mal. from (ari, mal. to sift + vala, mal. net). Tam. from (karai, tam. shore + valai, tam. net). Dragnet. Consists of a cotton [q.v.] bag with fine meshes in the centre, and wide meshes of knotted coir [q.v.] rope at either end to lead the fish into the central bag. The upper ropes are supported by wooden floats, and the under ones kept down by stone sinkers, so as to make a kind of wall of rope. A great quantity of cordage is used for this net, which almost fills a small boat, being sometimes half a mile in length. One end is left on shore in the hands of a few helpers, and the other end carried to sea by boat, and then payed out in a semi-circle; after an hour or two it is dragged into shore by ten or twenty men and boys. The two ends of the net are equally pulled, boys shouting and beating the water in the middle to drive the fish into the bag as it nears the shore. Large quantities of fish are taken in these nets.——Cattoo valay (ఈడ్పుము - ídpumu, Tel.; ചവിട്ടുവല - chavittuvala, Mal.; கட்டுவலை - kattuvalai, Tam.). Tel. from (ídtsu, tel. to pull). Mal. from (chavittu, mal. to tread + vala, mal. a net). Tam. from (kattu, tam. to bind + valai, tam. net). A fishing net. Open at both ends but the narrow end is tied when in use. It is set in streams with the mouth distended by a hoop or by pegs.——Cayitt valay (കയറുവല - kayattuvala, Mal.; கயிற்றுவலை - kayittuvalai, Tam.). Means rope + net. For catching large fish in deep water or rapid streams.——Dobbood valay (దొబ్బుడువల - dobbuduvala, Tel.). From (dobbu, tel. to push + vala, tel. net). A triangular hand net pushed forward in still water.——Kyevalay (సన్నపువల - sannapuvala, Tel.; ചെറുവല - cheruvala, Mal.; கைவலை - kaivalai, Tam.). Tel. from (sannapu, tel. thin + vala, tel. net). Mal. from (cheru, mal. small + vala, mal. net). Tam. from (kai, tam. hand + valai, tam. net). Small casting net.——Oodoovalay (కట్లవల - katlavala, Tel.; உடுவலை - uduvalai, Tam.). Tel. (from kattu, tel. band + vala, tel. net). Tam. from (udu, tam. to encircle + valai, tam. net). This is about 40 yards in length; it is tied across a stream in shallow parts.——Poosalavalay (పూసలవల - púsalavala, Tel.). Tel. from (púsa, tel. bead + vala, tel. net). A dragnet with a large mesh.——Tevvalay (దయ్యపువల - dayyapuvala, Tel.; പെരുവല - peruvala, Mal.; தெவ்வலை - tevvalai, Tam.). Tel. from (dayyamu, tel. devil + vala, tel. net). Mal. from (peru, mal. large + vala, mal. net). Tam. from (tev, tam. opposing power + valai, tam. net). This is used in deep and shallow water and spreads to a distance of about 80 yards. It requires about twenty men to use it, who drag it along the water, gradually forming a semi-circle, when the fish thus imprisoned are captured by means of the Cayitt valay.——Veechvalay (తాటము - tátamu, Tel.; വീച്ചുവല - víççuvala, Mal.; வீச்சுவலை - víççuvalai, Tam.). Tel. from (tádu, tel. rope). Mal. from (víshu, mal. to cast + vala, mal. net). Tam. from (vísu, tam. to throw + valai, tam. net). The common cast-net of Southern india. It is circular, varying between nine and twelve yards in diameter, with its edges weighted with iron beads. It is made of stiff cotton [q.v.] thread. The fisherman who has to use the net gathers it in his hand and casts it on the surface of a pond or tank. The weight of the iron beads makes the edges of the net sink at once to the bottom, while the central network remains afloat. The fisherman then begins to take in the net, inch by inch, by slowly pulling up a cord attached to the centre of the net, and when the whole net is landed, the folds are well shaken and any fish which are found are taken out.

VALLABHAN (वल्लभ - vallabha, San.). Means master. Teloogoo bramin of the Veishnava [q.v.] sect, who lived in the sixteenth century, and established the worship of Baulagopaulan, the infant Krishnan [q.v.], associated with his mistress Raudhay [q.v.]. Amongst other articles of creed, he taught that privation forms no part of sanctity, and that it is the duty of the teacher and of his disciples to worship the deity, not in solitude and mortification, but in the pleasures of society and the enjoyment of the world. The Vallabhacharry sect is scarce here. The forehead marks are two red perpendicular lines joined by semi-circle at root of nose, with red spot [pottoo, tilacam] between [naumam]. See vol. I (85).——Vallabham (वल्लभ - vallabha, San.). Beloved or liked by. Plant second term. Ex., where transl. is of first term:—Mangifera indica (kámavallabha), cupid; Pentapetes phœnicea (arkavallabha), sun; Zizyphus jujuba (rájavallabha), king. See gloss. paragraphs.——Vallabha rajah (വല്ലഭരാജ - vallabharájá, Mal.). Means powerful king, but really sanscritized form of (valluva rájá), king of Valavanaud. The Vellattiry rajah, see vol. II, 101. Distinguish from Vallabhy.——Vallabhy (वल्लभी - vallabhí, San.). From (vallabha, san. chief). Dynasty. The name of an era [q.v.] which began in Samvat [q.v.] 375 or 319 A.D. S. indian form of Ballabhy [q.v.].

VAN (वन् - van, San.). To sound, seek.——Vamsha choodaumany (वंशचूडामणि - vamshachúdámani, San.). From (vamsha, san. family + chúdá, san. top-knot + mani, san. gem). Otherwise Vamsha shekharan. Paundyan [q.v.] king in whose time the Madura college [q.v.] was established. See vol. I (120).——Vamshadhavra (వంశధార - vamshadhára, Tel.). From (vamsha, san. bamboo, bambusa arundinacea, willd. + dhárá, san. stream). River; Vizagapatam dist., Jeypore zemindarry, Goonapore magisterial division. Rises in the Bissemcuttack hills and flows south-south-east into Ganjam district, which it enters at Battily in the Kimedy country. Hence it follows a south-easterly course, until it falls into the Bay of Bengal at Calingapatam. Total length about 170 miles, for nearly half of which it is navigable by country boats during the rains, but with difficulty only. Near its mouth the river is three-quarters of a mile broad. Unbridged.——Vamsham (वंश - vamsha, San.).—"a" Bamboo. Ancient linear measure. 10 hastams or cubits = 1 vamsham [alavay, 1f]. Approximate actual value, 1 vamsham = 15 feet.—"b" A line of pedigree, from its resemblance to the succession of joints in a bamboo [q.v.]. Cf. genealogical tree in english. Genealogy is one of the five topics [punchalutchanam] which every pooraunam [q.v.] is supposed to treat of. The other four are sargam, pratisargam, manwantaram and vamshaunoocharitam. The Aryans [q.v.] before they were divided into the castes [jauty] established by the Code of Menoo [q.v.] are spoken of as belonging to either the solar race Soorya vamsham, or the lunar race Chundra vamsham. The solar race, which is stated to have reigned subsequently in Oudh, was the more celebrated, and the Rama [q.v.] of the Ramayanam [q.v.] is its great hero.——Vamshyam (वंश्य - vamshya, San.). From (vamsha, san. spine). Vertebrata. Animals [jantoo] having a back-bone or vertebral column. The back-bone consists of a number of bony pieces called vertebræ, which, together with the bones of the head or cranium, form a strong longitudinal hollow axis for the reception and support of the brain and spinal cord. The other bones of the vertebrate skeleton consist of the ribs and sternum forming the hæmal arch, and those which afford support to, and those which enter into the composition of the limbs. The skeleton of all vertebrate animals is internal, and besides serving as a bony case for the protection of the organs of digestion, circulation, and respiration and the nervous system, it also forms a frame-work for the muscles by which the various movements of the limbs, &c., are effected. The limbs are never more than four in number, and they are always turned away from the side of the body on which the nervous system is located. The vertebrate sub-kingdom [oopaganam] includes in ascending scale the classes [vargam] of Fishes [matsyam], Batrachians [bhaicam], Reptiles [sarpy], Birds [pacshy], and Mammals [sastanam]. For invertebrate see Nirvamshyam.——Vana bhojanam (वनभोजन - vanabhójana, San.). Taking food in the forest, or by substitution in a tope [tope, tote] or garden. Luni solar [chaundramaunam] festival [pundigay, 6d] held on the full moon [powrnimay] in the 8th solar month Caurtigay [mausam], i.e., between 15th November and 13th December. Feast held in topes [q.v.] and gardens, in the month of November, with the object of increasing their produce. Also called Caurtigay powrnimay [q.v.].——Vana cookkootam (वनकुक्कुट - vanakukkuta, San.). From (vana, san. wood + kukkuta, san. cock). Scolopacidæ family, longirostres, grallatores, aves [pacshy, 41], of naturalists [jantoo]. Bill typically long, slender, in many, somewhat soft towards tip, in others hard throughout; wings lengthened, as are tertials; tail short; tarsus moderately long; toes slightly united by very short web. Plumage brown, of various shades above, white, more or less tinged brown or ashy beneath. Snipes [oollaun] and sand-pipers [oollangy] form a continued series, graduating into each other, with various modifications of the bill, as to length, strength, hardness, and form. Divided as follows.—"a" Scolopacinæ, snipes. Bill long, straight, rather soft, swollen at tip, which is gently bent over the lower mandible; tail varying in the number of feathers. Have the richest plumage of the family, dorsals and scapular feathers being often streaked with black and yellow. Bills are highly sensitive and soft at tip, and in drying shrivel up so as to appear punctured. Feed on worms and soft larvæ, chiefly nocturnal in habits, and have large eyes set far backwards, giving them peculiar physiognomy; mostly affect concealment, and some of them even frequent woods [oollaun].—"b" Limosinæ, godwits. Bill much lengthened, soft at tip, straight or slightly turned upwards; mostly of large size; plumage plain; distinct web between the outer toes. Approach snipes [oollaun] in form of bill and softness of tip, differ much in coloration, wanting their rich plumage. Frequent open ground, not affecting concealment; are diurnal.—"c" Numeninæ, curlews. Bill very long, curved downwards; differ from Godwits in their curved beaks, the summer plumage not varying from the winter garb.—"d" Tringinæ, stints, &c. Bill short or moderate, soft, and somewhat flexible, occasionally dilated or curved; wings long; tail short; legs moderately short; toes usually divided to base, or with very rudimentary web. Differ from Godwits by shorter bill and legs; and from Sand-pipers by shorter and softer bills, combined with greater delicacy of tact, which is equal to that of Godwits, but less than that of the Snipes. Tendency to associate in flocks; feed in marshes, paddy-fields, edges of tanks, rivers, &c., affect concealment or cover more perhaps than the sand-pipers [oollangy]. Live on soft insects [poochy], worms [keerah], larvæ, small crustacea [kavachiny] and molluscs [chippy]. Most have marked change of plumage in summer, becoming darker above and rufous beneath; and in one species the male, which is larger than the female, is ornamented with a fine ruff.—"e" Totaninæ, sandpipers. Bill moderately long, slender, with tip hard and pointed, slightly ascending in some; tarsi slender, rather long; feet elongate; outer toe joined by web to the middle one. Change of plumage in summer slight in some, in others to black or dusky beneath and not to rufous. Sand-pipers run along the muddy and pebbly banks of rivers or lakes and seas, and pick up various small crustacea [kavachiny] and mulluscs [chippy] generally from the surface of the ground, not inserting their bills deeply like snipes [oollaun] and stints. Several are solitary habits, a few gregarious; are all winter visitants to India, breeding in Northern and Central europe and Asia, laying four eggs, green or greenishwhite with numerous spots [oollangy].——Vanajam (वनज - vanaja, San.). The water-born. A lotus [nelumbo].——Vanam (वन - vana, San.; వనం - vanam, Tel.; വനം - vanam, Mal.; வனம் - vanam, Tam.). From (van, san. to sound). Wilderness; uncultivated ground surrounding a town. VARAGOO (वरक - varaka, San.; ارزن - arzan, Pers.; چینا - chíná, Hind.; رالہ - rálah, Dec.; ಬರಗು - baragu, Can.; ಸಾಮೆ - sáme, Too.; వరగ - varaga, Tel.; കുറമ്പുല്ല - kúranpullu, Mal.; வரகு - varagu, Tam.). Title from tamul. San. from (vara, san. desirable). Mal. from (kúran, mal. sharp + pullu, mal. grass). Tam. means dry crop. San. also (shyámaka), meaning black [shaumay]; (chína), meaning china grain, as foreign; (anu), meaning small. Hind. also (kodro), meaning paspalum scrobiculatum, linn. [khoda]; (chínághás), meaning panicum grass; (wári), from sanscrit; (sáwán), meaning panicum miliare, lam.; (shámakh), from sanscrit. Can. also (navane) [tinay]; (sháme) [shaumay]. Tel. also (barigelu). Tam. also (panivaragu), meaning dew + the plant; (kádaikkanni), meaning quail + eye; (shámai) [shaumay]; (kadavuni), by corruption. Title otherwise Chenna, Common millet, Indian millet, Indian oats, Little millet, Pany varagoo, Quail eye, True millet, Wild kidney bean. Botanically Panicum [priyangoo] miliaceum, linn., graminaceæ [vricsham, 156]. Alias Panicum asperrimum, milium. Cereal; erect, annual, about 2 feet high, with rather broad, hairy leaves and a much divided nodding panicle; seeds oval, slightly compressed, brilliant, about a line in length, bark or envelope blackish, brown or fair, parenchyme, white, of sweet taste; native of arabia; slow growing; needs but little rain. Cultivated as dry crop; grows best on an elevated, dry, light, rich soil, and is generally sown after the rains [mazhay]; ground prepared in south in auny [mausam] or june, on coromandel in ashaudham or july and shrauvanam or august; twice or thrice ploughed; seed sown in south in audy or july, on coromandel in ashaudham or july and shrauvanam or august; sown broadcast and ploughed in, or by a seed drill [gorroo] and the soil gone over with a harrow [goontaca]; while under growth no special treatment is necessary; full grown crop is ¾ yard high; cut after six or eight months by sickles; carried to the threshing floor [calam] and trodden by bullocks [maud], and buffaloes [khoolgah]; grain is separated from the chaff by winnowing pans; produce brought to market three months after cutting; average price, 36 imperial seers for 1 rupee. Lands that have been under zonna [cholum], sadza [bajrah], indigo [q.v.], or corra [tinay], are generally prepared for varagoo; it commands the greater portion of the ryot's labor and resources, for almost all the manure [yeroo] goes to this crop, and the land is invariably well prepared; crop seldom met with in poorer soils. The grain is digestible and nutritious; inferior to panicum italicum, linn. [tinay], and fetches lower price; boiled and eaten with milk [paul] and sugar [q.v.]; it contains about nine per cent. of nitrogenous matter and fifty-nine of starch; alimentary, but the pericarp is with much difficulty separated from the grain; here deprived of the husk and used whole as rice, or ground into meal and flour and made into bread; in england it is used for feeding small birds; makes tolerable cattle fodder [ghaus] for village cattle [maud]. There is a Tamul proverb:—மக்கள் கள்வம் வரகுபதரும் சரி—"the dishonest tricks of children "and the husks of varagoo are alike;" both are obstinate.——Wild varagoo (ಕಾಡುಬರಗುಹುಲ್ಲು - kádubaraguhullu, Can.; கொறளி - korani, Tam.). Can. from (kádu, can. wild + baragu, can. panicum miliaceum, linn. + hullu, can. grass). Botanically Panicum [priyangoo] remotum, retz., graminaceæ [vricsham, 156]. Alias Panicum petiveri. Culm branched, creeping at the base, ascending, apex slender; leaves linear-acuminate, and with the sheaths glabrous; raceme decompound, lax, partial ones alternate, thin, secund scabrous; spikelets twin, distant, oval, puberulous; pedicels longish, naked; glumes unequal, obtuse; lower one twice shorter; neuter floret two-valved; hermaphrodite one oblong, muticous, transversely lightly waved and wrinkled, striated lengthways, equalling the upper glume. Moderately good fodder, but unsuited for hay [ghaus].

VARAM (వరము - varamu, Tel.; வாரம் - varam, Tam.). From (pura, san. town). Suffix in place names, as Dharmavaram, charity + town. Distinguish from Varam [var], best.

VARATAM (वरट - varata, San.). From (vara, san. best + at, san. to go); from gait [var]. Anatidæ family, lamellirostres, natatores, aves [pacshy, 50], of naturalists [jantoo]. Bill broader at base than high, shallow, depressed, of nearly equal width throughout, wider at tip; nostrils sub-basal or nearly median; tarsus moderately short, set far back on body. Differ from family anseridæ [hamsam] by possessing a longer, shallower bill and shorter tarsus, and having the lamellæ of the bill more highly developed. Sexes usually differ much in color; males of many assume female plumage for a short period immediately after breeding season, resuming their proper coloring at autumn moult; feed partly on vegetable matter and partly on minute worms, larvæ, &c. Divided as follows.—"a" Anatinæ, true ducks and teal; hind toe not bordered by a membrane; head of moderate size; neck long and more or less slender; bill usually of even width throughout, or wider at tip, not raised at base; legs set a little more forward than in the next group, and they can walk tolerably well; wings of most are long, and they fly rapidly.—"b" Fuligulinæ, pochards, sea ducks or diving ducks; hind toe short, bordered by more or less wide web; wings shorter than in last sub-family; feet large, web reaching to very end of toes, and wide; tail generally short, rounded, somewhat wedged; have larger head and shorter neck than true ducks; walk badly in consequence of very backward position of legs, but swim well and dive freely; only one moult; many are exclusively marine ducks, others partially; few are mostly fresh water, and to this last section belong all the indian species. The species of the two sub-families best known to the natives are shown below.——Common teal (مرغابی - murghábí, Pers.; پانی کی بدق - pánikíbadak, Hind. and Dec.; చిలువ - chiluva, Tel.; ଶିଳେଚୋଡ଼ି - silechodai, Oor.; கிளுவை - kiluvai, Tam.). Pers. from (murgh, pers. fowl + áb, pers. water). Hind. from (pání, hind. water + badak, hind. duck). Tam. from (kila, tam. to rise). Tam. also (shiravi), meaning winged. Querquedula crecca, anatinæ, anatidæ [varatam], lamellirostres, natatores [pacshy, 50], of naturalists. Male, crown of head, cheeks, front and sides of neck ferruginous brown; on sides of head, inclosing eye, large patch of deep glossy green, passing off backwards to nape in form of broad band; back and scapulars with transverse undulating lines of black and white, some longer scapulars creamy-yellow, with portion of their outer webs velvet black; tail hair-brown, feathers edged white; wing-coverts brown, tinged grey; speculum, formed by tips of secondary coverts, deep green in middle, velvet black at sides, bordered above by broad yellowish white bar; chin black; lower part of neck in front, and breast reddish or creamy-white, with round black spots; abdomen white; lower tail-coverts blackish-brown, bordered at sides with yellowish-white; bill blackish; irides hazel-brown; legs greyish brown; length 14½ inches; female has head, neck and all upper parts dusky-brown, feathers broadly edged pale reddish brown; throat, cheeks and band behind eyes yellowish-white, spotted black; speculum as in male, and under parts yellowish-white. One of the most abundant as well as earliest visitors, frequents both tanks and rivers, often in immense flocks, flight amazingly rapid, strictly night-feeding, large numbers netted or caught. Sometimes caught alive by man wading with head above water concealed in large earthen chatty [q.v.].——Domestic duck (वरट - varata, San.; بط - bat, Ar., اردك - urdak, Pers.; بدك - badak, Hind. and Dec.; బాతు - bátu, Tel.; വാത്ത് - váttu, Mal.; சீமைவாத்து - shímaiváttu, Tam.). Tam. from (shímai, tam. european + váttu, tam. goose). Anas domestica, anatinæ, anatidæ [varatam], lamellirostres, natatores, aves [pacshy, 50], of naturalists [jantoo]. Plumage very variable, greatly differing from the wild duck [q.v.], but the males retain the curled feathers of the tail found in the wild ones. In form the domestic duck is more dull and less elegant than the wild, domestication having deprived it of the lofty gait, long tapering neck, and sprightly eyes.——Golden eye duck (నల్లచిలువ - nallachiluva, Tel.). Tel. from (nalla, tel. black + chiluva, tel. wild duck). Title otherwise Tufted duck. Fuligula cristata, fuligulinæ, anatidæ [varatam], lamellirostres, natatores [pacshy, 50], of naturalists. Alias Anas fuligula. Head and neck, including the long pendent, silky crest, glossy black with green and purple reflections; back wings, and rump black; rest of the lower parts pure white; the vent black; speculum formed by the secondaries, white, with a narrow greenish-black edge; tertials glossy green. Bill dark bluish grey, the tip black; irides golden yellow, leg leaden, the webs dusky. The female has the colors somewhat duller and more brown; the crest not so long; speculum smaller, and the lower parts spotted with brown. The young want the crest, and have the base of the bill and region of the eyes varied with white. Very common; late in leaving; frequents open tanks keeping away from edges; generally found in small or moderately sized parties.——Wild duck (جنگلی بدق - janglíbadak, Hind. and Dec.; నీల్లబాతు -níllabátu, Tel.; நீர்வாத்து - nírváttu, Tam.). Hind. from (janglí, hind. wild + badak, hind. duck). Tel. from (níllu, tel. water + bátu, tel. duck). Tam. from (nír, tam. water + váttu, tam. goose). Title otherwise Mallard. Anas boschas, anatinæ, anatidæ [varatam], lamellirostres, natatores, aves [pacshy, 50], of naturalists [jantoo]. Male, bill yellowish green; head and neck of a deep shining green; a white collar round the neck; part of the breast and shoulders of a deep vinous chestnut; breast and belly gray, marked with speckled lines of a dusky hue; scapulars white, elegantly barred with brown; spot on the wing rich purple; tail feathers twenty-four; four middle deep black, strongly curled upwards; irides red or hazel-brown; legs orange-yellow, length 24 inches; 2½ pounds in weight; female differs greatly from the male; very good eating.

VARAUHAM (वराह - varáha, San.). From (vrih, san. to root up). A boar [soor]. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar].——Varahah (వరహా - varahá, Tel.). Means boar. Pagoda [q.v.]; teloogoo form. 2 maudas = 1 varahah [naunyam, 2b]. Approximate actual value, 1 varahah = 4 rupees. Not current. Same as kurruck varahah or pagoda. Compare San. dharanam, Hind. hoon, Tam. varauhan. See vol. I, 609.——Varauha avatar (वराहावतार - varáhávatára, San.). From (above + avatára, san. incarnation). The third or boar incarnation of Vishnoo [avatar]. The Vishnoo pooraunam [q.v.] thus succinctly describes it:—"At the close of the Pudma calpam [q.v.] the supreme "Narayanan [q.v.], the incomprehensible, the sovereign of all "creatures, lying within the form of Bramha [q.v.], awoke from "his sleep of night, and beheld the universe void. Then he the "lord, concluding that within the waters lay the earth, and being "desirous to raise it up, created another form for that purpose; "and as in preceding Calpams [q.v.] he had assumed the shape "of a fish [matsyam] or a tortoise [coormam], so in this he took "the form of a boar, and plunged into the ocean; while the "goddess earth, beholding him thus descending to the sub-"terraneous regions, bowed in devout adoration and glorified "the god. Then being praised by the earth, he emitted a low "murmuring sound, like the chanting of the Saumavedam [q.v.]; "and the mighty boar [jungly soor], whose eyes were like "the lotus [nelumbo], and whose body, vast as the Neelam "mountain, was of the dark color of the lotus leaves, uplifted "upon his ample tusks the earth from the lowest regions." Another Veishnava legend tells the story as follows. The three persons of the trinity [trimoorty] at one time disputed as to who had the pre-eminence. Bramha [q.v.], who, from the summit of the lotus where he was seated, saw nothing in the universe, believed himself the first of creatures. He descended into the stem of the lotus, and finding at last Narayanan or Vishnoo asleep, he asked him who he was. "I am the first-"born," replied Vishnoo. Bramha disputed this title and even attacked him. But during the struggle, Mahadevan or Shiva threw himself between them, saying, "It is I who am the "first-born. Nevertheless I will recognise as my superior him "who is able to see the summit of my head or the sole of my "feet." Vishnoo, as hidden or infernal moon, transforming himself into a wild boar, pierced through the ground and penetrated to the infernal regions, where he saw the feet of Mahadevan. On his return Mahadevan saluted Vishnoo as the first born of the gods. Some say that as the cause of this avatar an asooran [q.v.] named Hiranyaucshan stole the vedams [q.v.], rolled up the earth as a mat, and hid himself with the vedams in the sea. Vishnoo took the form of a boar, slew the asooran, recovered the vedams, and reinstated the world. This has the appearance of relating to some large national struggle [matam].——Varauha mihiran (वराहमिहिर - varáhamihira, San.). From (above + mihira, san. sprinkler). Means male boar. An astronomer, one of the nine gems of the court of Vicramadityan [navaratnam]. Born at Oojjein A.D. 530 and died in 587. Author of Brihat samhitay [q.v.] and Brihad jautacam [q.v.]. On the moon, he says:—"One-half of the moon [chundran], "whose orbit [cacsham] lies between the sun [sooryan] and the "earth [bhoomy], is always bright by the sun's rays; the other "half is dark, by its own shadow [chauyay]; like the two sides "of a pot standing in the sunshine." On eclipses, he says:— "The true explanation of the phenomena is this: in an eclipse "[grahanam] of the moon he enters into the earth's shadow "[chauyay]; in a solar eclipse the same things happen to the "sun. Hence the commencement of a lunar eclipse does not "take place from the west side, nor that of a solar eclipse from "the east." For more details about eclipses according to him see Rahoo. He said that solar spots indicate famine in the land.——Varauhan (வராகன் - varágan, Tam.). Means boar, having impression of vishnoo in that incarnation. Hoon [q.v.] of mahomedans. Pagoda [q.v.] coin of english. The most celebrated coin symbol of Southern india. Originally the badge of the Chalookya [q.v.] families of Calyaun and Rajahmundry, it passed from them to the later Cholans, was subsequently adopted by the Royer [q.v.] dynasty [raj] of Vijianugger, and is still found on the seals of some of the petty local chiefs in the Carnatic [q.v.]. In teloogoo the abbreviated form of expressing this coin in writing is by the letter ×, from the first letter of gadyaunakam as ×ం, meaning one pagoda. The Canarese mode is ಗು the first syllable of ಗುಳಿಗೆ gulige, ancient name of small spherical coins. In Tamul, வ the first syllable of the present word. The following is the scale of the varauhan:—22½ fanams = 1 varauhan [naunyam, 2a]. Approximate actual value, 1 varauhan = 3½ rupees. Not current; mostly used in book transactions by the grain merchants at madras. Same as Hind. hoon; Pagoda; Star pagoda. Compare kurruck varahah for pagoda used in circars [q.v.] and ceded districts [q.v.].——Varauhaniday (வராகனிடை - varáganidai, Tam.). From (varagán, tam. pagoda + edai, tam. weight). Weight of a pagoda [q.v.]. Tamul goldsmith's weight. 9 panatookkams = 1 varauhaniday; 10 varauhaniday = 1 pollum [niray, 3a]. Approximate actual value, 1 varauhaniday = 54 grains. Very commonly used. Compare Hind. miscal, Tam. cutlay pagoda.

——Varauhanuddy (వరాహనది - varáhanadí, Tel.; வராகநதி - varáganathi, Tam. varáhanadi *). From (above + nadí, san. river). Tel. also (pandéru), meaning hog + river.—"a" River; Vizagapatam dist., Golcondah, Sarwasiddhy tals. Also called Pundair. Rises in the Eastern ghauts [q.v.] 20 miles north-west of Narsapatam, takes a south-easterly course for about 45 miles and falls into the sea with the Shaurada nuddy at Wattauda. Extensively used for irrigation. There are eight anicuts [q.v.]; three belonging to Government, four to proprietors, and the Gubbauda anicut 18 miles from head of the river and within 1½ miles of Narsapatam.—"b" River; South arcot dist., Tindivanam and Villoopooram tals. Also known as Shuncaraubharany and Jinjee. Issues from the Malayanore tank, and past Jinjee receives the Tondayaur and Paumbayaur, and flows into the sea by two mouths near Ariancooppam and Chinna viraumputnam.—"c" River; Madura dist., Periyacoolam tal. Tributary of the Veigay. Rises in the Upper pulneys on marshy land called Berijam near Fort Hamilton, irrigates the village of Tencaray and Taumaray coolam by an anicut taken off at the foot of the hills; and after being joined by Cullaur and Pambaur waters the village of Mailmungalam and three others, emptying itself into the Veigay at Goollapooram.——Verapoly (വരാപ്പുഴ - varáppuzha, Mal.). From (above + puzha, mal. river). Village, Island; Travancore state; Cottayam division, Paravore tal.; pop. 8,613; lat. 10° 4′; long. 76° 19′ E.; from Paravore S.S.E. 7 miles; from Cochin N.E. 8 miles; from Trivandrum N.N.W. 116 miles; from the sea E. 5 miles. Important place near the northern frontier. Formerly belonged to Cochin. Seat of one of the earliest Roman Catholic missions in India. Gives its name to the Vicariate Apostolic of Verapoly established in 1659. The Archbishop resides here. Extensive buildings along the river consist of schools, convents, &c. Head-quarters of the Carmelite mission. Church of St. Joseph, commenced about 1673, is a miniature representation of St. Peter's at Rome.

VARAUNGY (ورانگی - varángi, Mahl.). Female assembly. A division of a village in Minicoy for the purposes of administration. Boys till they are old enough to join the male assemblies are admitted to this [attiry].

VARAWA (వరవ - várava, Tel.; കതിരാൻ - katirán, Mal.). Mal. from (katir, mal. beauty). The genus Teuthis, teuthididæ, acanthopterygii, teleostei, pisces [matsyam, 8], of naturalists [jantoo]. The species best known to the natives are java and vermiculata.

VARAY (வரை - varai, Tam.). Hill. Varayaud is ibex [saddle back]; the specific name is spelt Warrayato.

VARGAM (वर्ग - varga, San.). From (vrij, san. to exclude). In natural history a class. For category, see Padaurtam; for elementary substance, see Dravyam; for matter, see Bhootam; for organic and inorganic, see Indriyam and Anindriyam; for organic kingdom, see Ganam [jantoo, vricsham]; for organic class, see present head; for organic order, see Santaunam; for organic family, see Coolam; for organic genus, see Jauty; for organic species, see Bhaidam. Oopa prefixed to either of the above means a sub-head. For inorganic minerals, see Dhautoo. Vargam also means the square of a number.——Dashavargam (दशवर्ग - dashavarga, San.). The ten ways of astrologically dividing the ecliptic [craunty mundalam].—"a" The following are the ten. Raushy [q.v.] is a sign; for the lords of raushies see diagram under raushy, k. Horah; each sign is divided into two equal parts of 15° each; the two horahs of the odd signs are respectively the solar and lunar horahs or have sooryan [q.v.] and chundran [q.v.] respectively for their lords, while the two of the even signs are respectively the lunar and solar horahs or have chundran and sooryan respectively for their lords; according to gargan and others the lords of the two horahs are respectively the lords of the sign and of the eleventh sign. Dricaunam; each sign is divided into three equal parts of 10° each; the lords of the dricaunams of a sign are respectively the lords of that sign, of the fifth sign and of the ninth sign; according to gargan and others the lords of the dricaunams are respectively the lords of the sign, of the twelfth sign and of the eleventh sign from it. Navaumshams; each sign [raushy] being divided here into nine equal parts and there being twelve signs, there are in all 12 × 9 or 108 such divisions in the ecliptic [craunty mundalam]; the ecliptic contains 27 × 4 or 108 stellar quarters or nacshatrapaudams [nacshatram]; it follows therefore that a navaumsham is equal to a nacshatrapaudam, that is one-fourth of a lunar mansion; the 108 navaumshams beginning from the first point of aries [maisham] bear the same names as the twelve signs of the zodiac counted over and over again; the first navaumsham of maisham [q.v.] is maisham itself, that of vrishabham [q.v.] is macaram [q.v.], that of mitoonam [q.v.] is toolaum [q.v.], and that of carcatacam [q.v.] is carcatacam itself; the same order holds for the 4 signs from simham [q.v.] to vrishchicam [q.v.] and for the 4 from dhanoos [q.v.] to meenam [q.v.]; in other words the four sets of trikonam or triangular signs begin with the same navaumshams; that is the trikonam signs of maisham, simham, dhanoos begin with the navaumsham of maisham; vrishabham, canyay, macaram begin with the navaumsham of macaram; mitoonam, toolaum, coombham begin with the navaumsham of toolaum; and carcatacam, vrishchicam, meenam begin with the navaumsham of carcatacam. The last navaumshams of catacam or carcatacam, vrishchicam and meenam are known as ricsha sandhies [ricsham]; the lords of the navaumshams are the same as the lords of the raushies, see the square diagram under raushy. Dwaudashaumshams; the twelve parts into which each sign is divided bear the same names as those of the signs of the zodiac; the name of the first dwaudashaumsham of a particular sign is the name of the sign itself; so that the twelve dwaudashaumhams of maisham are maisham, vrishabham, mitoonam, &c., ending with meenam; those of vrishabham are vrishabham, mitoonam, carcatacam, &c., ending with maisham; those of mitoonam are mitoonam, carcatacam, simham, &c., ending with vrishabham and so on. Trimshaumsham is division of a sign of the zodiac into thirty equal parts, each part being a degree [bhaugam]; their lords are as below; five, five, eight, seven and five degrees of these thirty divisions are respectively those of mars, saturn, jupiter, mercury and venus in the odd signs; in the even signs their order is reversed; the odd signs are maisham, mitoonam, simham, toolaum, dhanoos, and coombham, the even signs are vrishabham, carcatacam, canyay, vrishchicam, macaram and meenam; in the odd signs the first five degrees are the trimshaumsham of mars [coojan, mungalan]; the next five are those of saturn [shany]; the next eight are those of jupiter [brihaspaty]; the next seven are those of mercury [boodhan]; and the last five are those of venus [shoocran]; in the even signs the first five are those of venus; the next seven are those of mercury; the next eight are those of jupiter [brihaspaty]; the next five are those of saturn [shany]; and the last five are those of mars. Saptamaumsham is division of a sign of the zodiac into seven equal parts; the lords of the 7 parts of the odd signs are respectively the lords of the 7 signs of the zodiac commencing from the odd sign; and the lords of the 7 parts of the even signs are respectively the lords of the 7 signs of the zodiac beginning from the 7th sign from the even sign. Dashaumsham is division of a sign of the zodiac into ten equal parts; the lords of the 10 parts of the odd signs are respectively the lords of the 10 signs of the zodiac commencing from the odd sign, and the lords of the 10 parts of the even signs are respectively the lords of the 10 signs commencing from the 10th sign from the even sign. Shodashaumsham is division of a sign of the ecliptic into 16 equal parts; the lords of the 16 parts of the odd signs are the lords of the 12 signs commencing from the odd sign together with bramha, vishnoo, roodran, and sooryan; the lords of the 16 parts of the even signs are the lords of the 12 signs commencing from the even signs together with sooryan, roodran, vishnoo and bramha. Shashtyaumsham is division of a sign of the ecliptic into 60 equal parts; the 60 parts of the odd signs are those of 1, ghoram; 2, raucshasam; 3, devam; 4, coobairam; 5 racshognam; 6, kinnaram; 7, bhrashtam; 8, coclagnam; 9, garalam; 10, agny; 11, mayam; 12, pretapooreesham; 13, apaumpaty; 14, devaganesham; 15, calay; 16, ahy; 17, amritaumsham; 18, chundram; 19, mridoo; 20, comalam; 21, pudmam; 22, lutchmy; 23, vaugeesham; 24, digambaram; 25, devam; 26, aurdram; 27, calinausham; 28, cshiteeshwaram; 29, camalaucauram; 30, mundautmajam; 31, mrityoo; 32, caulam; 33, dauvaugny; 34, ghoram; 35, aumayam; 36, cantacam; 37, shooddham; 38, amritam; 39, poornachundram; 40, vishapradigdham; 41, calinausham; 42, mookhyam; 43, vamshacshayam; 44, ootpatacam; 45, calahroopam; 46, sowmyam; 47, mridoo; 48, soosheetalam; 49, damshtraucaraulam; 50, indoomookham; 51, praveenam; 52, caulaugny; 53, dandauyoodham; 54, nirmalam; 55, shoobham; 56, ashoobham; 57, atisheetalam; 58, shooddham; 59, payodhibhramanam; 60, indooraikhay; and the 60 parts of the even signs are the above in the inverse order, that is to say, beginning from indooraikhay and ending in ghoram.—"b" A planet which at any time occupies what is considered his particular house [raushy], or his horah, or his dricaunam, or his navaumsham, or his dwaudashaumsham, &c., according to the above scheme, is said to be in his vargam. A planet occupies two vargams when he is in his house or raushy and in his horah, i.e., when he is lord of the sign as well as of the horah division of the sign. So three vargams, when planet is in his raushy, his horah and his dricaunam, i. e., when he is lord of the sign, of the horah division of that sign and of the dricaunam division of the same sign. And so on similarly. A planet occupying two vargams is said to be in paurijautaumsham; if he occupies three vargams, he is said to be in oottamaumsham; if four vargams, in gopooraumsham; if five vargams, in simhausanaumsham; if six, in parvataumsham; if seven or eight, in devalocaumsham; if nine, in eirauvataumsham; and if ten, in veishaishicaumsham.—"c" The vargottama or best places are:—the first navaumshams of the four movable signs maisham, carcatacam, toolaum, and macaram; the 5th navaumshams of the four fixed signs, vrishabham, simham, vrishchicam, and coombham; the 9th navaumshams of the four movable and fixed signs, mitoonam, canyay, dhanoos, and meenam [raushy].——Varjyam (वर्ज्य - varjya, San.). From (vrij, san. to abandon). A certain unlucky portion of a nacshatram [q.v.]. See Tyaujyam.

VARNAM (वर्ण - varna, San.). From (varn, san. to color).—"a" Color. The Hindoos enumerate five colors, viz., white, black, red, golden and green. The twelve zodiacal signs [raushy] are as to color respectively:—Maisham red, Vrishabham white, Mitoonam of the color of the parrot [totah], Carcatacam of the color of pautaly or trumpet flower [pauthiry], Simham black white, Canyay variegated in color, Toolaum black, Vrishchicam of gold color, Dhanoos of the color of the husk of paddy [q.v.], Macaram white red, Coombham of the color of mongoose [q.v.], and Meenam of the color of fish. Similarly Sooryan [q.v.] is of a red and dark-brown color, Chundran [q.v.] is white, Coojan [q.v.] is both red and white, Boodhan [q.v.] is green like the color of the bent grass [hurrially], Brihaspaty [q.v.] is yellow like molten gold, Shoocran [q.v.] is neither very white nor very black, and Shany is black [q.v.]; these planetary colors are useful in ascertaining the color of stolen articles and in determining the color of the flowers to be used in the worship of the planets [graham].—"b" Caste. The word used in the older Sanscrit writings as applied to the four principal divisions. The Chatoorvarnam, or four castes, as found established in the code of Menoo [q.v.] are:—Bramin [q.v.], the sacerdotal and learned class, the members of which may be, but are not necessarily, priests [acharry, purohit]; Cshatriya [q.v.], the regal and warrior caste; Veisya [q.v.], trading and agricultural caste; Shoodra [q.v.], servile caste, whose duty is to serve the other three. The first three castes are called dwijan [q.v.], that is to say, twice-born or regenerate, from their being entitled to investiture [oopanayanam] with the sacred thread [poonool] which effects a second birth. The Bramins maintain that their caste alone remains, that the other three have been lost or degraded, and it is generally believed that there are no pure Cshatriyas or Veisyas now existing. The numerous castes which have sprung up from the intercourse of people of different castes or from other causes are called Varnasancaram, [q.v.] or mixed castes [anooloma, pratiloma]. See vol. I (65) [jauty]. There is a stanza from Shivavaucyam [q.v.]:—சாதியாவதேதடா சலந்திரண்டநீரல்லோ, பூதமைந்துமொன்றல்லோ புலன்களைந்துமொன்றல்லோ, காதுவார்புரிகாறைகம்பி சூடகம்பொன்னொன்றல்லோ, சாதிபேதமோதுகின்ற தன்மையென்னதன்மையே.—"what, o wretch, is caste? is not water an accumulation of fluid particles? are not five elements [bhootam] and the five senses [indriyam] one? are not the several ornaments of the neck, the breast, and the feet equally gold? what then is the peculiar quality declared by difference in caste?"——Vanney (వన్నె - vanne, Tel.). From (varna, san. color). Touch of precious metals [loham, mautt]. Compare Carat.——Varnamaulay (अक्षरन्यास - aksharanyása, San.; వర్ణమాల - varnamála, Tel.; അക്ഷരമാല - aksharamála, Mal.; நெடுங்கணக்கு - nedunganakku, Tam.). Title and Tel. means letter + series. San. from (akshara, san. letter + nyása san. placing). Mal. from (akshara, san. letters + málá, san. garland). Tam. means long + account. Alphabet. See vol. I (52); II, 205, 209 [bhaushay, yezhoot]. The following table shows the alphabets of, or connected with, southern india, set opposite the roman alphabet. The order of the letters is that of the Sanscrit [q.v.]:—

The Cooral says:—அகர முதல வெழுத்தெல்லா மாதி பகவன் முதற்றே யுலகு—"as all letters have the letter A "for their first, so the world has the eternal God for its first." And again:—எண்ணென்ப வேனை யெழுத்தென்ப விவ்வி ரண்டுங் . கண்ணென்ப வாழுமுயிர்க்கு—"letters and "numbers are the two eyes of man."——Varnasancaram (वर्णसङ्कर - varnasankara, San.). From (above + sam, san. together + kri, san. to do). A mixed caste, as from a Bramin father and Shoodra mother, or reverse [anooloma, jauty, pratiloma].——Vunnam (வண்ணம் - vannam, Tam.). From (varna, san. color). A kind of Tamul verse, consisting of eight equal stanzas.

VAROONAM (वरुण - varuna, San.). Title means water; water plant [var]. Title otherwise Osier, Sallow, Willow. Botanically the Salix genus, saliçaceæ [vricsham, 126]. Trees or shrubs, natives of north temperate regions; leaves undivided, notched at the edges or even, stalked and varying in shape from linear to round; wood white, soft, smooth, light; bark bitter; reproduced by cuttings; growth rapid. The species best known to the natives are shown below. The common english osier is Viminalis.——Aromatic willow (خلاف - khiláf, Ar.; بيد مشك - bedmushk, Pers., Hind. and Dec.). Title from flowers. Ar. means contrary; from its growing in a locality other than its origin, having been carried thither by torrents. Pers. from (bed, pers. cane, calamus rotang, linn. + mushk, pers. musk). Pers. also (khiláfibalkhí), meaning balkh hedge willow. Title otherwise British sallow, Goat willow, Great sallow, Hedge willow, Musk cane. Botanically Salix [varoonam] caprea, linn., salicaceæ [vricsham, 126]. Tree 25-30 feet, flowering before leafing; trunk attaining 3-4 feet girth, often a shrub; leaves 2-4 inches, dark green above, margins often recurved, base cuneate rounded or cordate; male catkins very stout, sweet-scented; female 2-3 inches; capsule ½ inch. Flowers yield, on distillation, an aromatic attar [q.v.] which has stimulant properties; in pharm. non-officinal.——Indian willow (वरुण - varuna, San.; वाळुंज - válumja, Mahr.; پانی جما - pánÍjamá, Hind.; جمتی کی بیل - jamtíkíbel, Dec.; ನಿರವಂಜಿ - niravanji, Can.; ఏటిపాల - étipála, Tel.; ആററുപാല - áttupála, Mal.; ஆற்றுப்பாலை - áttuppálai, Tam.). San. means water, hence plant growing near it. Hind. from (pání, hind. water + jamá, hind. close). Dec. from (jamtí, hind. the willow creeper, salix + bel, hind. creeper) [jamtee]. Can. from (níru, can. water + anju, can. to be alarmed). Tel. from (éru, tel. river + pála, tel. milky plant). Mal. from (áru, mal. river + pála, mal. milk-plant). Tam. from (áru, tam. river + pálai, tam. milky plant). Hind. also (bed), meaning cane [rattan]; (bent), meaning cane. Dec. also (jamtíkápattá), meaning salix leaf. Tel. also (étipisinika), meaning river + clerodendron inerme, gærtn. Title otherwise Four-seeded willow, River paulay. Botanically Salix [varoonam] tetrasperma, roxb., salicaceæ [vricsham, 126]. Alias Salix ichnostachya. Small tree; leaves alternate, lanceolate, entire; stipules leafy; catkins lateral, peduncled, male long, lax, and few-flowered, female cylindric, rather dense, elongated; peduncle three to six leaved; scales oblong, spathulate, puberulous; capsule long-pedicelled, ovoid, glabrous; always found near water. Bark febrifuge; in pharm. non-officinal. Leaves lopped and given to cattle as fodder. Twigs made into baskets [tokrah]. Timber used for fire-wood; also for gunpowder charcoal [adoopp kary].——Majnoon's willow (بید مجنون - bedimajnún, Pers., Hind. and Dec.; ஆற்றுப்பாலை - áttuppálai, Tam.). Title from long, slender, drooping branches. Pers. from (bed, pers. calamus rotang, linn. + majnún, pers. a celebrated lover). Tam. from (áru, tam. river + pálai, tam. milky plant). Hind. also (pánÍjamá), meaning close to water; (siyálimajnún), meaning majnoon's plant. Hebrew oreb. Title otherwise Weeping willow. Botanically Salix [varoonam] babylonica, linn., salicaceæ [vricsham, 126]. Tree attaining 50 feet; trunk 12 feet in girth, flowering and leafing together; males much commoner than females; leaves 3-6 inches, midrib prominent; male catkins ½-1 inch; bracts lanceolate; female as long, bracts as in male; capsule 1/12 inch, pale-green. Branches and twigs largely used for baskets, wattles, weirs, &c. Wood soft, smooth and white; small twigs used for rope bridges.

VARSHAM (वर्ष - varsha, San.). From (vrish, san. rain). Rain [mazhay]; the rainy season [ritoo]. Also a year, for which the following is the scale:—2 ayanams or half-years = 1 varsham or year of men, 360 varshams = 1 devavarsham or year of god [caulam, 2]; same as San. samvatsaram [caulam, 4], Hind. saul, Tam. aundoo [caulam, 1]. Bramha varsham means bramha's year or 12 bramha's months [caulam, 2]. Deva varsham means year of the gods; the following is the scale:—360 varshams or year of men = 1 devavarsham or year of the gods; 12,000 devavarshams = 1 maha yoog [q.v.] or great age [caulam, 2]. Distinguish from Varsham, division of a continent.——Vrisham (वृष - vrisha, San.). From (vrish, san. to generate). Bull of Shiva [q.v.] or Nundy [q.v.]. Same as Rishabham [q.v.] and Vrishabam [q.v.].

VARTAM (वर्त - vartá, San.). From (vrit, san. to exist). Existence.——Vartacam (ವರ್ತಕ - vartaka, Can.). From (vártá, san. business). Trade.——Vartamaunam (वर्तमान - vartamána, San.). News [acbaur].——Vartanay (वर्तन - vartana, San.). Fees.

VARY (வரி - vari, Tam.). Line.——Varapp (வரப்பு - varappu, Tam.). From (vari, tam. to draw line). Limit, a ridge in corn field [talay].——Varshaleiyaur (வரிசலையாறு - varisalaiyáru, Tam.). From (varisai, tam. row + alai, tam. wave + áru, tam. river). River; Madura dist., Ramnaud zemindarry. Narrow and rapid stream. Rises in the high lands near Praunmullay in Shivagunga zemindarry, and, being fed by numerous jungle streams, supplies the large lake at Tripatore, and after an easterly course crosses the high road from Poodoocottah to Shivagunga. Thence continuing easterly about a mile, flows south and crosses the road from Cunnagoody to Tripatore, where it unites with a channel [q.v.] flowing from the northern Calingula of Tripatore lake. It continues its course to Marootham pilleiyaurcoil, and flowing east-south-east four miles, receives the Tirmany moottaur channel from the west about 1 mile south of Nadoocottah. It then flows east, widens in its way, and passes by Cullar yelavancottah, where it enters Ramnaud zemindarry. It then flows north-easterly towards Devacottah, where it separates into two branches, which, uniting about a mile to the east, run north of the fort of Hanoomantagoody and south of the village. It again separates into two branches. The northern runs easterly three miles, and then separates into two streams, taking an east by south course for 10 miles, and falls into the Paumbenaur, below Audavattore; the lower branch is known as the Paushiyaur, from the village Paushiputnam, situated on the coast near the junction of this channel with the sea. The southern branch pursues a south-easterly course about 17 miles from Hanoomantagoody; passing by Cumboocottah and Audavattore it supplies several tanks, and crossing the high road to Ramnaud discharges itself into the sea.——Varshanaud mullay (வரிசைநாட்டுமலை - varisaináttumalai, Tam.). From (varisai, tam. row + nádu, tam. country + malai, tam. hill). Sanscrit name (varshagiri), meaning border mountain. VAUPS (واپس - vápas, Hind.). From pers. Back again.

VAURAM (वार - vára, San.). From (vri, san. to cover) [var]. Distinguish from dravidian Vauram [va]. Time.—"a" A day used in composition, as Somavauram, Monday [kizhamay]. Hence a week. 7 dinams or days = 1 vauram, or week; 2 vaurams = 1 pacsham or fortnight [caulam]. Same as Hind. haftah [caulam]. For rationale of week nomenclature see vol. I, 610.—"b" The shastrams recognize planetary years; the rule in these is that the planet [graham] in whose week day the new moon [amavausyay] falls in the lunar month of Cheitram [mausam] or april is the regent of the year which then commences. Varauha mihiran has the following about the astrology of the planetary years:—"If sooryan [q.v.] should be the lord of the "year, month or day, there will be crops only here and there, "the forests will be full of wild, carnivorous animals seeking "for prey; springs will yield but little water; rivers will fail; "and diseases and medicine will not gain much in strength; the "heat of the sun will be felt intolerable even in the dewy season; "clouds though resembling mountains in size will not yield "much rain; the sky will be full of heavenly bodies of lost "lustre; ascetics and cows will be afflicted with miseries; "princes will range over the land in military order with proud "elephants, horses, foot-soldiers and other strength, armed with "bows, swords, cudgels and engaged in attacking countries as "they march. If chundran [q.v.] should be the lord of the year, "the sky will be filled with clouds moving like mountains and of "the color of the black cobra [q.v.], collyrium [caujal], or the "bee [tainee], and filling the whole earth with water and the "sky with the roar of thunder; the tanks will appear beautiful "by the presence in them of the lotus [nelumbo] and the white "lily [indian water lily], the groves will be full of flower trees "rendered attractive by the humming of black bees [zeerangy]; "cows [pashoo] will yield abundance of milk [paul], and will "thrive; wives will please their husbands by acts of love for "ever; there will be an abundant growth of wheat [geung], "rice [paddy], barley [jow] and other grains [dhaunyam] and "also of excellent sugar-cane [q.v.]; the towns and mines will "flourish; the surface of the earth will be marked by the "construction of raised brick-works over the sites of sacrificial "rites [yanyam, yaugam], the sky will be filled with the sound "of vedic hymns [vedam] chanted by persons engaged in such "rites; and the earth will be under the protection of good "rulers. If mungalan [q.v.] should be the lord of the year there "will be fear from destructive fires gaining in strength by the "winds that blow over them and consuming villages, towns and "forests; mankind will suffer from the attacks of robbers, and "there will be heard everywhere cries of distress and there will "also be loss of property and cattle; though gigantic clouds "may float together in the sky, they will yield little rain; crops, "even though they might be grown in wet places, will become "dry, and if they happen to grow and ripen at all, they will be "cut and carried away by robbers; rulers will little attend to "the protection of their subjects; bilious complaints will afflict "mankind; there will also be deaths from snake bites and crops "will suffer blight or be otherwise injured. If boodhan [q.v.] "should be the lord of the year, the arts of jugglery and sorcery "will thrive; rogues will prosper; towns and villages will "flourish; musicians, writers, mathematicians and persons "skilled in the use of arms will abound in the land and rulers "will exchange rare and valuable gifts; mankind will be truthful; vedic studies [vedam] will flourish; criminal courts will "administer justice according to the code of menoo [q.v.]; there "will be found students of the higher metaphysics, yoga vidyay "[yogam] and bramha nyaunam [q.v.], in many places seeking "their way to salvation [mocsham], and there will also be found "students of logic [nyauyam] and the like sciences [shastram]; "buffoons, messengers, poets, children, hermaphrodites, makers "of perfumes, and persons living on banks, over waters and in "mountains will prosper; medicinal plants will thrive. If "brihaspaty [q.v.] should be the lord of the year, the sound "of vedic hymns [vedam] chanted aloud by bramins [q.v.] in "sacrificial rites [yanyam, yaugam], will fill the sky, cause "distress to the enemies of the rites, and bring joy to the minds "of the devas [q.v.] that partake of the offerings [homam]; "abundance of excellent crops will mark the earth, large numbers "of elephants [q.v.], horses [ghorah], cows [pashoo] and foot-"soldiers will thrive; there will be an increase of wealth; "mankind will be happy under the protection of just rulers and "the earth will assume an appearance as bright as the starry "heavens; the sky will be full of various huge clouds yielding "abundance of rain [mazhay]; crops will thrive and there will "be prosperity in the land. If shoocran [q.v.] should be the lord "of the year, rice-crops [paddy] and sugar-canes [q.v.] will "flourish, low grounds will be filled with rain water, tanks will "appear beautiful on account of the lotus [nelumbo] growing in "them; and the earth will assume an appearance as attractive "as a woman bedecked with jewels; rulers will achieve success "in war; the sky will be filled with the sound of the joy of "triumph from the soldiers of the army; all good men will be "happy and wicked men will dwindle and perish; towns and "villages will thrive and the earth will be under the protection "of just rulers; the spring season [ritoo, vasantam] will be "marked by husbands frequently imbibing delightful honey "[shahad], wine [sharaub], in the company of their wives; "pleasant music from the flute and the lyre will delight the ear "and mankind will partake of their meals in company with

"visitors, friends and kinsmen, and the god of love [manmatan] "will revel in triumph. If shany [q.v.] should be the lord of the "year, the land will suffer from wicked men, bands of robbers "and large wars; cows will perish; wealth will disappear; there "will be heard the cries of people mourning for the death of "their kinsmen in civil strife; severe epidemics will break out "and afflict people; clouds will be dispersed by winds; trees "will suffer from disease; the sky will be filled with dust "concealing from view the discs of the sun and moon; tanks will "become dry and rivers will fail; crops found growing here and "there will perish for want of water; and in other places they "will thrive only when fed by the slight rain sent down by "indran [q.v.]."—"c" As to sex:—Mercury and Saturn are hermaphrodite planets; Mercury being female hermaphrodite and Saturn being male hermaphrodite; the Moon and Venus are female planets; and the rest are male planets. As to elements:—the Sun and Mars are fire; Mercury is earth; Jupiter is ether; the Moon and Venus are water; and Saturn is air. As to caste:—Venus and Jupiter are bramins; Mars and the Sun are cshatriyas; the Moon is a veisya; Mercury is a shoodra; and Saturn is a chundaulan. As to temper:—the Moon, the Sun and Jupiter are of satwagoonam [q.v.] or good temper; Mercury and Venus are of rajogoonam [q.v.] or passionate temper; Mars and Saturn are of tamogoonam [q.v.] or dark temper.—"d" The following are the different vernacular names for days of week, with hours of Rahoocaulam [q.v.] and Goolicacaulam [q.v.] in each. VAURS (وارث - váris, Hind.). From (virs, ar. inheritance). Heirship. Under Mahomedan law, a testator, if he leaves any relations, can only dispose of one-third of his net property by will; and therefore unless his debts, funeral expenses, &c., exhaust the estate, there is necessarily in almost all cases an intestacy as to a considerable portion. The general principles of Mahomedan inheritance are as follows. There is no distinction between real and personal property. There is no right of primogeniture, so that for instance if a man leave three sons, the eldest will take no more than each of the other two. There is no right by representation. Thus, if a man leaves as his only relations one son and a grandson through another son, the surviving son will take all, and the grandson will have no claim as the representative of his deceased parent. There is no distinction between ancestral property and property which the deceased has himself acquired. Persons who may succeed to property by virtue of relationship or marriage to the deceased are divided into three classes, viz.:—sharers, residuaries, and distant kindred. The first two classes are frequently mentioned under the common name of heirs. Sharers are those who are entitled to a prescribed fractional part; e.g., a wife under certain circumstances takes ¼; a father ⅙; a daughter ½, &c. Residuaries are those who take no prescribed fractional part, but divide the residue among them after the sharers are satisfied, and the whole if there are no sharers. Distant kindred are all relations who are neither sharers nor residuaries. When there are no sharers or residuaries the distant kindred take the whole among them according to certain rules. The above is the Soonnee law, Soonnees [q.v.] being the great majority in this presidency. For hindoo inheritance see Dauyam.

VAUVILY (వావిలి - vávili, Tel.). Same as Water notchy.

VAUZH (வாழ் - vázh, Tam.). To flourish.——Valdavore (வழுதாவூர் - vazhuthávúr, Tam.). From (vazhuthi, tam. epithet of the pándiyan kings + úr, tam. village). South arcot dist., Villoopooram tal.; pop. 2,218; acres 1,373; lat. 11° 59′; long. 79° 45′; from Cuddalore N.N.W. 18 miles; from Villoopooram E.N.E. 14 miles; from the sea W. 9 miles; from Pondicherry W.N.W. 9 miles. Fortified by the French, and formed one of the supports of their capital, Pondicherry. One of the main redoubts of the Pondicherry fortifications still bears the name of Valdavore. On the 18th December 1758 the united forces of Krishna row and Mahomed yoosoof, after threatening Pondicherry, cut the bund [q.v.] of the great tank of Valdavore and this being in the height of the monsoon [q.v.] a large extent of cultivation was destroyed. Valdavore was captured in 1760 by the British, but restored to the French in 1763. An old ruined fort the residence of a minister of a ruler of Jinjee, contains several subterranean cells. On the west stand three sculptured stone figures larger than life, representing Rama [q.v.], Lutchmanan [q.v.], and Seetay [q.v.].——Vauzhnore (വാഴുന്നോർ - vázhunnór, Mal.). From (vázhu, mal. to rule + ór, mal. pers. affix); ruler. A naudvauly or governor of a naud [q.v.] under old malabar rulers; now a title of members of some families [tarwaud]; otherwise Boynore, by corruption.——Vauzhvoo (வாழ்வு - vázhvu, Tam.). From (vázhu, tam. to flourish). Prosperity. Suffix in place names [mungalam].——Vazhoothy (வழுதி - vazhuthi, Tam.). From (vazhuttu, tam. to praise). Epithet of the Paundy [q.v.] kings.

VAVVAUL (अजिनपत्र - ajinapatra, San.; बटुरी - baturí, Mahr.; خفاش - khaffásh, Ar.; شپره - shapparah, Pers.; گدل - gadal, Hind.; لوا - lava, Malay; ಕಣ್ಣುಕಪ್ಪಟೆ - kannukappate, Can.; ಬಾವೊಲಿ - bávoli, Too.; గబ్బిలము - gabbilamu, Tel.; ବାଦୁଡ଼ି - bádará, Oor.; കടവാതിൽ - katavátil, Mal.; வவ்வால் - vavvál, Tam.). San. from (ajina, san. skin + patra, san. wing). Ar. from (khafisha, ar. small eye). Pers. from (shab, pers. night + parah, pers. flying). Can. from (kannu, can. eye + kappate, can. wrapper). Tel. from (gabbu, tel. stench + bila, san. hole). Oor. from (vátuli, san. flying fox). Mal. from (katal, mal. sea + vátil, mal. bat). Tam. from (vavvu, tam. to seize), to steal; as appearing in dusk. The ordinary bat, and may be considered co-extensive with the family Vespertilionidæ, cheiroptera, mammalia [sastanam, 6], of naturalists [jantoo]. These have simple nostrils as in the frugivorous bats with no complications of foliated cutaneous appendages; the muzzle is conical, moderately long, and clad with fur; the ears wide apart. There is a Tamul proverb:—வௌவாலுக்கு இரவில் கண் தெரியும்—"bats can see in the dark." Another:—வௌவால் தலை நரித் தலைபோல்—"the head of a bat resembles that of "a jackal [q.v.]." Another:—வௌவால் போலத் தொங்குகிறான்—"he hangs like a bat." Another:—வௌவால் அடைகிற வீட்டில் குடி இருப்பது எப்படி—"how can one dwell in "a house frequented by bats." Bats are generally referred to by Tamulians as unclean animals, or as illustrative of unsightly things; though with the Chinese they are regarded as creatures of good omen [shacoonam].—"a" The first of the family is the Coromandel bat, Scotophilus coromandelicus. Alias Vespertilio imbricatus, coromandelicus; Vesperugo abramus. Ears rather large, broad tragus lunate, or slightly curved forwards, and obtuse and rounded at the tip; a minute præmolar above, situated laterally internally, not visible from without; two lower præmolars; two pair of upper incisors about equal in size; fur short; above, dingy fulvous brown, beneath grayish fulvous; in some dark brown both above and below. This minute bat usually conceals itself in the roofs of dwelling houses, in holes in the thatch, under tiles, &c. Akin to the English Pipistrelle.—"b" Next is the Large yellow bat, Nycticejus heathii. Ears shorter than the head, straight, oblong, with rounded tip, sub-emarginate posteriorly, lobed; tragus linear, slightly curved, fur short, soft, shining; above, bright olivaceous with a tinge of ferruginous or golden brown; beneath pale and slightly greenish yellow. Roosts both in houses and trees.—"c" Next is the Common yellow bat, Nycticejus temminckii. Ears short, rounded; tragus moderate curved inwards; above, castaneous-olive, or rufous, or rufo-fulvous; beneath flavescent, or fulvous. A very common species, appearing early in the evening. It collects by hundreds in hollow trees, and feeds chiefly on whiteants [q.v.].—"d" Next is the Hoary bat, Nycticejus canus. Light dusky above, with the tips of the hairs pale grayish or fulvous; lighter beneath; sometimes variegated with bright ferruginous. Very common.—"e" Last is the Painted bat, Kerivoula picta. Fur fine, woolly; above yellowish red, or golden rufous; beneath less brilliant and more yellow; wing membranes inky black with rich orange stripes along the fingers, extending in indentations into the membrane. When disturbed in the day-time, looks like a butterfly [pautarny] called in Northern india the orange bat. It conceals itself in the folded leaf of the plantain [q.v.], and its Ceylonese name is Kehelvoulha, meaning plantain bat, whence the scientific term. The colors of this bat are adapted to its hiding place.—"f" Indian allied species not here found are:—Barbastellus communis, Harpiocephalus auratus, cyclotis, griseus, harpia, leucogaster, suillus or pigbat, Kerivoula hardwickii, pallida, papillosa, Miniopterus schreibersii, Myotis murinus, parvipes, theobaldi, Noctulinia noctula, Nycticejus atratus or sombre bat, castaneus or chestnut bat, luteus or bengal yellow bat, nivicolus or alpine bat, ornatus or harlequin bat, Nyctophilus geoffroyi, Plecotus auritus or homochrous, Scotophilus emarginatus, fuliginosus or smoky bat, heathii, leisleri or hairy-armed bat, lobatus or lobe-eared bat, ornatus, pachyomus, pallidus, serotinus or silky bat, temminckii, Vespertilio emarginatus, formosus, longipes, montivagus, muricola, murinoides, mystacinus, nepalensis, Vesperugo affinis, annectans, atratus, dormeri, leucotis, maurus, noctula, pachyotis, pachypus, tickelli.—"g" For the Noctule bats, see Champadal; for the Vampires see Kaffaush.

VAYIDAH (وعده - vadah, Hind.). From (vada, ar. to promise). Stated period for the payment of a sum of money, or other purpose [kist].

VAZHALAY (വഴല - vazhala, Mal.; வழலை - vazhalai, Tam.). From (vazhalu, tam. to put off), that which peels off skin; snake. ——(1) The term may be considered co-extensive with the family Lycodontidæ ophidii colubriformes, ophidia [sarpam], reptilia [sarpy, 23] of naturalists [jantoo]. The Vazhalays are nocturnal snakes, yet feed exclusively on skinks, which they must catch during the day. They are groundsnakes. The following are the chief species in Southern india:—"a" Leptorhytaon jara, called by the teloogoos a sauropotoo or striped mate, like the rat-snake [q.v.]. Alias Coluber bipunctatus, jara; Leptorhytaon jarapotoo; Lycodon jara. Brown above, each scale with two white dots; generally a white collar; lower parts uniform white.—"b" Lycodon anamallensis. Greyish brown, with small, white, brown-edged cross bars on back of the trunk; sides indistinctly reticulated with whitish; no collar; each labial with a brown spot; lower parts uniform white.—"c" Lycodon aulicus. Alias Coluber aulicus; Lycodon hebe. The common brown snake. Var. α. Uniform brown above, without collar. Var. β. Uniform brown above, with a white collar. Var. γ. Brown or greyish brown, with traces of a white network, with a white collar. Var. δ. Ferruginous or chestnut-brown, with white, brown-edged cross bars on the back; this is the most common. One of the most common snakes of Southern india; scarce on the coasts of the south-eastern parts. Formidable enemies of skinks, which form almost its sole food; of fierce habits and defends itself vigorously. About 3 feet long and the thickness of a man's finger. Sometimes mistaken for the Krait, which see.—"d" Lycodon striatus called by the Teloogoos Gauzoo tutta, or glass-snake. Alias Coluber malignus, striatus. Snout much depressed; black or brown, with or without whitish collar; body and tail with white cross bands, sometimes bifid on the sides, sometimes reduced to a vertebral series of white spots.—"e" Ophites albofuscus. Alias Sphecodes albofuscus. Light reddish, with numerous brown cross bands; a reddish white collar.——(2) The Tamulians distinguish the following.——Black vazhalay (கருவழலை - karuvazhalai, Tam.). Called the king of serpents.——Blood vazhalay (இரத்தவழலை - irattavazhalai, Tam.). The bite of which causes vomiting of blood.——Cundam caroovazhalay (கண்டங்கருவழலை - kandangaruvazhalai, Tam.). Tam. from (kandam, tam. division + karu, tam. black). A name for Bungarus caeruleus or Krait [q.v.], whose black body is divided into divisions by thin white arches.——Red vazhalay (செவ்வழலை - shevvazhalai, Tam.). The red kind.

VEDAM (वेद - véda, San.; بيد - bed, Hind.). From (vid, san. to know) [vid]. Knowledge. Hence any sacred writings. Especially those of the ancient Aryan [q.v.] hindoos. Only a small portion of the Aryan vedams is now generally read among Bramins. They are in obsolete Sanscrit. The few Bramins who live by the Vedams commit twenty or thirty chapters to memory, which are recited at certain ceremonies in weddings [calyaunam], funerals [shoodcaud], and yanyams [q.v.]. Those recluses who study divinity read various commentaries called Bhaushyam [q.v.]. The Smartas read the Shuncara bhaushyam. The Veishnavas read the Ramaunooja bhashyam, and the Madhwas read the Madhwa bhaushyam. Bramins say of the vedams that they were knowledge which issued like breath from the self-existent being bramh [q.v.], perceived by rishies [q.v.], by them orally transmitted, and eventually reduced into writing by vyausan [q.v.]. The old original sanscrit Vedam consisted of the following four parts:—Muntram [q.v.] or prayer and praise embodied in samhitays [q.v.] or compilations, texts and metrical hymns. Bramhanam [q.v.] or ritualistic precept and illustration written in prose. Oopanishad [q.v.], or nyaunam [q.v.], mystical or secret doctrine, appended to the aforesaid bramhanam in prosè and occasional verse. Aranyacam belonging to the forest; intended for bramins in retreat and closely connected with the oopanishads. The Muntram or primary portion was comprised in five principal samhitays or collections of muntrams, called respectively rig, teittireeyam, vaujasaneyin, saumam, atarvam; of these the rigveda samhitay, containing one thousand and seventeen hymns, is the oldest and most important, while the atarva veda samhitay is generally held to be the most recent and is perhaps the most interesting; moreover these are the only two vedic hymn books worthy of being called separate original collections; the last hymn of the third book of the samhitay of the rig vedam consists of six invocations by the rishy vishwamitran [q.v.], one of which is the celebrated gayatry [q.v.], or verse of eight syllables, known as the holiest verse of the vedams and the mother of the vedams, which it is the duty of every bramin to repeat at all his devotions [sundhyauvandanam]. The two samhitays of the yajoorvedam, viz., teittireeyam and vaujasaneyin or black and white and the sauma vedam, borrow largely from the rig, and are manuals the necessity for which grew out of the ritual gradually elaborated by the hindoo aryans [q.v.]. Only seventy-eight verses in the sauma vedam are untraceable to the present recension of the rig; the greatest number of its verses are taken from the ninth mundalam [q.v.] of the rig, which is in praise of the somam [q.v.] plant, the sauma vedam being a collection of liturgical forms for the somam ceremonies of the oodgautry [q.v.] priests, as the yajoos is for the sacrifices performed by the adhwaryoo priests. For Bramhanam see that head. For Oopanishad see that head. Aranyacams are certain chapters of the bramhanams [q.v.] so awe-inspiring and obscure that they were required to be read in the solitude of forests; properly each bramhanam had its aranyacams; but the mystical doctrines they contained were so mixed up with extraneous subjects that the oopanishads [q.v.] appear to have been added with the object of investigating more definitely such obstruse problems as the origin of the universe, the nature of the deity, of the soul, and the reciprocal connection of spirit and matter. The Samhitays, Bramhanams, Oopanishads, and Aranyacams of the vedams are designated as Shrooty [q.v.], or heard; and all other hindoo sacred scriptures are simply Smrity [q.v.] or recollected, distinguished from the heard or directly revealed word. The three great schools of hindoo philosophy [darshanam] and their three supplementary schools, the Nyauyam [q.v.] and Veishaishicam [q.v.], the Saunkhyam [q.v.] and Yogam [q.v.], and the Poorva mimaumsam [q.v.] and Oottara mimaumsam [q.v.] or vedauntam [q.v.], all implicitly accept the divine authority of the vedams, but explain them differently. Vedic literature at present day extant consists of, first, Samhitays and Bramhanams and commentaries &c. on them, belonging to the Rig vedam, Krishna or black yajoor vedam, Shooclam or white yajoor vedam, Sauma vedam, and Atarva vedam; secondly Sootrams and Prayogams for special rites; thirdly Oopanishads; fourthly Vedaungams. For more modern works see Sanscrit. Agny [q.v.] or god of fire, Indran [q.v.] or lord of the firmament, the Maroots [q.v.] or personified winds, Varoonam [q.v.] or the god of the sea, Mitran [q.v.] or the sun, and the two Ashwins [ashwiny] or sons of the sun, are the chief deities addressed in the old vedams. The worship of the ancient aryans [q.v.] consisted, as the samhitays [q.v.] show, of oblations and libations of clarified butter [ghee] and of the expressed juice of the somam [q.v.] plant. It is by no means clear whether the authors of the vedams possessed any clear ideas of the divine unity; whether they entertained any belief in a creator and ruler of the universe, certainly does not appear from any passage hitherto met with. There is a division which separates bramins into four distinct classes, each appertaining to one of the four aryan vedams; in their ceremonies that is to say they follow the rituals or instructions of one or other of the four vedams; five of the principal gotrams [q.v.] observe the sauma vedam, five others the rig vedam, five others the yajoor vedam, and five the atarva vedam; the rest of the bramins of all gotrams [q.v.] follow the yajoor vedam; but in the ordinary intercourse of life little attention is paid to this distinction [matam]. The vedam in a more general sense than the above is sometimes classed into fourteen divisions:—the four original vedams; the six angams [q.v.] of grammar, astronomy, &c.; the pooraunams [q.v.] as the eleventh class; and the mimaumsam [q.v.] or theology, nyauyam [q.v.] or logic, and dharmam [q.v.] or law, as the remaining three. The Itihausams [q.v.] and Pooraunams [q.v.], are sometimes considered as a fifth Vedam. The aryan Vedams have never been translated into tamul, except a few hymns as specimens, which have appeared in periodicals. The Tirvauchacam [q.v.] and Tirvyemozhy [q.v.] are called the Tamul vedams of the Sheivas and Veishnavas respectively. The Dravida prabandham [q.v.] is held in superior veneration by the Veishnavas. But these are original productions. The two following verses are inserted as being remarkable passages in the Nyauna vausishtam [q.v.]:—சடுமனவன்பேய் கனலிற் கொடிதாகு மலைகளினுங்கடத்தற் கொண்ணு, நெடுவயிரத்தினும் வலிது கடல்பருகி மேருவினை வேரோபேர்த்திச், சுடுங்கனலை விழுங்குகினு நிறுத்தரிது புலன்முழுதந் தோன்றழுலவ் கெடுமுலகிதண்டெனிலுண் டிலதாகில்ல, இதனைக்கெடுத்தல் வேண்டும்.—"This powerful "devil of a deceitful heart is fiercer than fire, more impassable "than the mountains, and harder than adamant, sooner might "the ocean be emptied, mount meroo [q.v.] be rooted up, and "the burning flames be swallowed down, than the mind be "restrained; it is the agent that operates through the senses; "at its bidding this destructive world stands and vanishes; "therefore it is the mind that must be first subdued."—கருத்தெனு மான்மருண்டோடி விடயமெனுங் குழியில் விழக் காயமென்னு, மருத்தலத்தி லெவ்வனமாங்கடுங்கான லெழுந்தமிக வளராநிற்கும், பெருத்ததுயரிளமை நலமெவ்வளவுண் டவ்வளவும் பெருகாநிற்கு, மருத்திகளு மெவ்வனமவ்வளவும் வினைத்தெழுந்த மிகவநர்த்தஞ் செய்யும்.—"As the deer [mrigam] like the bewildered mind "runs over the plain, and falls into the pit of the senses, so in "this body, compared to a barren soil, youthful lusts, like bright "mirage rising, will continue to produce numberless evils; the "forbidden pleasure of youth will increase in proportion as "they are cherished; and cherished desires will, in proportion "to youthful lusts, grow rapidly and cause destruction." There is a Tamul proverb:—நாதமும் கீதமும் ஒத்திருப்பது போல, வேதமும் போதமும் ஒத்திருக்க வேண்டும்—"as a melody and a song are in harmony, so must instruction be "in harmony with the vedam." And another:—வேதத்தை அறியாத கிழவன் வீண்—"the old man that knows not "the vedams is worthless." Among Native christians vedam is applied to Christianity. The bible is called Vedam or veda poostacam; and Vedacauran is a christian, especially a roman catholic. See vol. I (73), (87).——(1) Vedachellam (வேதாசலம் - véthásalam, Tam.). From (above + achala, san. mountain). The hill at Tircalicoondram, place of pilgrimage. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar].——Vedagiry eeshwaran (वेदागिरीश्वर - védagiríshvara, San.). Shiva at Tircalicoondram.——Vedamaunicam (வேதமாணிக்கம் - véthamánikkam, Tam.). From (above + mánikya, san. ruby). The gem of the vedam, Proper name. Common among non-bramins [peyar].——Vedanayagam (வேதநாயகம் - véthanáyagam, Tam.). From (above + náyaka, san. lord). Bramha [q.v.], the deity of the vedam. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name. Common among non-bramins. Also a native christian name. Similarly Vedacunn, Vedamoottoo [peyar].——Vedaranyam (வேதாரணியம் - vétháraniyam, Tam.). From (above + aranya, san. forest). Tam. also (tirumaraikkádu), meaning holy + vedam + forest; also (maraisai), meaning vedam + lodge.—"a" Deputy tahsildarry, Tanjore district. Pay Rs. 70.—"b" Town, Port, Deputy tahsildar's station, Salt manufactory, Sub-registrar's office; Tanjore dist., Tritrapoondy tal.; pop. 13,438; acres 223; lat. 10° 23′; long. 79° 54′; from Calimere point N.W. 6 miles; from Combaconam S.E. 50 miles; from Madras S. 188 miles; from Mayavaram S.E. 51 miles; from Munnargoody S.E. 33 miles; from Negapatam S. 27 miles; from Tanjore E. 55 miles; from Topetoray S. 2 miles; from Tritrapoondy S.E. 18 miles. Near Point calimere. Well endowed Shiva temple containing inscriptions. Tobacco [pogauk] is cultivated. There is a Tamul proverb:—வேதாரணியத்தில் பாம்பு கடிக்கிறதும் இல்லை, வேதாரணியத்தில் பாம்புகுறைகிறதும்இல்லை—"at Vedaranyam snakes "[sarpam] do not bite, nor do they cease to abound;" indicating its sanctity.——Veda samauj (वेदसमाज - védasamája, San.). From (above + samája, san. gathering). S. indian form of the Bramha samauj.——Vedaugny (वेदाग्नि - védágni, San.). From (above + agni, san. fire). The three kinds of sacred fire [agny], viz.:—Gaurhaptyam, the house-holder's perpetual fire; Ahavaneeyam, the prepared fire for daily oblations [homam]; and Dacshinam, sacred fire placed towards the south.——Vedaungam (वेदाङ्ग - védánga, San.). From (above + anga, san. limb). Member of the vedams. Six Sanscrit books explanatory of the Vedams:—Shicshay or pronunciation, by Paniny; Chandas or metre, by Pingalan; Vyaucaranam or grammar, by Paniny; Nirooctam, a glossarial comment; Jyotisham or astronomy; Calpam or vedic ceremonial. These are written in the Sootram [q.v.] style. The four Vedams, the six Angams, with Mimaumsam theology, Nyauyam logic, Dharmam the institutes of law, and the Pooraunams, constitute the fourteen principal branches of knowledge. See Smrity.——Vedauntacharry (வேதாந்தாசாரி - véthándásári, Tam.). From (above + anta, san. end + áchári, san. title). The head of the Vadagalay [q.v.] or innovating party among the Shree veishnavas [q.v.], otherwise Ramaunoojeeyans [ramaunoojan]; in which capacity he opposed Manavaula maumoony [q.v.] at Conjeeveram. He laid claim to a divine commission to reform the customs of southern Bramins and to introduce northern rules and traditions. See Tengalay.

The Vadagalays wear the simple naumam [q.v.] on the forehead; the Tengalays draw the centre line down on the bridge of the nose. When Vedauntacharry had carried his reforms as far as practicable, he retired to a hermitage near Conjeeveram, with his wife and his disciple Varadan. Vedantacharry wrote many theological and hymnological tracts; the Vedaunta bhaushyam, or comment on the system of Vyausan [q.v.] and on the Bhagavat geeta [q.v.], is a large and important work. He also wrote a popular drama entitled Sancalpa sooryodayam or sunrise of accuracy, in which virtues and vices are brought on the stage with appropriate language, dress, and action, the tendency being to inculcate the Veishnava system. Its Sheiva rival was the Prabodhachandrodayam by Appayya deecshitar. He died at Conjeeveram. See vol. I (85), (89). ——Vedauntam (वेदान्त - védanta, San.). From (above + anta, san. end). A system of pantheistic philosophy or psychology inferred from scattered texts of the vedams, and thence named their end or substance. One of the six darshanams [q.v.] or systems of philosophy, so called from its being founded on the Oopanishads [q.v.], which are the end of the vedam. It is otherwise called the Oottara mimaumsam [q.v.], and is attributed to Baudarauyanan, otherwise called Vyausan [q.v.], which is a general term for philosophic compilers. Its position in the history of S. indian religion has been shown in the foot-note on the History of Religion at vol. I (74). It is the only surviving main philosophy, being the basis alike of Adweitam [q.v.], Dweitam [q.v.], and Vishishtaudweitam [q.v.]. The Vedauntam offers many parallels to the idealism of Plato, as opposed to the Nyauyam [q.v.] which much resembles Aristotle. The object of the whole system is stated in one compound word, viz., Bramha jinyausay or Bramh inquisitiveness, or the desire of knowing Bramh [q.v.] the only really existing being [parauparavast]. The knower of Bramh attains the supreme good and supreme object of man [poorshaurtam]; τὸ ἀγαθόν, τὸ ἄριστον. In the second aphorism of the system Bramh is defined to mean that from which the production of this universe results. Shuncaran [q.v.] adds a fuller definition :—Bramh is that all-knowing, all-powerful cause from which arises the production, continuance, and dissolution of the universe, which universe is modified by name and form, contains many agents and patients, is the repository of actions and effects, and the form of its arrangement cannot be conceived even by the mind. The aphorisms of the system which follow, as far as the 28th, proceed to define and describe the character of god as the supreme soul [paramautman] of the universe. That the supreme being is omniscient follows from the fact that he is the source of the Vedam. As from that being every soul [autmam] is evolved, so to that same being does every soul return. How can souls be merged into pracrity [q.v.], for then the intelligent would be absorbed in the unintelligent? He, the supreme being, consists of joy [anandam]. This is clear from the Vedam, which describes him as the cause of joy, for as those who enrich others must be themselves rich, so there must be abundant joy with him who causes others to rejoice. Again he, the one god, is the light. He is within the sun and within the eye. He is the ethereal element [perooveły]. He is the life and the breath of life. He is the life with which Indran [q.v.] identified himself when he said to Pratardanam, 'I am the life, consisting of perfect knowledge; worship me as the life immortal.' From other portions of the aphorisms it appears that the τὸ ἕν, or one universal essence called Bramh, is to the external world what yarn is to cloth, what milk to curds, what earth to a jar, and gold to a bracelet. He is both creator and creation, actor and act. He is also existence, knowledge, and joy [satchidaunandam], but is at the same time without parts, unbound by qualities, without action, without emotion, having no consciousness such as is denoted by 'I' and 'Thou,' apprehending no person or thing, nor apprehended by any, having neither beginning nor end, immutable, the only real entity [parauparavast]. Such a creed as this does not necessarily imply what the later Vedantists teach, that the world is all Mauyay [q.v.], a mere illusion. That theory, now so popular, receives little countenance in the Oopanishads [q.v.], being rather imported from Booddhism [booddha]. A true Vedantist, though he affirms that Bramh alone is real, allows a Vyauvahauricam or practical existence to souls [autmam], the world [jagat], and Eeshwaran [q.v.], as distinguished from Pauramaurticam, real and Prautibhausicam, apparent or illusory existence. But how can it be maintained that an impure world is the manifestation of a pure spiritual essence? To avoid this difficulty, the supreme spirit [parabramh] is represented as ignoring himself by self-imposed ignorance [anyaunam], in order to draw out from himself the separate individuated souls [jeevautman] and various appearances, which, although really parts of his own essence, constitute the apparent phenomena of the universe. Hence the external world [jagat], the living souls [jeevam] of individual men and even the personal god [eeshwaran, paramautman] are all described as created by a power which the Vedantist calls Avidyay, the ἀγνοία of Plato, or false knowledge. Of this power there are two distinct forms of operation, viz., first that of envelopment or Auvaranam, which, enveloping the soul, causes it to imagine that it is liable to mundane vicissitudes, that it is an agent or a patient, that it rejoices or grieves, &c., as if a person under a delusion were to mistake a rope for a snake; secondly that of projection or Vicshaipam which, affecting the soul in its state of pure intelligence, raises upon it the appearance of a world, producing first the five subtle elements [tanmantram] and drawing out from them seventeen subtle bodies, also called Linga shareeram [q.v.], comprising the five organs [indriyam] of sense, the five organs of action, the five vital airs [praunam] with booddhy [q.v.] and manas [q.v.], and the five gross elements [bhootam] in the same order as in the Saunkhyam [q.v.], hence the soul mistakes itself for a mere mortal, as it mistook the rope for a snake. When the personal soul is set free from this self-imposed ignorance by a proper understanding of the truth [avastay], through the Vedauntam philosophy, all illusion vanishes and the identity of the Jeevautman [q.v.] and of the whole phenomenal universe with the Paramautman [q.v.], or one only really existing spirit, is re-established. With regard to the envelopments, the individuated soul, when separated off from the supreme soul, is regarded as enclosed in a succession of cases or coshams [q.v.] which as it were fold one over the other, like the coats of an onion [piyauz]. The first or innermost sheath is called the Vinyaunamaya cosham or sheath composed of mere intellection, associated with the organs of perception [nyaunendriyam]; this gives the personal soul its first conception of individuality. The second case is called the Manomayam or sheath composed of mind, associated with the organs of action [carmendriyam]; this gives the individual soul its powers of thought and judgment. The third envelope is called the Praunamayam or breathing sheath, i.e., the sheath composed of breath and the other vital airs associated with the organs of action. The fourth case is called the Annamayam or covering supported by food, i.e., the corporeal form or gross body [stoola shareeram]; the three preceding sheaths, when combined together, constituting the subtle body [soocshma shareeram]. A fifth case, called Anandamayam or that composed of supreme bliss, is also named, although not admitted by all; it must be regarded as the innermost of all, and ought, therefore, when five are enumerated, to be placed before the Vinyaunamayam. In many points the Vedauntam agrees with the Saunkhyam [q.v.], a philosophy strange to southern india. The order of creation in both is nearly the same, though the Originant in one case is Pracrity, in the other Avidyay, or false knowledge [anyaunam]. See vol. I (74) [matam]. Compare Virgil, Æneid VI, 724, &. Principio caelum ac terras, camposque liquentes lucentemque globum lunae, titaniaque astra, spiritus intus alit, totamque infusa per artus mens agitat molem et magno secorpore miscet.——Vedaunta rasauyanam (वेदान्तरसायन - védánta-rasáyana, San.). From (védánta, san. the philosophy so called + rasa, san. essence + ayana, san. place). A Teloogoo poem in four books written by a Roman catholic christian named Anandan, son of Mungalagiry timmayya, about A.D. 1700. In the first book the author endeavours to confute Bramins and other idolators on their own ground. The second book brings the history as far as the birth of Christ; having commenced with the fall. The third gives a brief selection from the Gospels describing the baptism, the descent of the Holy spirit, whom the author using latin words denominates Sancta spirita, the temptation, some miracles particularly the raising of Lazarus, the Last supper, and the departure to the Mount of Olives. The betrayal of Christ to the Jews concludes this book. The fourth book describes the crucifixion and subsequent events. The author now teaches the doctrine of purgatory, for which he uses the hindoo phrase Pitry locam [q.v.]. Then are described the Saviour's resurrection and appearance to the Maries, and the journey to Emmaus. Then follow brief accounts of the ascension, and the descent of the Holy spirit. Then the beatification of the Virgin, Peter being left on earth as head of the Church. On the wrath of God and the intercession of the Redeemer. The Last judgment. Conclusion, containing a summary of the points in the creed, with poetical version of the ten commandments. The author calls the mount of olives Nandana vanam. He names Peter Royappan, from Rye a king, but also with meaning of stone as in original. He calls James Yaugappan, and John Arlappan [tembauvany].——Vedauntin (वेदान्ती - védántí, San.). A follower of the Vedauntam philosophy.——Veidica (वैदिक - vaidika, San.). Class of Smarta [q.v.] bramins who follow no worldly occupation, and are supported by charity. The converse of Lowkica, or Bramins engaged in the business of the world. Many of the Veidica class now engage however in tuition.—

(2) Atarva vedam (अथर्ववेद - at'harvavéda, San.). From at'har, san. fire). The fourth and most recent of the four vedams. The vedam of the Shactibhactans [q.v.], or worshippers of the female energy [shacty], who make the universe to be developed by an inherent power in matter and use feminine terms and symbols. It has been termed the Black vedam. Does not exist in S. india, and by this term either the Koran or the Bible is always intended by a Tamulian.—Ayoor vedam (आयुर्वेद - áyurvéda, San.). From (áyus, san. life). Ancient inspired medical work. By some described as portion of the fourth or Atarva vedam. It was communicated by Bramha [q.v.] to Dacshan [q.v.] the Prajaupaty [q.v.], and by him to the two Ashwins [ashwiny] or sons of Sooryan [q.v.]. They became medical attendants of the gods [deva]. Cf. two sons of Esculapius and their descent from Apollo. Ayoor vedam consisted of 100 sections of 1,000 stanzas each; it was divided into eight main parts:—Shalyam, art of extracting extraneous substances forced into the human frame; Shaulakyam, of external organic affections, such as diseases of the eyes, ears, &c.; Cauya chikitsay, of application of healing art to body in general; Bhoota vidyay, of restoration of faculties from a deranged state, by demoniacal possession; Cowmaura bhrityam, care of infancy, treatment of puerperal disorders in mothers and nurses; Agadam, of administering antidotes; Rasauyanam, chemistry or alchemy; Vaujeecaranam, increase of human race [veidyan].——Krishna yajoor vedam (कृष्णयजुर्वेद - krishnayajurvéda, San.). From (krishna, san. dark + yajurvéda, san. the veda so called); because in this, the separation of the samhitay [q.v.] or collection of mantrams and Bramhanam portion is greatly obscured. This is the oldest collection of the yajoor vedam as taught by Veishampauyanan.——Oopavedam (उपवेद - upavéda, San.). Means inferior vedam. Title given to works of supposed inspired origin:—as Ayoor vedam, the science of life or medicine; Dhanoor vedam, the science of the bow, or military science; Gaundharva vedam, the science of music, from the heavenly musicians. See vol. I (62), (73).——Rig vedam (ऋग्वेद - rigvéda, San.). From (rich, san. to chant). The oldest and most important of the four vedams; called the first. The hymns are amongst the oldest writings known to mankind. They are generally short, and are addressed to the great powers of nature; that is to say to Indran [q.v.] the god of the firmament, to fire [agny], to the sun [sooryan], and to the moon [chundran]. As regards the latter, they are more especially devoted to the praise of the Somam [q.v.], or moon plant, the juice of which plays a prominent part in many of the vedic hymns. This juice was fermented and formed into an intoxicating beverage, which was held in high esteem. The total number of hymns in the Rig vedam is about 1,020. Their composition was the work of many men and of long periods of time. The language of the hymns, besides being archaic, is very involved and elliptical, abounding with epithets of which it is difficult now to see the force, and with obscure metaphors and comparisons. The chief desires expressed are for riches, victory, and various temporal blessings. Moral sentiments rarely occur; the hymns addressed to Varoonan [q.v.] contain the most. The following hymn, addressed to Agny [q.v.], the god of fire, and the Maroots [q.v.] or the stormgods, may be taken as a specimen:—"Thou art called forth to this "fair sacrifice for a draught of milk; with the Maroots come "hither O agny! No god indeed, no mortal, is beyond the might "of thee, the mighty one; with the Maroots, &c., &c. They who "know of the great sky, the Vishwedevah without guile; with "the Maroots, &c. The wild ones who sing their song, uncon-"querable by force; with the Maroots, &c. They who are brilliant, "of awful shape, powerful, and devourers of foes; with the "Maroots, &c. They who in heaven are enthroned as gods, in "the light of the firmament; with the Maroots, &c. They who "toss the clouds across the surging sea; with the Maroots come "hither, &c. They who shoot with their darts across the sea with "might; with the Maroots, &c. I pour out to thee for the early "draught the sweet juice of Somam [q.v.]; with the Maroots, "&c." The Rig is divided into eight parts called ashtacams or caundams, each of which is sub-divided into as many lectures or adhyayanams. Another mode of division also runs through the volume, distinguishing ten books or mundalams [q.v.], which are sub-divided into more than a hundred chapters or anoovaucam and comprise a thousand hymns, or invocations or sooctam. A further sub-division of more than two thousand sections or vargam [q.v.] is common; it is suited to both methods. The whole contains above 10,000 verses, or rather stanzas of various measures. Some passages are in the form of dialogue, and in such cases the interlocutors are alternately considered as rishy [q.v.] or "he by whom the muntram is spoken," and devatay [q.v.] or "he who is therein mentioned." The number of Samhitays of the Rig vedam is reckoned in the Pooraunams [q.v.] as sixteen.——Sauma vedam (सामवेद - sámavéda, San.). From (sham, san. to pacify), from tranquillizing utterance while chanting. The third of the four vedams and in Bhagavat geeta [q.v.] is called best of all. Is little more than a recast of the Rig vedam. While the Rig is in regular metre to be recited aloud; and the Yajoos consists chiefly of prose to be inaudibly muttered; the Saumam contains a certain rhythm, or mode, sung to music, and the name is also generally employed to designate a hymn. Compare Varauha avatar.——Shoocla yajoor vedam (शुक्लयजुर्वेद - shuklayajurvéda, San.). From (shukla, san. white + yajurvéda, san the véda so called); because the separation between the samhitay [q.v.] or collection of muntrams [q.v.] and the bramhanams [q.v.] is clearly distinguished. This is the later collection of the Yajoor vedam as taught by Yaunyavalcyans who received it from the sun [sooryan] who assumed the form of a horse while constructing it. Hence the followers of this vedam are called Vaujin.——Teittireeya vedam (तैत्तिरीयवेद - taittiríyavéda, San.). Otherwise Teittareeya samhitay of the black Yajoor vedam, as handed down by Tittiry of the school of Veishampauyanan.——Vaujasaneyin vedam (वाजसनेयिवेद - vájasanéyivéda, San.). From (vájasanéyin, san. a patronymic of yáñavalkya). Otherwise Vaujasaneyin samhitay as being originally given out by sun in the form of vaujee or horse or Shoocla yajoor vedam.——Yajoor vedam (यजुर्वेद - yajurvéda, San.). From (yajus, san. sacrifice + above). The second of the four vedams; comprehends the science of religious rites and ceremonies, such as fasts, festivals, purifications and sacrifices. Formed out of the Rig. Appears in two forms, as black [krishna yajoor vedam] and white [shoocla yajoor vedam].

VEDDAH (வேடன் - védan, Tam.). From (védu, tam. hunting). Also appears as Baida, Beyda and Veydan. The name of a very wild aboriginal tribe in Travancore and Malabar and found also in Ceylon. They inhabit the hills and forests, and live by hunting. Formerly sold and bought as slaves. Their usages, worship, and superstitions greatly resemble those of the Poolayar [q.v.]. These and allied tribes were doubtless the earliest inhabitants of the peninsula, giving way before the Coorumbar [q.v.]. In Hindoo writings the term is synonymous with everything low under a human form. The language of the Veddahs in Ceylon is a dialect of Singhalese, that is to say Dravidian, and free from Sanscrit or Pali, but the vocabulary is very limited. They occupy there a district about 90 miles long and 45 miles broad in the south-eastern side of the island; said to be a remnant of the Yakkho, the Sanscrit name for the aborigines of Ceylon, who, after the conquest of the island by Vijaya and his followers, were driven into the wilds. The Bisadæ, or Besadæ, which in mediæval Greek are called Vesadæ, are alluded to in the tract of Palladius de moribus brachmanorum, written about A.D. 400, and the same name is applied by Ptolemy to a similar race inhabiting northern India. The Veddahs have no knowledge of God, nor of a future state, and have no temples, idols, altars, prayer or charms, but have a devil worship. They do not bury their dead but cover them with leaves in the jungle. See vol. I (35).——Veddasundoor (வேடசந்தூர் - védasandúr, Tam.). From (above + sandhi, san. meeting + úr, tam. village).—"a" Deputy tahsildarry, Madura district. Pay Rs. 70.—"b" Village, Head-quarters of Deputy tahsildar and Sub-registrar; Madura district, Dindigul talook; pop. 6,863; acres 8,563; lat. 10° 32′; long. 78° 00′; from Dindigul N. 12 miles; from Kodaykarnal N.E. 37 miles; from Madras S.S.W. 234 miles; from Madura N.W. 44 miles; from Rameshwaram N.W. 126 miles; from Ramnaud N.W. 100 miles. In 1796 detatched from Ammayanaickanore polliem. Good tobacco [pogauk] grown.——Veddaulay (வேடாலை - védálai, Tam.). From (above + ál, tam. banyan tree, ficus bengalensis, linn.). South of Tonitoray promontory. Formerly a port of some note for native craft. Famous in Portuguese history for victory gained there by Martin Alfonso de sousa, Capitõo Mór do Mar, over the Zamorin [q.v.]. Inhabited chiefly by Mussalmans [q.v.] and Shaunaur [q.v.], the former carrying on a good trade. Chayroot [q.v.] dye [shauyam] is manufactured.——Vettavalam (வேட்டவலம் - véttavalam, Tam.). From (véttai, tam. hunting + valam, tam. strength). Zemindarry; South arcot dist., Trinomallee tal.; pop. 4,275; lat. 12° 07′; long. 79° 17′; height 1,741 feet; from Cuddalore N.W. 44 miles; from Trinomallee S.E. 14 miles. The only zemindarry [q.v.] in South arcot. Granted to the original holder, more than two centuries ago for his services in clearing it of robbers.——Veydan (വേടൻ - védan, Mal.; வேடன் - védan, Tam.). A hunter [veddah].

VEENAY (वीणा - víná, San.; بین - bín, Hind.; ವೀಣೆ - víne, Can.; వీణ - vína, Tel.; வீணை - vínai, Tam.). San. from (vi, san. to move), as played by fingers. Hind. and Drav. from sanscrit. The Indian lute. Instrument of the guitar kind. A gourd is attached to the end where the pegs are fixed for tightening the strings; the other end consists of a hollow wood-work serving for sounding board, over which the strings pass. There are four strings, two of steel and two of brass passing over the frets and finger-board; on these the notes are produced. Three other thin strings of steel are attached to the side for the purpose of being struck by the little finger to keep time. The compass of the instrument, beginning from the lowest note produced on the farthest brass string, to the highest one on the smaller steel wire, is 3½ octaves. The extent on any one string is 2 octaves. At 12 frets for an octave there are 24 fixed frets of steel or bell-metal. The veenay of northern india, called Roodra veenay, has a gourd at each end. Veenays are made chiefly of blackwood [q.v.] or jackwood [jack], which woods give the best tone. They are generally much carved and ornamented, the long neck of the instrument ending in a carved dragon. The gourd is rested upon a cushion in playing. There is no fixed pitch for tuning the strings [sangeetam]. They have much sweetness but little power; astonishing manual skill is often displayed upon them; the player sometimes sings to his or her own accompaniment on the veenay.——Mookha veenay (ముఖవీణ - mukhavína, Tel.). Means face lute. Clarionet [naugaswaram].

VEERAM (वीर - víra, San.). From (vír, san. to be powerful). Heroism.——Veerabhadran (वीरभद्र - vírabhadra, San.). From (above + bhadra, san. auspicious), the good warrior. Son of Shiva, the destroyer of Dacshan's sacrifice [dacshan]. Veerabhadran was a son of Shiva, created from the mouth, or according to some the hair, of his father, for the purpose of destroying the above sacrifice. Shiva [q.v.] had married one of the daughters of Dacshan, called Saty [q.v.] or Parvaty [q.v.] in her next birth. Dacshan commenced a horse-sacrifice [ashwa medham]. Being incensed with Shiva on account of his habits, Dacshan had intended contrary to custom to offer the sacrifice to Vishnoo

[q.v.] and so Shiva was not among the invited. Saty went to the sacrifice uninvited, and having received a cold welcome threw herself into the sacrificial fire and perished. Shiva exasperated created Veerabhadran to avenge himself, who destroyed the sacrifice striking off Dacshan's head. The gods interceded with Shiva on behalf of Dacshan who was reanimated; but as his head could not be found it was replaced by that of a ram. The story is intended to intimate the struggle between Sheivites and Veishnavites, in which at first the latter but finally the former acquired the ascendancy. It is also a favourite subject of Hindoo sculpture. See vol. I, (71), (78).——Veeracull (ವೀರಕಲ್ಲು - vírakallu, Can.). From (above + kallu, can. stone). A sculptured stone erected in honor of a person killed in battle, similar to european Menhir [aursham].——Veera maumoony (வீரமாமுனி - vírámámuni, Tam.). From (above + má, tam. great + muni, san. sage). Also called Ismauthy sanyausy [q.v.], the chaste devotee. Tamul name of Beschi, a native of Italy and a Jesuit. Having been appointed to East india mission, he arrived in 1700 at Goa. He proceeded to Auvore in Trichinopoly, where he studied Tamul, Sanscrit, Teloogoo, Hindostany and Persian. Held subordinate political offices in the earlier part of his life, and eventually after 1736 became Diwaun [q.v.], under Chundah sahib, Nawaub [q.v.] of Trichinopoly. He abandoned use of animal food and employed Bramins [q.v.] to prepare his meals. He adopted habit of religious devotee, and on his visitations to his flock assumed all the pageantry of a gooroo [q.v.]. He wore purple flowing garments, a white turban [q.v.], and yellow slippers. In his hand he carried a silver-mounted cane. In his ears and fingers he wore rings set with precious stones. He travelled on a white horse [ghorah] or in a palankeen [q.v.]. One servant held a purple silk umbrella over him, while another fanned him with peacock [mayil] feathers. He was seated on a tiger [pooly] skin; and a retinue followed. When he was the diwaun [q.v.] of Chundah sahib, he was styled Ismauthy sanyausy [q.v.], and obtained for his maintenance four villages yielding an annual revenue of 1,200 rupees. He founded a church at Conangooppam ariyanore. In honor of the Virgin mary he composed the very remarkable sacred poem Tembauvany [q.v.]. He also founded a church at Tircauvalore, near Ariyalore, and on the Madonna there composed three poems; Tircauvalore calambagam, Annay azhoongal antaudy and Adeicala maulay. Wrote also Kittairy ammaul ammaunay, a poem; Vediyar oloocam, in prose, Veda vilakkam, in prose, &c. Also a dictionary, Tamul and French, another Tamul and Portuguese, a third Tamul and Latin, Chatoor acarauthy [q.v.] or the four dictionaries, a Tamul work relating to the higher dialect His grammar of the coloquial dialect was written in Latin, dated Mission of Madura, 29th January 1728, and printed at Tranquebar in 1739. To this he soon afterwards added his grammar of the high dialect [shen tamul], written in 1730, a standard work. Modern works have not superseded these. He also wrote for natives a grammar called Tonnool [q.v.] in opposition to Nunnool [q.v.]. Beschi was diwaun until the year 1740, when Trichinopoly being besieged by the Mahratta army under Moraury row, and Chundah sahib being taken prisoner, he escaped, and fled to Cauyalputnam, then belonging to Dutch. He there remained till his death in 1742. His name is still remembered in Cauyalputnam.——Veeran (வீரன் - víran, Tam.). Hero. Feminine Veery. Non-bramin proper name. Also by irony term of insignificance and contempt. Compare Cauttaun [peyar].——Veerappan (வீரப்பன் - vírappan, Tam.). From (above + appan, tam. father). Hindoo 2nd or pers. name. VEETY (वीथि - vít'hi, San.). From (ví, san. to extend). Street [teroo]. Section of path of the sun [sooryan] and planets [graham] amongst the lunar asterisms [nacshatram]. The ecliptic [craunty mundalam] is divided into nine divisions known as Veeties or paths. Each division consists of three constellations [nacshatram] beginning from the lunar mansion Ashwiny [q.v.]. These divisions are technically known as, first Naugam or serpent, second Gajam or elephant, third Eirauvatam the divine elephant or serpent, fourth Vrishabham [arshabhoo] or bull, fifth Go or cow, sixth Jauradgavam or old ox, seventh Mrigam or deer, eighth Ajam or ram, ninth Dahanam or fire.

The veeties belong to the fixed ecliptic [craunty mundalam]. Of the nine Veeties the first three are known as the northern, the next three as the central, and the last three as the southern; these three sets are called Avastaunams [q.v.]. Again in the case of each three the first is known as the northern, the second as the central, and the last as the southern According to some the topical designation of a Veety follows that of the Yoga taurah [yogam] or chief star of the particular constellation; so that if the star should be on the north of the ecliptic, the veety is known as the northern one, if on the ecliptic, it is known as the central one, and if on the south of the ecliptic, it is known as the southern one [nacshatram]. ——(1) The following are the Avastaunams alphabetically.——Eirauvatam (ऐरावत - airávata, San.). Indran's elephant. 1st avastaunam.——Jauradgavam (जारद्गव - járadgava, San.). Old ox. 3rd avastaunam.——Veishwaunary (वैश्वानरी - vaishvánarí, San.). Fire. 2nd avastaunam.——(2) The following are the Veeties alphabetically.——Ajám (अज - aja, San.). Goat. 2nd veety of 3rd avastaunam Jauradgavam.——Arshaboo (आर्षभू - arshabhú, San.). From (rishi, san. sage + bhú, san. to be). 1st veety of 2nd avastaunam Veishwaunary.——Dahanam (दहन - dahana, San.). Burning. 3rd veety of 3rd avastaunam Jauradgavam.——Eirauvatam (ऐरावत - airávata, San.). Indran's elephant. 3rd veety of 1st avastaunam, Eirauvatam.——Gajam (गज - gaja, San.). Elephant. 2nd veety of 1st avastaunam Eirauvatam.——Go (गो - gó, San.). Cow. 2nd veety of 2nd avastaunam Veishwaunary.——Jauradgavam (जारद्गव - járadgava, San.). Old cow. 3rd veety of 2nd avastaunam Veishwaunary.——Mrigam (मृग - mriga, San.). Deer. 1st veety of 3rd avastaunam Jauradgavam.——Naugam (नाग - nága, San.). Elephant. 1st veety of 1st avastaunam Eirauvatam.

VEIDYAN (वैद्य - vaidya, San.). From (vid, san. to know) [vid]. Hindoo physician [hakeem, ospitry].——(1) S. india is abundantly supplied with country medicines; that is to say simple, energetic, and appropriate remedies, adapted for treatment of tropical diseases. The use of these is long anterior to Arab practice. Practitioners are of all castes and of all religious sects. Veidya einnoor, by Agastyan [q.v.], medical shastram [q.v.] in Tamul verse is in the hands of every veidyan. Other Tamul books are Dhanwantary cauvyam, Bhogar shastram, and Teraiyar vaugadam; all of them printed. The works of Characan [q.v.] and Sooshrootan are in Sanscrit. These are known to the races speaking Malayalam, Canarese, Mahratta and Goozeratty; but they have never been translated into Tamul, nor in their entirety in Teloogoo. The Ashtaunga hridayam, literally heart of eight sections, is a compilation by Vaukbhatan or Baubatan, from works of Characan and Sooshrootan, and is in repute amongst Malayalam veidyans. These style themselves Ashtaunga hridaya veidyans, while Tamuls of that coast are Chintaumany veidyans, following Agastyan. The plan followed by Tamulian medical writers is always uniform. They preface the work with a topographical memoir descriptive of the climate and soil of some locality [desham], and follow this up with materia medica, noticing the seasons for gathering vegetable drugs, the modes of preparing them and their doses. They describe the pulse, give rules for diagnosis and prognosis with careful instructions as to diet and regimen. These books are generally in eight sections, which have a parallel in the Greek and Latin medical works. According to them the harmonious action of the five elements [bhootam] and their qualities constitutes health. The body is said to contain three humors; air [vautam], bile [pittam], phlegm [sheetam], which are the pillars of the system; if deranged the same are the cause of disease and death. There are eighty diseases caused by derangements of the air; forty by those of bile; twenty by those of phlegm; and sixteen by combination. A shastram says:—"As the moon "sheds moisture, and abstracts the sun's rays, which dry up and "bestow energy upon the earth, and the air moves from place to "place, so phlegm [sheetam] bestows moisture, bile [pittam] "withdraws it by its heat and air [vautam] wafts it about in the "microcosm or animal body [shareeram]; bramha [q.v.], the "creator of the world, is full of the rajogoonam [q.v.] and "resembles air [vautam]; while bile [pittam] resembles vishnoo "[q.v.] and, is like him full of satwagoonam [q.v.]; in like "manner phlegm [sheetam] resembles shiva [q.v.] with his "inactive qualities [tamogoonam], and is the destroyer of the "body [trinity]." To reduce these humours when super-abundant and increase them when wanting, are the principles upon which the system of cure is based. To accomplish such objects a strict regimen is enforced, and certain articles of food and particular medicines are prescribed to increase or diminish these elements. The diagnosis of veidyans defines and distinguishes symptoms with great accuracy. Diagnosis they arrange under the seven following heads:—temperature of the body; appearance of the eyes; mode of speaking; color of the face and body; state of the urine; state of the stools; state of the tongue. Some of their notions of prognosis are excellent. As an example, favorable symptoms:—when the natural tones of the patient's voice remain unaltered; when he wakes from sleep without agitation; and when eating rather cools than heats his frame. They have less knowledge of anatomy. From one of the principal authorities comes the statement that the navel is the origin of all the vessels and is the principal seat of life. The instrumental part of surgery is of eight kinds:—Chedanam, excision; Laikhanam, drawing lines, applicable to scarification and inoculation; Vyadhanam, puncturing; Yaishanam, probing; Ahauryam, extraction of solid bodies; Visrauvanam, extraction of fluids; Sevanam, sewing; Bhaidanam, division. The mechanical means are termed Yantrams [q.v.], including a great variety of instruments; such as tongs or sandamsham, needles or soochy, teeth instruments or danta shankoo, saws or cara patram, tubular instruments or naudy, lancets or mandalaugram, knives or ardha dhauram, bistovries or cootauricam. Of bandages there are fourteen kinds; of rods and sounds, and instruments for eradicating nasal polypi or nacram a great variety. Actual cautery with heated metals is very commonly employed by veidyans, who also use a cautery prepared with hot seeds, combustible substances, or inflamed boiling fluids of a gelatinous or mucous consistence. No operations in surgery of any nicety are now ventured on, but dislocated joints are replaced and fractured limbs set by a class of men who also apply leeches [attay], &c. The veidyans being Shoodras are not permitted to peruse the sacred vedams [ayoorvedam]. Particular gods superintend different parts or functions of the body, and to them prayers are offered up before operations are performed or medicines exhibited. The following are the chief:—Agny or fire, the tongue; Bramha or creator, the soul; Chundran or moon, understanding; Dhroovam or stars, the eyebrows; Indran or firmament, strength; Samoodram or ocean, the navel; Sooryan or sun, sight; Varoonan or water, understanding; Vayoo or air, life; Vishnoo or preserver, courage. The Tamul medical works are written in Ilakkanam [lacshanam]; liberal license being permitted, as in the Greek, in transposing, altering and occasionally altogether taking away certain letters, in order to harmonize and vary the rhythm. The following specimens are from Agastya veidya einnoor:—"Signs of a "bilious and irritable habit; a person of what is called a "bilious habit, generally becomes grey very early in life; he "is easily made to perspire; his eyes are often inflamed, while "his body is pale; he is impatient, perverse, opiniative, and "consequential; and for the most part very amorous; the "conversation of such an individual is unguarded; he is addicted "to falsehood, fond of abstruse studies, yet is he more partial "still to the praises that are bestowed on himself. Causes of "fever [jwaram]; an exposure to the heat of the sun, at an early "hour of the morning, while fasting; eating voraciously any "food of a very hot nature, when the body has been previously "weakened by extreme hunger or fatigue; drinking stagnated "water, into which withered leaves have fallen; taking a full "meal without appetite; unseasonable weather; sudden vicissi-"tudes of temperature; wooded, ill-ventilated valleys; neglected "adoration of krishnan [q.v.]; air one has not been accustomed "to, whether that of the plains or mountains; the malign influ-"ence of an evil spirit or devatay [q.v.]; checked perspiration; "fear; grief; sleepless nights; long-continued constipation; in "a word, whatever exposes our mortal frame to deviations from "its natural and accustomed movements, or clogs nature so much "that it requires great agitation and consequent heat to bring "the body back to sound health. What constitutes a good "physician; the sages of antiquity or maha rishies [q.v.] have "thus handed down to us the qualities which constitute a good "physician; he must be a person of strict veracity, and of the "greatest sobriety and decorum, holding intercourse with no "woman except his own wife; he ought to be thoroughly skilled "in all the commentaries on the ayoor vedam [q.v.], and be "otherwise a man of sense and benevolence; his heart must be "charitable; his temper calm and his constant study how to do "good; such an individual is properly called a good physician, "and such a physician ought still daily to improve his mind by "an attentive perusal of scientific books or vaugadam; when a "patient expresses himself peevishly or hastily, a veidyan so "endowed will not thereby be provoked to impatience; he "remains mild yet courageous, and cherishes a cheerful hope of "being able to save the sufferer's life; he is frank, communi-"cative, impartial and liberal, yet ever rigid in exacting an "adherence to whatever regimen or rules he may think it neces-"sary to enjoin; should death come upon us, under the care of "this earthly saint, it can only be considered as inevitable fate, "and not the consequence of presumptuous ignorance." The tamul Cooral has the following:—மிகினுங் குறையினு நோய் செய்யு நூலோர் வளிமுதலா வெண்ணியமூன்று—"if food and work are either excessive or deficient, the three "things enumerated by writers, flatulence [vautam], biliousness "[pittam] and phlegm [sheetam], will cause one disease."—மருந்தென வேண்டாவாம் யாக்கைக் கருந்திய தற்றது போற்றி யுணின்—"no medicine is necessary for him who eats "after assuring himself that what he has already eaten has been "digested."—அற்றலளவறிந் துண்க வஃதுடம்பு பெற்றா னெடிதுய்க்குமாறு—"if one's food has been digested let one "eat with moderation; for that is the way to prolong the life of "an embodied soul."—மாறுபா டில்லாத வுண்டி மறுத் துண்ணி னூறுபா டில்லை யுயிர்க்கு—"there will be no "disaster to one's life, if one eats with moderation food that is "not disagreeable."—இழிவறிந் துண்பான்க ணின்பம்போ னிற்குங்கழிபே ரிரையான்க ணோய்—"as pleasure dwells "with him who eats moderately, so disease dwells with the

"glutton who eats voraciously."—தீயள வன்றித் தெரியான் பெரிதுண்ணி னோயள வின்றிப் படும்—"he will be afflicted "with numberless diseases, who eats immoderately, ignorant of "the rules of health."—நோய்நாடி நோய்முத னாடி யது தணிக்கும் வாய்நாடி வாய்ப்பச் செயல்—"let the physi-"cian enquire into the nature of the disease, its cause and its "method of cure and treat it faithfully according to medical "rule."—உற்றா னளவும் பிணியளவுங் காலமுங் கற்றான் கருதிச் செயல்—"the learned physician should ascertain the "condition of his patient, the nature of his disease, and the season "of the year and then proceed with his treatment."—உற்றவன் றீர்ப்பான் மருந்துழைச் செல்வானென் றப்பானாற் கூற்றே மருந்து—"medical science consists of four parts, viz., "patient, physician, medicine and compounder; and each of "these again contains four sub-divisions."——(2) The following are two key-lists in the briefest possible terms of the principal vegetable drugs employed by veidyans for which vernacular names are known; further information must be traced in the glossary paragraphs through the small-type cross references at end of this volume; see also vricsham, 7, for the method of expressing the products, &c., of plants in the dravidian languages.—"a" Abies webbiana, himalayan silver fir, leaf, twig; San. from (káma, san. beauty + lu, san. to destroy). Drav. from sanscrit. Jaundice. This is produced by eating after an attack of anæmia such things as produce much bile [pittam]; the increased bile enters the blood and flesh and produces especially yellowness of the eyes, the skin, the nails, and the face, accompanied with drowsiness, loss of strength, thirst and indigestion. ——Causam (कास - kása, San. ; کهانسی - khánsí, Hind. ; ಕೆಮ್ಮು - kemmu, Can. ; దగ్గు - daggu, Tel. ; ചുമ - chuma, Mal. ; இருமல் - irumal, Tam.). Title from sanscrit. San. from (kás, san. to cough). Hind. from sanscrit. Tel. from the sound. Tam. from (irumu, tam. to cough). Cough. This is produced by smoke or dust entering the mouth and nostrils, by fighting, by great fatigue, by dry food, by articles of food entering the air passages or by resisting the calls of nature ; these causes derange the vital air [vautam] in the chest and trachea, by which the air which passes through the air passages to the mouth produces a peculiar noise ; the disease may likewise be produced by the ruptures of the respiratory organs, and by the deranged humours ; all these varieties of cough pass to consumption, if neglected. There are five sorts of Causam :—Vautica causam ; the symptoms are the change of voice, the dry and frequent cough with pain in the temples, head, stomach and chest ; the face becomes sallow, and the person becomes weak. Pittacausam ; in this the mouth is dry and bitter and the breath is hot with fever ; the person complains of thirst and severe pain over the body ; the expectoration is sour and of a yellowish color, and the skin becomes yellow and hot. Capha causam ; in this the mouth is full of mucus with headache, loss of appetite, languor, frequent cough with thick mucus expectoration ; the person cannot labor, has frequent fits of coughing, the body is heavy and weak, he has no appetite. Cshatacausam ; this is caused by excessive venery, fatigue, carrying heavy weights, going great distances when unaccustomed, and violent exercise upon horseback or elephants ; by these the air passages are injured or ulcerated when the patient is first attacked with dry cough followed by spitting of blood, pain in the throat and chest, which is increased by pressure ; the joints and other parts of body are painful, as if pins were penetrating it, fever, difficulty of breathing, thirst, hoarseness. Cshayacausam ; see under Cshayam.——Chardicausam (छर्दिकास - chhardikása, San. ; ککوان کی کهانسی - kakwánkíkhánsí, Hind. ; ನಾಯಿಕೆಮ್ಮು - náyikemmu, Can. ; కక్కువాయిదగ్గు - kakkuváyidaggu, Tel. ; എക്കച്ചുമ - ekkachuma, Mal. ; கக்குவான் - kakkuván, Tam.). Title from sanscrit. San. from (kshu, san. to sneeze). Hind. from (galá, hind. throat + dard, pers. pain). Can from (gantlu, can. throat + hunnu, can. ulcer). Tel. from (gontu, tel. throat + noppi, tel. pain). Mal. from (tonda, mal. throat + pun, mal. sore). Tam. from (tondai, tam. throat + nóvu, tam. pain). Sore throat.——Cshayam (क्षय - kshaya, San. ; دق - dik, Hind. ; ಕ್ಷಯ - kshaya, Can. ; క్షయము - kshayamu, Tel. ; ക്ഷയം - kshayam, Mal. ; சயம் - shayam, Tam.). Title from sanscrit. Sanscrit from (kshi, san. to destroy). Hind. from (dikk, ar. to become thin). Drav. from sanscrit. Consumption. Also called Raja yacshmay meaning the king of disease, Shosham meaning drying up, and Cshatam meaning rupture or ulcer of the respiratory organs. Characterized by coughing accompanied with bloody expectoration. This is produced by grief ; by the evacuations being retained ; by great loss of the humours of the body ; by performing unusual and unnatural actions as ineffectually endeavouring to raise heavy weights ; by violent exercises ; by eating bad food at unusual times in unusual quantities ; by fasting ; by boils and sores in the chest. The disease commences by the person being emaciated and debilitated ; difficult breathing and pain over the body comes on, with cough, and a discharge of mucus, from the mouth and nose ; the palate is dry, vomiting and loss of appetite takes place from the internal heat being diminished ; there is also derangement of the mind, jaundice, cough with expectoration, and the loss of taste and smell ; the patient sleeps continually, and the eyes become of a pearl white color ; the person is fond of animal food. The following symptoms also indicate the presence of this disease :—the patient's voice changes, he sees in his dream crows [caurvam], parrots [totah], porcupines [kharpoosht], peacocks [mayil], vultures [gidh], monkeys [bandar], and lizards [chipkalee] ; and he supposes he is mounted upon these animals ; he sees also dry beds of rivers, dry trees, as if destroyed by storms and by fire ; the characteristic symptoms are pain in the shoulders, and sides of the chest ; a burning feverish sensation in the palms of the hands and soles of the feet is felt, which extends over the body. ——Cshoodrakrimy (क्षुद्रकृमि - kshudrakrimi, San. ; کرم - kirm, Hind. ; చిరిపురుగులు - chiripurugulu, Tel. ; சிறுபூச்சி - shirubúçç i, Tam.). The serpents are divided into five classes:—Darveecaram or hooded snakes [cobra]; the bite of this leaves a black color in the wound, with the symptoms of various air diseases; the skin, eyes, nails, teeth, urine and fæces, and the part which is bitten, becomes black, with roughness of the body and heaviness of the head, pain in the joints, weakness in the loins, back and neck, gaping, shivering, alteration of voice, languor, hiccough, thirst, foaming and sluggishness of the circulation; and the secretions and all the external passages are closed. Mandaly [viriyan], or serpents with figures of round arches on their bodies; the bites of this class of serpents produce in the part a yellow color; it swells, is painful and soft, accompanied with the following symptoms, thirst, stupidity, fainting, fever, blood is discharged from the mouth and anus, and gangrene occurs in the bitten part; these serpents are shining, and are marked with different circles over the body. Raujilam; serpents with longitudinal lines; these produce swelling, a glistening gray-color of the part, and the blood is thick, accompanied with the various symptoms of diseased phlegm [sheetam]; they are distinguished by the longitudinal lines along their bodies. Nirvisham [paumb]; these are serpents without poison. Vyantarajam; serpents which combine the peculiarities of several of the others. The following cases will be rarely cured; when no blood follows on cutting the part, and when the person is senseless so that no weals are produced by the strokes of a whip, or horripilation after throwing cold water on the body; the following symptoms are likewise unfavorable, when the tongue is black, the hair falls off, the nose and mouth become changed in their shape, the voice is altered, and the bitten part becomes black and red, or tetanus [hanoostambham] supervenes, when thick mucus proceeds from the mouth, or when the blood is discharged from the mouth and anus, and there are the wounds of four teeth. Treatment; when the extremities are bitten immediately apply a tight bandage above the bitten part, so as to prevent the poison entering into the system; when this cannot be done so, the bitten part is to be cut out; in all cases cutting out the part, sucking the wound with a horn, or burning the part is highly proper; when the mouth is used for sucking place a piece of bladder over it first and then suck; then antidotes must be used to prevent the effects of the poison; when the poison has reached the head, the person should be bled, and in the succeeding stages emetics and strong errhines should be used.——Shileepadam (शिलीपद - shilípada, San.; هتی کا پاؤں - hattíkápáún, Hind.; ಆನೇಕಾಲು - ánékálu, Can.; ఏనుగకాలు - énugakálu, Tel.; പെരിങ്കാൽ - perinkál, Mal.; ஆனைக்கால் - ánaikkál, Tam.). VEIGAY (வைகை - vaigai,* Tam.). From (vai, tam. swiftness + kai, tam. course). Sanscrit name (végavatí), meaning rápid river. River; Madura district, Periyacoolam, Dindigul, Madura talooks, and Ramnaud zemindarry. Principal river of the district draining the north of the Tamrapurny basin into Madura. Consists of two main arms, the Veigay proper and the Shoorooliyaur. The Veigay proper rises in the spur of the Western ghauts [q.v.] in the south-western corner of Madura district. It traverses the mountains for about 30 miles, precipitating itself at the foot of Guntamanaickanore hill. Then flows north-easterly for about 20 miles, receives the Tainy which drains the Bodinaickanore valley, and unites with the Shoorooliyaur about 6 miles north of Guntamanaickanore and south of Allinagaram. The Shoorooliyaur [q.v.] rises in the western mountains at the southern corner of the Dindigul valley. It runs parallel to the Veigay, with a greater body of water, until that river has commenced its inclination to the north-east when the two streams unite. After the junction the river turns abruptly to the east for about 25 miles to Jayampolliem, and after receiving the Varauhanuddy and the Munjal enters Madura talook $8\frac{3}{4}$ miles north-west of Sholavandaun. From this point it takes a south-easterly course, flowing along a shallow sandy bed from 200 to 400 yards wide, in an almost direct line right across the district for 100 miles, and passing Sholavandaun, Tovarimaun, Madura, Tirpoovanam where it becomes very broad, and Mauna madura. Then turning south a few miles it proceeds east and enters Ramnaud zemindarry on the west. Here for about 8 miles it forms a part of the general boundary between Ramnaud and Shivagunga zemindarries in a course nearly due east. It comes with a full stream between Paramacoody and Yamaneshwaram, and flows south-east 3 miles. It then turns east for 4 miles, and south for $3\frac{1}{2}$ when it is considerably diminished in width in consequence of numerous cuts from it for the purpose of irrigation. Now confined in a narrow bed it continues eastward in a winding course for 8 miles, and then spreads into the large Periyacoolam lake. A small channel on the north continues easterly. Retaining its name it proceeds eastward for 6 miles, losing itself in a salt-marsh, nearly 5 miles in length and about a mile and a half in breadth. At the east end of the marsh the river again reappears and proceeds in a south-easterly direction about 5 miles; thence it takes a serpentine course and falls into Palk's strait north-west of Tonitoray headland below Attangaray in lat. 9° 23′, long. 79° 2′. Total length about 140 miles. Principal towns on its banks are Madura and Ramnaud. The bed is nearly dry during the greater portion of the year even at Madura, 100 miles from its mouth, and dry all the year round at Ramnaud. The freshes last usually only three or four days. Scanty supplies of water are procured by digging small holes and channels in the bed, which retains at all times a certain amount of moisture. Near the point where it enters Madura district is the Pairanay anicut [q.v.], where a considerable portion of its waters is diverted into a channel [q.v.] taken off from its left bank. Two and three-quarter miles lower down the Chittanay anicut empties into a channel on its right bank, the greater part of its greatly diminished stream. The river is bridged by the South indian railway near Madura. There is a Tamul proverb :—வைகை ஆற்றுத் தண்ணீர் வேகம் அதிகம்—"the current in the "veigay is great." And another :—வைகை ஆற்று வெள்ளத்தில் பாலம் நிலைக்கிறது இல்லை—"when the veigay is in "flood, its bridges do not stand" [aroovy].

VEIPPAUR (வைப்பாறு - vaippáru, Tam. vaippár). From (vaippu, tam. greatness + áru, tam. river).—"a" Village, Port; Tinnevelly dist., Ottapidauram tal.; pop. 1,998; acres 8,752; lat. 9° 1′; long. 78° 17′; from Madras S.S.W. 312; from Ottapidauram E.N.E. 17 miles; from Tinnevelly E.N.E. 43 miles; from Tuticorin N.N.E. 16 miles; from Vembaur W.S.W. 9 miles. On Gulf of Manaar. At the mouth of the river of the same name, a little to north of Tuticorin. Ancient village. Early Dutch factory. Salt factory formerly here was abandoned owing to difficulties of communication. Old Shiva temple. Annual car festival.—"b" River, Tinnevelly district, Ottapidauram talook. Rises near the western frontier on the eastern declivity of the Eastern ghauts [q.v.] in about lat. 9° 42′, long. 77° 43′. Flowing easterly, and in some places south-easterly, for about 80 miles, during part of which it runs parallel to the north borders of Tinnevelly; it falls into the Gulf of Manaar in lat. 9° 01′, long. 78° 19′, near the town of the same name.

VEIRAVAM (வைரவம் - vairavam, Tam.). From (bhairava, san. a form of shiva). One of the six orthodox religious systems [ootchamayam] of the Sheivas in which Bheiravan is made supreme [sheiva siddhauntam].

VEISYA (वैश्य - vaishya, San.). From (vish, san to settle down on). Cf. Lat. vicus and Greek οἶκος, and English 'wick' at end of towns. The third primitive caste of the Aryans whose means of subsistence, according to Menoo [q.v.], were agriculture, trade, and the keeping of cattle [jauty]. In other words they were :—Bhoo veisyar, cultivators; Dhana veisya or vauniya or merchant caste; Go veisya or shepherd class.

From (velugu, tel. hedge + vídu, tel. town); border town. Village; Kurnool dist., Nundicotcore tal.; pop. 2,783; acres 24,581; lat. 15° 43′; long. 78° 37′; from Kurnool E. 36 miles; from Nundicotcore S.E. 22 miles. On the borders of Nullamullay forests. In middle of 16th century a strong fort built here by fugitive zemindar [q.v.] from Golcondah, the ancestor of the present Rajahs of Vencatagherry. One of its bastions was known as that of the seven sisters. The story is that, in order to give permanence to the fort, seven daughters-in-law of the founder sacrificed themselves with their children; one of them, who had no child of her own, carrying a Pariah boy Atchanna whom she found in the street. In memory of the latter fact the zemindar's family is still known by the name of Atchanna, and respect is shown to the Pariahs [q.v.] on the occasion of marriages in the zemindar's family. One of the principal marts for forest timber [maram].——Velgoty (వెలుగోటి - velugóti, Tel.). From (velugódu, tel. village so called). A family name of the rajah of Vencatagherry [velgode, velgoty canama].——Velgoty canama (వెలుగోటికనమ - velugótikanama, Tel.). From (velugu, tel. hedge + vídu, tel. town + kanama, tel. ravine). Pass; Kurnool dist., Nundicotcore tal.; lat. 15° 42′; long. 78° 46′; from Kurnool E.S.E. 47 miles; from Nundicotcore E.S.E. 34 miles. Pass [ghaut] over nullamullays north of Nundicanama, and between Velgode in the Coondair and Bolloopully in the Cumbum valley; about 2,250 feet at the highest point. Sometimes used as the shortest route between Cumbum and the country to the west of the hills, but it is not fit for cart traffic. Two watering places about half-way across. The best part of the Nullamullay forest is about this canama; largely frequented by timber merchants, who have depôts for sale of wood at Velgode.——Veligada (వెలిగడ - veligada, Tel.). From (veli, tel. outside + kada, tel. place). Dry land [poonjah]. Dry-ploughing [pooldycaul]. Same as Gaddavary. For wet land see Maugauny and Nunjah; for wet ploughing see Coodapa and Shettcaul——Veligaram (வெளிகறம் - veligaram, Tam.). From (veli, tam. open plain + agaram, tam. agricultural village). Sanscrit name (shukrapurí), means town of venus. Village, Place of pilgrimage, Mountain, River; North arcot dist., Carvetnugger zemindarry, Trittany division; pop. 1,136; lat. 13° 20′; long. 79° 28′; from Carvetnugger S.S.W. 7 miles; from Chittore E.N.E. 23 miles; from Trittany N.W. 16 miles. Shiva temple on hill. Pilgrims come on Mondays in Caurtigay [mausam] or November, and Shivarautry [pundigay, 6a]. On S. bank of Cooshastaly, 2 miles west of Pulliputt.——Veligonda (వెలిగొండ - veligonda, Tel.). From (veli, tel. exterior + konda, tel. hill). Range of hills. The eastern edge of the Eastern ghauts [q.v.] and forms the boundary between Cuddapah and Nellore districts. Starts from Nagary nose in N. arcot and runs due north parallel to the Nullamullays till it ends about 10 miles to the east of Marcapore, about the same latitude as the Yerramalas in the west. The hills cross out again at the Goondlacumma in the form of a low-lying range known locally as Yerracondas, and terminate in an attenuated corner in the north-east on the confines of Kistna district. Composed chiefly of sandstone [manal cull], and covered with stunted trees and brush-wood, but with little valuable timber. Mark an ancient sea boundary. Towards the east the sides are abrupt and bare, towards the west they slope into valleys and join other hills. Average elevation about 3,000 feet.——Velivauda (వెలివాడ - velivâda, Tel.). From (veli, tel. outside + váda, tel. street). Outer part of village tenanted by Pariahs [parcherry, pariah].——Vellaiyan (வெள்ளையன் - vellaiyan, Tam.). Means white man. Proper name [peyar].——Vellaiyauneiyoorty (வெள்ளையானையூர்த்தி - vellaiyánaiyúrtti, Tam.). From (vellai, tam. white + yánai, tam. elephant + yúrtti, tam. rider). The rider of the white elephant, Ayenaur [ayen]. Also Indran [q.v.] as riding on Eirauvatam [q.v.], the white elephant [q.v.].——Vellalore (வெள்ளளூர் - vellalúr, Tam.). From (vellam, tam. flood + úr, tam. village). Village; Coimbatore dist., Coimbatore tal.; pop. 5,831; acres 3,992; lat. 10° 59′; long. 77° 04′; from Coimbatore S.E. 5 miles. In May 1842 were found in an earthen pot 522 Roman denarii, chiefly of reigns of Augustus and Tiberius, with a few of Caligula and Claudius. The earthen vessel was like the common terra cotta lotah [q.v.] of the present time, but was broken to pieces. Many paundicoozhies [q.v.] containing well-made earthen vessels found here. Market place.——Vellam (வெள்ளம் - vellam, Tam.). Flood, irrigation.——Vellattiry (വെള്ളാട്ടിരി - vellâttiri, Mal.). From (vellanátu, mal. ancient principality + tiri, mal. holy, title). The title of the South malabar rajah. Otherwise Vulloovaconattiry or Valavanaud [q.v.] or Arangott [q.v.] rajah [colattiry]. See vol. II, 101.——Vellaula (வெள்ளாளன் : vellálan, Tam.). From (vellam, tam. water + ál, tam. to rule). Otherwise (vélála), meaning benefit ruler. Agricultural caste. The corresponding terms are:—Tel. Reddy; Can. Bunt of canara and Okkaliga of mysore; Mal. Nayar. Vellaular hold the first place among the Tamul agriculturists, as the Reddies [q.v.] do among the Teloogoos. During the period of the Paundyan [q.v.] kings no other classes were permitted to hold landed property. However there is this Tamul proverb :—கள்ளன் மறவன் கலந்த அகமுடையான் மெள்ள மெள்ள வந்து வெள்ளாழன்.—"the cullan, "maravan, and agambadiyaun, rising slowly became by degrees "the vellaulan." The Vellaular believe that they came from the north. They call themselves Veisya [q.v.], of the Bhoovamsham or agricultural section. They take the honorific appellation of Moodelly [q.v.] or Moodelliar [q.v.]. They do not use animal food or intoxicating liquors; polygamy is unknown, the widows do not re-marry, and they burn their dead [shoodcaud]. They are mostly of the Sheiva sect, but the chief objects of their worship are village gods [grauma devatay], and they keep the Pongal [q.v.] and Deepauvaly [q.v.] festivals. The Caurcautt vellaular of the Madura hills, or vellaular who watch the seasons, have institutions resembling Maroomakkatoyem [q.v.]. There is a Tamul proverb :—வெள்ளாளன் கிரந்தமும் பார்ப்பான் தமிழும் விழல் விழலே—"the sanscrit of a vellaula, and the tamul of a bramin are equally "faulty." There is another :—வெள்ளாளர் செய்யாத வேளாண்மை வேளாண்மை அல்ல—"agriculture not performed by vellaular is no agriculture;" numbers about 2 millions. The following stanza is from Manavaula narayana shatacam :—அந்தணர்கள் கருமமுஞ் ஜெகராஜ புஜபலமு மவனி வர்த்தகலாபமும், அனைவர்க்குமேன்மையுந் தருமமுந் தானமு மன்பின் மங்கையரின்பமும், புந்திதெளிநியமமுஞ் சாத்திரமுமாகம புராணமொடு சகலகலையும், பொய்யாதவுண்மையுங் கீர்த்திப்பிரதாபமும் புகழ்கின்ற தேவர்நிலையும், வித்தைபுரிமானமுங் குலமரபுநீதியும் விதரணமுதற் சகலமும், வேளாளர்குவளைபுனை காராளர்தங்களுட மேழியின் பெருமையன்றோ, மந்தரமெனம் புயசவுந்தர முகுந்தனே மணவாள நாராயணன், மனதிலுறையலர்மேலு மங்கைமணவாளனே வரதவேங்கடராயனே.—"The vellaular, by the effect of "their ploughing maintain the prayers of the bramins, the "strength of kings, the profits of merchants, the welfare of all; "charity, donations, the enjoyments of domestic life and "connubial happiness, homage to the gods, the shastrams [q.v.], "the vedams [q.v.], the pooraunams [q.v.], and all other books, "truth, reputation, renown, the very being of the gods, things "of good report or integrity, the good order of castes, and "manual skill, all these things come to pass by the merit of the "vellaulan's plough [yair]." See vol. I (36), (67); II, 227, 234.

——Vellaumay (வெள்ளாமை - vellámai, Tam.). From (vellam, tam. water + ánmai, tam. possession). Husbandry.—"a" The principal crop is rice [q.v.], which when growing and before it is husked is called paddy [q.v.]. Rice is also termed a wet grain from the great quantity of moisture necessary for bringing it to maturity [wet crop]. The grains other than rice, and the pulses, are called dry crops from their requiring less water [dry grain, dholl]. The particular seasons of the year founded to be the most proper for sowing different crops depend upon the climate of the locality, and whether it is within the influence of the south-west or of the north-east monsoon [caur, caurtey, mausam, monsoon]. For seasons of rice cultivation see Paddy. As to dry grains [q.v.] :—On the east coast, the greater number are sown about the beginning of what are called the first rains; that is to say towards the end of june, or in july, and are reaped in september; others are put into the ground in october, and being in high situations, suffer little from the heavy rains of november, and are usually got in december; a third kind, such as panipayar [q.v.], &c., are not sown till after the rains [mazhay], these being nourished by the dews [pany] that fall heavy in february and being reaped in the beginning of march. On hill-ranges the general system of cultivation is as follows; a few acres of jungle are burnt and cleared, the ground scratched up, and a few seeds scattered; the first season a fair crop is obtained, the second year the crop is inferior, and in the third season it is scarcely worth gathering; the field is then deserted and another patch cleared in the same manner, the relinquished land not being returned to till ten or twelve years have elapsed [coomry, ponacaud].—"b" The following are the principal crops grown by cultivators in the presidency grouped under different heads ;—Cereals :—barley [jow], cholum [q.v.], coraly [white tinay], cumboo [bajrah], khoda [q.v.] millet, large shaumay [q.v.], maize [mecca cholum], millet [q.v.], paddy [q.v.], raggy [q.v.], tinay [q.v.], varagoo [q.v.], wheat [geung]. Condiments :—areca [q.v.] palm, betel leaf [betel pepper], black mustard [cauly rayaun], cardamom [q.v.], chilly [q.v.], coriander [cassibor], cumin [jeerah], fenugreek [maitee], garlic [lussoon], ginger [q.v.], indian mustard [rayaun], onion [piyauz], pepper [q.v.], tamarind [q.v.], turmeric [country saffron], white mustard [soofaid rayaun]. Drugs and narcotics :—anise [q.v.], bengal hemp [sunn], bishop's weed [ajwaun], cinchona [koinah], coffee [q.v.], indian hemp [kinnab], opium [aphainam], senna [q.v.], tea [q.v.], tobacco [pogauk]. Dyes :—chayroot [q.v.], indigo [q.v.], morinda [indian mulberry], munjeet [q.v.], safflower [bastard saffron]. Fibres :—american aloe [q.v.], cotton [q.v.], flax [alsee], hemp bendy [q.v.], jute [q.v.], sunn [q.v.]. Garden produce :—areca [q.v.], brinjaul [q.v.], cashew [q.v.], chinese lablab [guar], cocoanut [q.v.], common bendy [q.v.], cucumber [oorvauroo], elephant yam [q.v.], grape [angoor], guava [q.v.], indian kale [kachvee], jack [q.v.], lime [q.v.], malabar arrowroot [q.v.], mango [q.v.], melon [oorvauroo], plantain [q.v.], pomegranate [anaur], potato [q.v.], pumpkin [carcauroo], sweet potato [q.v.], sweet water melon [q.v.], tapioca [malda dye], telinga potato [q.v.]. Oils :—castor-oil [aumanac], gingelly [q.v.], groundnut [q.v.], linseed [alsee], mohwah [q.v.], mustard [rayaun], ramtil [q.v.], rape [rarasarsoon], safflower [bastard saffron]. Pulses :—bean [country bean], bengal gram [q.v.], black gram [q.v.], cow gram [q.v.], dholl [q.v.], field gram [q.v.], green gram [q.v.], horse-gram [q.v.], moorman's gram [q.v.], pea [calauyam]. Starches :—arrowroot [malabar arrowroot], elephant-foot yam [elephant yam], potato [q.v.], sweet potato [q.v.]. Sugars :—date [kharjooram], palmyra [q.v.], sugar-cane [q.v.].—"c" The following are two alphabetical key-lists to the crops; further information must be traced in the glossary paragraphs through the small-type cross-references at end of this volume; see also vricsham, 7, for the method of expressing the products, &c., of the plants in the dravidian languages :—Allium cepa, onion; Allium sativum, garlic; Amorphophallus campanulatus, telinga potato; Anacardium occidentale, cashew; Arachis hypogæa, groundnut; Areca catechu, areca; Artocarpus integrifolia, bread fruit; Bassia latifolia, wild mohwah; Bassia longifolia, common mohwah; Borassus flabelliformis, palmyra; Brassica alba, white mustard; Brassica campestris, subsp. napus, rape; Brassica juncea, indian mustard; Brassica nigra, black mustard; Cajanus indicus, common dholl; Camellia theifera, tea; Cannabis sativa, indian hemp; Capsicum frutescens, shrubby chilly; Carthamus tinctorius, safflower; Carum copticum, ajwaun; Cassia angustifolia, tinnevelly senna; Cassia obovata, aleppo senna; Cicer arietinum, bengal gram; Cinchona officinalis, crown bark; Cinchona succirubra, red bark; Citrullus vulgaris, sweet water melon; Citrus medica, var. acida, sour lime; Citrus medica, var. limetta, sweet lime; Cocos nucifera, cocoanut; Coffea arabica, coffee; Colocasia antiquorum, indian kale; Corchorus capsularis, jute; Corchorus olitorius, wild jute; Coriandrum sativum, coriander; Crotalaria juncea, sunn; Cucumis melo, common melon; Cucumis sativus, common cucumber; Cucurbita maxima, great pumpkin; Cuminum cyminum, cummin; Curcuma angustifolia, malabar arrowroot; Curcuma longa, turmeric; Cyamopsis psoralioides, chinese lablab; Dolichos biflorus, madras horse-gram; Dolichos lablab, country bean; Elettaria cardamomum, cardamom; Eleusine coracana, raggy; Gossypium herbaceum, indian cotton; Guizotia abyssinica, ramtil; Hibiscus cannabinus, hemp bendy; Hibiscus esculentus, common bendy; Hordeum vulgare, barley; Indigofera tinctoria, common indigo; Ipomæa batatas, sweet potato; Linum usitatissimum, flax; Mangifera indica, mango; Manihot utilissima, tapioca; Morinda citrifolia, ach root; Morinda umbellata, small achroot; Musa paradisiaca, plantain; Nicotiana tabacum, tobacco; Oldenlandia umbellata, chayroot; Oryza sativa, paddy; Panicum frumentaceum, large shaumay; Panicum glaucum, coraly; Panicum italicum, italian millet; Panicum miliaceum, little millet; Panicum miliare, shaumay; Papaver somniferum, opium poppy; Paspalum scrobiculatum, khoda millet; Pennisetum spicatum, spiked millet; Phaseolus aconitifolius, moorman's gram; Phaseolus mungo, green gram; Phaseolus mungo, var. radiatus, black gram; Phaseolus trilobus, field gram; Phœnix dactylifera, arabian date; Phœnix sylvestris, wild date; Pimpinella anisum, anise; Piper betel, betel pepper; Piper nigrum, black pepper; Pisum sativum, garden pea; Psidium guyava, var. pomiferum, red guava; Psidium guyava, var. pyriferum, white guava; Punica granatum, pomegranate; Ricinus communis, castor-oil; Rubia cordifolia, munjeet; Saccharum officinarum, sugar-cane; Sesamum indicum, gingelly; Solanum melongena, brinjaul; Solanum tuberosum, potato; Sorghum vulgare, cholum; Tamarindus indica, tamarind; Trigonella fœnum-græcum, fenugreek; Triticum vulgare, wheat; Typhonium orixense, elephant yam; Vigna catiang, cow gram; Vitis vinifera, grape vine; Zea mays, maize; Zingiber officinale, ginger.—Ach root, morinda; Ajwaun, carum; Anise, pimpinella; Arrowroot, curcuma; Bark, cinchona; Barley, hordeum; Bean, dolichos; Bendy, hibiscus; Bread fruit, artocarpus; Brinjaul, solanum; Cardamom, elettaria; Cashew, anacardium; Castor, ricinus; Chayroot, oldenlandia; Chilly, capsicum; Cholum, sorghum; Cocoanut, cocos; Coffee, coffea; Coraly, panicum; Coriander, coriandrum; Cotton, gossypium; Cucumber, cucumis; Cummin, cuminum; Date, phœnix; Dholl, cajanus; Fenugreek, trigonella; Flax, linum; Garlic, allium; Gingelly, sesamum; Gram, cicer, dolichos, phaseolus, vigna; Groundnut, arachis; Guava, psidium; Hemp, cannabis; Indigo, indigofera; Jute, corchorus; Kale, colocasia; Lablab, cyamopsis; Lime, citrus; Maize, zea; Mango, mangifera; Melon, citrullus, cucumis; Millet, panicum, paspalam, pennisetum; Mohwah, bassia; Munjeet, rubia; Mustard, brassica; Onion, allium; Paddy, oryza; Palmyra, borassus; Pea, pisum; Pepper, piper; Plantain, musa; Pomegranate, punica; Poppy, papaver; Potato, amorphophallus, ipomæa, solanum; Pumpkin, cucurbita; Raggy, eleusine; Ramtil, guizotia; Rape, brassica; Safflower, carthamus; Senna, cassia; Shaumay, panicum; Sugar-cane, saccharum; Sunn, crotalaria; Tamarind, tamarindus; Tapioca, manihot; Tea, camellia; Tobacco, nicotiana; Turmeric, curcuma; Vine, vitis; Wheat, triticum; Yam, typhonium.—"d" The following are tabular lists showing the seasons of principal crops on the three coasts [q.v.] :—

—"e" The tamul Cooral has the following:—சுழன்றுமேர்ப் பின்ன துலக மதனா லுழந்து முழவே தலை—"agriculture, "though laborious, is the most excellent form of labour; for, "people, though they go about in search of various employ-"ments, have at last to resort to the farmer."—உழுவா ருலகத்தார்க் காணி யஃதாற்றா தெழுவாரை யெல்லாம் பொறுத்து—"agriculturists are the linch-pin of the world, "for they support all other workers who cannot till the soil."—உழுதுண்டு வாழ்வாரே வாழ்வார்மற் றெல்லாந் தொழுதுண்டு பின் செல் பவர்—"they alone live who live by agri-"culture; all others lead a cringing, dependent life."—பலகுடை நீழலுந் தங்குடைக்கீழ்க் காண்ப ரலகுடை நீழலவர்—"patriotic farmers desire to bring all other states under "the control of their own king."—இரவா ரிரப்பார்க்கொன் றீவர் கரவாது கைசெய்தூண் மாலை யவர்—"those whose "nature is to live by manual labour will never beg but give "something to those who beg."—உழவினார் கைம்மடங்கி னில்லை விழைவதூஉம் விட்டேமென் பார்க்கு நிலை—"if the farmers' hands are slackened, even the ascetic state will "fail."—தொடிப்புழுதி கஃசா வுணக்கிற் பிடித்தெருவும் வேண்டாது சாலப் படும்—"if the land is dried so as to "reduce one pollum [q.v.] of earth to a quarter, it will grow "plentifully even without a handful of manure [yeroo]."—ஏரினு நன்றா லெருவிடுதல் கட்டபி னீரினு நன்றதன் காப்பு—"manuring is better than ploughing; after weeding, watching is "better than watering."—செல்லான் கிழவ னிருப்பி னிலம் புலந் தில்லாளி னூடி விடும்—"if the owner does not per-"sonally attend to his cultivation, his land will behave like an "angry wife and yield him no pleasure."—இலமென் றசைஇ யிருப்பாரைக் காணி னிலமென்னு நல்லா ணகும்—"the "maiden, earth, will laugh at the sight of those who plead "poverty and lead an idle life."—இன்மையி னின்னாத தியாதெனி னின்மையி னின்மையே யின்னா தது—"there is "nothing that afflicts one like poverty."—தாளாண்மை யென்னுந் தகைமைக்கட் டங்கிற்றே வேளாண்மை யென்னுஞ் செருக்கு—"the lustre of munificence will dwell "only with the dignity of laboriousness or efforts." There is a Tamul proverb:—தொழுதூண் சுவையி னுழுதூணினிது—"to cultivate and eat is more palatable than to serve and "eat;" And another:—சீரைத்தேடி னேரைத்தேடு—"if you "seek wealth see to agriculture." And another:—உழுதவன் கணக்குப்பார்த்தால் உழவுகோற்கூட மிச்சமில்லை—"if "a cultivator examines his accounts, even the ox-goad is not left." And another:—ஓதுவாரெல்லா முழுவான் றலைக்கடையில்—"all learned men may be found at the entrance of the plough-"man's house." And another:—மேலாமினுக்கியைக்கொண்டவன்கெட்டான் மேட்டிலே பயிரிட்டவன் கெட்டான்—"he who marries a woman of great beauty will be ruined, "he who sows on high ground, will be impoverished."——Vellaur (வெள்ளாறு - vellâru, Tam. vellár.*). From (vel, tam. white + áru, tam. river).—"a" River; Salem and South arcot districts. The Northern vellaur; otherwise Vasishta nuddy. Formed by the streams of the Tennaunday mullay and Cullroyen hills in Salem district. Flows through the Ahtoor pass into the plain of South arcot, and across the latter district into the sea at Porto novo. It forms the boundary between South arcot and Trichinopoly for a considerable distance. Above Vriddhau-chellam, it receives the Manimooctah nuddy. Total length about 135 miles. The river is bridged where it crosses the trunk roads, and also by the South indian railway near Porto novo. The trunk road bridge near Porto novo was destroyed by floods and has not been rebuilt. Thirteen anicuts cross the Vellaur in Salem district, and two in South arcot. This river was formerly the boundary between the old Bhoovangherry and Chidambaram talooks of South arcot district.—"b" River, Trichinopoly and Tanjore districts. The Southern vellaur. This, formerly adopted as the common boundary of the Paundyans [q.v.] and Cholans [q.v.], rises in the hills near Maroongapoory in the Trichinopoly district, takes a south-easterly course through the Native state of Poodoocottah, and falls into the sea in Palk strait, south of Point calimere. It was an old custom prevalent amongst the Nautcottay chetties [q.v.] that their women should never be allowed to cross this Vellaur, it being considered an act of bad omen [shacoonam] for women to cross boundaries. Comes down for six or seven days only in year during two monsoons [q.v.].——Vellay (வெள்ளை - vellai, Tam.). White. Pariah proper name. Compare Belloo, Biliya [peyar].——Vellola (വെള്ളോല - vellóla, Mal.). From (above + óla, mal. leaf). Blank leaf. Unregistered document [dastavaiz].——Velly (வெள்ளி - velli, Tam.). Ancient name of the Sundavole country, Repully talook, Kistna district.——Velnauty (వెల్నాటి - velnáti, obl., Tel.). From (velnádu, tel. country so called). A class of Smarta [q.v.] bramins [q.v.] originally from Velnaud in Kistna. Numbers about 30,000.——Vely (వెలి - veli, Tel.; வெளி - veli, Tam.). Outside.——Ven (வெண் - ven, Tam.). Same as Vel. White. Pure.——Venaud (വേണാട് - vénátu, Mal.). From (ven, mal. white + nátu, mal. country). Seventeenth district [naud] of Keralam [q.v.], one of the twelve districts of low Tamul. Part of Mooshicam. Now Travancore.——Venbah (வெண்பா - venbá, Tam.). From (ven, tam. pure + pá, tam. verse). A particular kind of Tamul verse; the best verse as distinguished from other varieties. One kind, used in the Cooral [q.v.], resembles the distich, since it consists of two lines; of these, the first must contain four feet and the second three. But the following kind of venbah from Nauladi-yaur is most in use:—வெய்ய-குரற்றோன்றி-வெஞ்சினவே-றுட்கொளினும் பெய்யு-மழைமுகிலைப்-பேணுவரால்-வையத்திருள்பொழியும்-குற்றம்-பலவெனினும்-யார்க்கு-ம்பொருள்பொழிவா-ர்மேற்றே-புகழ்—"As the clouds "which send forth a fearful sound and big with angry thunder-"bolt are yet cherished for the rain they pour down, so in the "world he who liberally distributes his wealth is praised, though "his many crimes spread darkness around him." Most of the ethical works are in the last metre [bhaushay].——Venca (వెంక - venka, Tel.). Short for vencata, the sacred mountain. Name applied to males and females. Familiary Vencoo, Venky [peyar].——Vencajee (ونکاجی - venkáji, Hind.). From (venka, short for vénkata, san. the tripatty hill + jí, hind. mahratta honorific title). VENCATAGHERRY (వెంకటగిరి - venkatagiri,* Tel.). From (vénkata, san. vishnu, of the white hill + giri, san. mountain) [vel].——(1) Zemindarry, Nellore district. The whole Zemindarry consists of two divisions in the south of the district, Vencatagherry and Polore, and two divisions in the north, Darshy and Podily; also a number of villages scattered about in different government talooks. Total villages 730, besides 617 hamlets. The southern division comprises five talooks, viz., Manoobole, Mullam, Polore, Sagootore, Vencatagherry. The northern division consists of five talooks, viz., Cotcherlacote, Darshy, Maurella, Pelloor, Podily. Swarna, in Kistna district, belongs to the zemindar. With Calastry, Bomrauz or Carvetnugger, and Sydapore, the Zemindarry was in 1800 made into the British district of Western pollems [q.v.]. In 1808 Vencatagherry, Sydapore, and the Pamoor talook of Calastry were transferred to Nellore district. The house of Vencatagherry was founded by Chevy reddy 28 generations ago. Chevy reddy's greatgrandson, Yerra yautsama naidoo, a great warrior, drove the Paundya rajahs of Madura from Conjeeveram. His successors distinguished themselves in all parts of Telingana [q.v.] as far north as Rajahmundry and as far south as Madras. In 1751, the zemindar assisted the English against Hyder ally, who destroyed the town in retaliation. The family has always been distinguished for its loyalty to the British. A sunnud e milkyat istimrar [q.v.] was forwarded to the zemindar with a letter from Lord Clive, dated 24th August 1802. The zemindar is the chief of the Velama [q.v.] caste. The present zemindar is the 28th of the line. The peshcush [q.v.] at present is Rs. 373,875. In 1689 Bungauroo yautsama naidoo was rewarded with the title of Rajah bahadur by the Court of Hyderabad. See vol. I, 56.——(2) Zemindarry deputy tahsildar's division, Nellore district. Pay Rs. 120. Area 426 square miles. Bounded on the north by Raupore talook and north-east by Goodoor talook, south by North arcot district and Polore division of the zemindarry, east by Polore division separated by Swarnamookhy, and west by the Veligonda range which separates it from the Cuddapah district. The division extends in a south-westerly direction by the side of Veligonda hills. It is traversed by the Vencatagherry river which rises in the Veligonda hills and flows westward as far as Baulayapulley in the division and thence turning eastward enters the Goodoor talook. The passes [ghaut] through the Veligondas lead over into the Cuddapah district. The principal pass is Gungalaity canama. The Vencatagherry droog is nearly highest point in the Veligondas, excepting Penchalcondah. The soil is generally regady [regar] and fertile. The southern and western portions are hilly with red earth soil and generally poor. The chief productions are dry grains [q.v.]. Indigo [q.v.] is cultivated; tobacco [pogauk] also. Cloths are woven at Manoolaulpett, Vencatagherry, and some few other villages. Bangle earth [gauzoo sowdoo] is plentiful, and many villagers live by making bangles [gauzoo] which are sent to Madras, &c. There is some sport in the division. It is irrigated by the Maumidy caulwa, Swarnamookhy, and the Vencatagherry river. The Vencatagherry river is used by digging spring channels [q.v.] and by constructing dams for irrigation. The waters of this river flow into the Goodoor madoogoo, and irrigates a large area in the Goodoor talook. The country to the north and east presents a plain surface, intersected by numerous jungle streams which feed the several tanks. Principal trig. stations:—Cayyoor, Goorramcondah. The leading places, &c., in the division are the following.——Cayyoor (కయ్యూరు - kayyúru, Tel.). From (kayya, tel. field + úru, tel. village). Village; lat. 14° 02′; long. 79° 42′; from Nellore S.W. 37 miles; from Raupore S.S.E. 15 miles; from Vencatagherry N.N.E. 7 miles. Large tank. Trig. station in lat. 14° 00′ 41·89″; long. 79° 42′ 00·86″; height 301 feet; from Vencatagherry N.E. 6 miles; from Vengopaulpooram S.E. 2 miles.——Goorramcondah (గుర్రంకొండ - gurramkonda, Tel.). From (gurramu, tel. horse + konda, tel. hill). Village; pop. 289; lat 14° 01′; long. 79° 52′; from Nellore S.W. 32 miles; from Raupore S.E. 23 miles; from Vencatagherry E. 16 miles. In the midst of thick jungle. Trig. station in lat. 14° 00′ 45·21″; long. 79° 52′ 37·04″; height 337 feet; from Goorramcondah E. 1 mile; from Vencatagherry E.N.E. 17 miles.——Manoolaulpett (మనులాలపేట - manulálapéta, Tel.). From (manulálá, tel. proper name + péta, tel. suburb). Pop. 626; lat. 13° 56′; long. 79° 28′; from Nellore S.W. 44 miles; from Raupore S. 19 miles; from Vencatagherry S.S.E. 2 miles. Large weaving place.——Veligonda (వెలిగొండ - veligonda, Tel.). See sep. title.——Vencatagherry (వెంకటగిరి - venkatagiri, Tel.). See below.——(3) Village, Head-quarters of Deputy tahsildar and Special sub-registrar; Nellore dist., Vencatagherry division; pop. 9,623; lat. 13° 58′; long. 79° 37′; height 286 feet; from Madras N.W. 78 miles; from Naidoopett W. 21 miles; from Nellore S.W. 43 miles; from Ongole S.S.W. 109 miles; from Raupore S.S.E. 17 miles. The chief town of one of the two southern divisions of the Vencátagherry zemindarry. Place of residence of the rajah, who owns the estate. Traveller's bungalow [q.v.]. It is surrounded by the Vencatagherry river which flows by it in two branches. Two temples, Vishnoo and Shiva. In June of every year a great car festival [ratotsavam] takes place for ten days. Railway station is 1½ miles from the town at Periyavaram.——(4) A hill fort; lat. 13° 58′; long. 79° 31′; height 3,080 feet; from Nellore S.W. 48 miles; from Raupore S.S.W. 16 miles; from Vencatagherry W. 8 miles. Fort on a hill 6 miles west of Vencatagherry. Formerly residence of the zemindar [q.v.]. Some buildings yet remain. Stone steps lead up. Now abandoned.——(5) River; see above. Called also (kaivalyanadí), meaning beatitude + river.

VENGAY (வேங்கை - véngai, Tam.). From (vé, tam. to burn) [vem]; tropical plant. Botanically the Pterocarpus genus, leguminosæ [vricsham, 48]. Trees, mostly tropical; leaves alternate pinnate; flowers showy yellow; pods flat, round or oval, thick in the middle and containing one to three seeds; yield gum kino [q.v.]. The species best known to the natives are:—indicus [padouk], marsupium [common vengay], santalinus [red sanders].——Common vengay (पीतसार - pítasára, San.; बिंबला - bimbalá, Mahr.; بجیسر - bijesar, Hind. and Dec.; ಒಳ್ಳೆಹೊನ್ನೆ - ollehonne, Can.; ರಕ್ತಹೊನೆ - raktahone, Coorg; వేగిస - végisa, Tel.; വേന്ന - vénna, Mal.; ගම්මළු - gammalu, Singh.; வேங்கை - véngai, Tam.). San. from (píta, san. yellow + sára, san. essence); generally applied to sandalwood. Hind. from sanscrit. Dec. from sanscrit. Can. from (olle, can. good + honne, can. the tree). Tel. from (vé, tam. to burn), tropical plant. Mal. from tamul. Tam. from (vé, tam. to burn); tropical plant. Hind. also (pítasála), meaning yellow saul, shorea robusta, gærtn. Can. also (bénga), from tamul; (honne), meaning golden, from yellow stain when damp; (raktahonne), red variety; (dhindaga); (bibla). Tel. also (végi); (égisa) [fig mango]; (égi); (peddégi), meaning large + the tree; (gándámrigamunetturuchettu), meaning rhinoceros + blood + tree; (símagándámrigamunetturuchettu), meaning foreign + the tree. Mal. also (karintakara), meaning black + cassia tora, linn.; (malantakara), meaning wild tora. Tam. also (kándámirugamirattam), meaning rhinoceros + blood [sumatra dragon's blood]; (kuriñji); (vandunnámalarmaram), meaning beetle + uneaten + flower + tree, flower tree untouched by beetles [champak]; cf. foreign agatty. Title otherwise Amboyna kino, Coorinjy, Indian dragon's blood, Indian kino, Malabar kino, Vaigisa. Botanically Pterocarpus [vengay] marsupium roxb., leguminosæ [vricsham, 58]. Alias Pterocarpus bilobus. Tree, 40–80 feet; leaves unequally pinnated; leaflets five to seven, alternate, elliptical, usually deeply emarginate, glabrous; panicles terminal; calyx five-cleft; corolla papilionaceous; petals long-clawed, waved or curled on the margins; stamens combined into a sheath, split down to the base on one side, and half-way down the other; legume long-stalked, surrounded by a membranaceous wing, 1 or rarely 2-seeded; flowers pale yellow, flowering in rainy season. Found in forest; cultivated in gardens; abundant throughout presidency; next to teak [q.v.] and blackwood [q.v.] the most valuable timber tree; size and manner of growth differ very much under different circumstances. Reddish gum resin [googal] exudes from wounds in the bark, known as malabar kino [q.v.]; consists of dark, blackish-red, angular fragments rarely larger than a pea [calauyam], easily splitting into still smaller pieces, which are seen to be perfectly transparent, of a bright garnet [tamrah] hue, and amorphous under the microscope; in cold water they sink, but partially dissolve by agitation, forming a solution of very astringent taste, and a pale flocky residue; the latter is taken up when the liquid is made to boil, and deposited on cooling in a more voluminous form; malabar kino dissolves almost entirely in spirits of wine ·838, affording a dark reddish solution, acid to litmus paper, which by long keeping sometimes assumes a gelatinous condition; it is readily soluble in solution of caustic alkali, and to a large extent in a saturated solution of sugar [q.v.]. This kino has been known in the european markets for upwards of a century, but was first imported from western africa and not from this country; prepared here at an early date for the european market in early part of present century on a plantation of the east india company called anjarcundy a few miles from tellicherry. For extraction a perpendicular incision with lateral ones leading into it is made in the trunk, at the foot of which is placed a vessel to receive the outflowing juice; this juice soon thickens, and when sufficiently dried by exposure to the sun and air is packed into wooden boxes for exportation. Physiological actions and therapeutic uses of malabar kino are similar to those of catechu [q.v.], but being milder in its operation it is better adapted for children and delicate females; substituted for british dragon's blood, botany bay kino, log-wood and rhatany; in pharm. officinal. Leaves, a favorite food of cattle [maud] and goats [vellaud]. The heart-wood makes a yellow dye [shauyam]. Timber dark colored and strong, much prized for building purposes, in some parts fetches as high a price as teak [q.v.]; is durable, tolerably close-grained, brittle, not easily worked; when steeped gives a blue tinge to water; best timber for exposed venetians and weather boards; gives out a yellow stain when damp; attacked by the teredo navalis when used for the bottoms of ships; apt to warp if sawn green; the stem is valued for house-posts beyond any other, being impervious to white-ants [q.v.]; smaller portions are carved into images. See Butea species [palaus] for Bengal kino.——Hill vengay (மலைவேங்கை - malaivéngai, Tam.). Same as Thorny vengay.——Lesser vengay (జిట్టేగి - jittégi, Tel.). Same as Malabar black wood.——Thorny vengay (असन - asana, San.; असण - asana, Mahr.; کسی - kassi, Hind.; سن - sun, Dec.; ಅಸನಮರ - asanamara, Can.; కొరమద్ది - koramaddi, Tel.; କୋଶି - kosi, Oor.; മുള്ളുവേന്ന - mulluvénna, Mal.; කටකල - katakála, Singh.; முள்வேங்கை - mulvéngai, Tam.). Title from thorns on large branches. San. from (as, san. to throw), from spreading branches. Can. from sanscrit. Tel. from (kóra, tel. sharp + maddi, tel. terminalia). Mal. from (mullu, mal. thorn + vénna, mal. the tree, pterocarpus marsupium, roxb.). Singh. from (katu, singh. thorny + kála, singh. butea frondosa, roxb.). Tam. from (mul, tam. thorn + véngai, tam. the tree). San. also (ashana), meaning same; (ásana), meaning same. Hind. also (khaja); (gauli); (asan). Can. also (gojé); (gunjanamara). Tel. also (koramánu), meaning sharp + tree; (duriyamaddi); (ánnemu); (karáratti); (vadisha); (gundebigulu), meaning heart + tightness; (patangamu); (shiriánnem), meaning small + the tree; (donkibúra). Oor. also (gaurkassi), red variety. Tam. also (malaivéngai), meaning mountain + the tree; (kamuji). Title otherwise Coramaddy, Cora murdah, Hill vengay. Botanically Bridelia retusa, muller, var. genuina, euphorbiaceæ [vricsham, 118]. Alias Bridelia crenulata, spinosa; Cluytia retusa, spinosa. Large deciduous tree, 30–40 feet; bark scabrous; branches numerous, spreading; thorns large, few, chiefly on the large branches; leaves oblong, alternate, pointed, entire, with conspicuous parallel veins running from centre to circumference; spikes axillary or terminal; flowers aggregate, small, greenish yellow, males and females together. When wounded, the bark exudes a blood-red juice, which stains the hands and is very astringent; the dry bark is externally of a light-brown color, and has small fungous protuberances of dead suber; internally it is smooth and fibrous, of a cinnamon [q.v.] color; taste purely astringent; if soaked in water it gives out much mucilage; the fibrous portion of the bark is very tough and strong. Bark is medicinally a strong astringent; leaves a vermifuge. Leaves eaten by cattle [maud]. Bark used in tanning [chamrah]. Wood a dirty red or copper color, very stiff, strong, close-grained and durable, not easily worked; stands the action of water. There are other varieties of retusa:—roxburghiana and squamosa. Another species of bridelia is Montana; moderate-sized. deciduous tree; flowers greenish; mountains on east of presidency; leaves lopped for cattle fodder; wood similar to retusa; hard, red and very durable. Another species is Stipularis; large shrub; flower small, yellowish green; wood greyish-brown, moderately hard.——White vengay (வெள்வேங்கை - velvéngai, Tam.). Same as Common sirissa.

VENGY (వేంగి - vengi, Tel.). The ancient name of southern Telingana [q.v.] between Godavery and Kistna rivers, the capital of which was situated about 5 miles north and a little west of Ellore on the road to Nagpore viâ Bhadrachellam, and exhibits now extensive remains of walls and fortifications with the ruins of the Chitraratasawmy goody still bearing the same name. The religion of the dynasty was Booddhist [booddha] as far as known. Two small modern villages occupy a trifling portion of the ancient site, which are still called Pedda vengy and Chinna vengy [charitram]. Compare Andhram and Calingam. See vol. I (13), (132).——Vaigy (వేగి - végi, Tel.). More modern form of Vengy, generally used for the town.

VENN (వెన్ను - vennu, Tel.). Back. Suffix in place names; as Taudivenn, meaning the rear place with palmyras.

VENOO (वेणु - vénu, San.). From (vé, san. to weave, sew); from original use. Bamboo [q.v.]; reed.——Vengopaul (वेणुगोपाल - vénugópála, San.). From (above + gópála, san. cowherd krishna). One of Krishnan's [q.v.] manifestations in which he is represented as playing upon a flute [pillan grovy] like a shepherd boy.

VEPPOO (വെപ്പു - veppu, Mal.). From (vai, tam. to lay). A deposit. In Palghaut same as Otty. See vol. II, 104.——Vypeen (വൈപ്പി - vaippi, Mal.). From (veppu, mal. deposit). Mal. also (putiyaveppu), meaning place formed by new deposit. Town, Island; Cochin state, Cochin tal.; lat. 9° 58′; long. 76° 17′; from Bangalore S.W. 225 miles; from Cannanore S.E. 145 miles; from Cochin city N. 1 mile; from Chittoor S.W. 60 miles; from Ernacolum W.S.W. 1¼ miles; from Madras S.W. 346 miles; from Trichore S. 38 miles; from Tripoontora W. 7 miles. In 1341 the sea threw up the island on the north side of Cochin. The waters breaking through the banks of the Cochin river swept away the adjacent village and formed a large river and back-water and so spacious a harbour that large ships lie safely at anchor in the river on the north-east side of the town of Cochin. Vypeen is 13 miles long and 1 broad. It is bounded south and west by the Arabian sea, and on all other sides by the backwater. The natives date their era [saca] from the period of its origin. Zamorin [q.v.] defeated here in 1503, and throughout the Travancore wars with Mysore this was a disputed point. The southern portion belongs to the British. In the north is the fort of Ayicottah. Roman catholic church built in 1666. Colonized by Eurasian roman catholics.

VERPAN (வெற்பன் - verban, Tam.). From (verbu, tam. hill). Chief of hilly tract [desham, poroappan, shilamban]. For Collyverpan or ruler of colly see sep. title.

VERRY (వెఱ్ఱి - verri, Tel.; வெறி - veri, Tam.). From (virai, tam. to shake). Mad, wild. Fermented toddy. Plant first term, indicating wild growth or inferiority, often joining two genera. Ex., where transl. is of second term:—Citrullus ciliatus (verriputtsa), cucumis trigonus; Guizotia abyssinica (verrinúgu), sesamum indicum; Oldenlandia heynei (verrinélavému), andrographis paniculata. See gloss. paragraphs.

VETAULAM (वेताल - vétála, San.). From (ava, san. away + ita, san. gone + álaya, san. house). A goblin who haunts cemeteries and animates dead bodies.——Vetaula puncha vimshaty (वेतालपञ्चविंशति - vétálapañchavimshati, San.). From (above + pañcha, san. five + vimshati, san. twenty). Twenty-five tales of a demon. By Jambhala bhattan. Original of the hindee Beitaul pacheesy [q.v.]. The stories are told by a Vetaulam to king Vicramadityan [q.v.], who tries to carry off a dead body occupied by the Vetaulam.——Vetauly (வேதாளி - véthâli, Tam.). A demoness.

VETTOO (വെട്ടു - vettu, Mal.; வெட்டு - vettu, Tam.). Digging; to cut.——Vettivair (வெட்டிவேர் - vettivér, Tam.). From (above + vér, tam. root). Cuscus root.——Vetty (వెట్టి - vetti, Tel; வெட்டி - vetti, Tam.).—"a" Worthless, as deserving to be cut down.—"b" Hence also drudgery.—"c" Village scavenger. Village peon [q.v.]. Messenger. Acts as guide to public officers and travellers. Always pariah. Vettiyaun is the same. Commonly called Yetty [balootah].—"d" A cut road [rustah].

VI (वि - vi, San.). Intensive prefix; prefix of division, separation, negation, or privation; sign of sexagesimal division.——Veejam (वीज - víja, San.). From (vi, san. intensive prefix + jan, san. to generate). Source, primary cause or principle. The mystical syllable which forms the essential part of the muntram [q.v.] of any deity. Veeja ganitam is algebra; see Ganitam.——Veesabuddy (వీసబడి - visabadi, Tel.). From (vísamu, tel. one-sixteenth + badi, tel. suffix of condition). A coparcenary village, of which the lands are allotted by sixteenths and fractions of sixteenths among the hereditary proprietors.——Veesam (ವೀಸ - vísa, Can.; వీసము - visamu, Tel.; வீசம் - vísam, Tam.). From (vítham, tam. from vi, san. suffix of division + hita, san. placed); division, apportionment. The sixteenth of anything; a share.—"a" Linear measure used in measuring land. 5 mooras = 1 veesam; 16 veesams = 1 puggam [alavay, 1b]. Approximate actual value, 1 veesam = 8¼ feet.—"b" Superficial measure. In vizagapatam 16 parrahs = 1 veesam; 16 veesams = 1 catty [alavay, 2b]; approximate actual value, 1 veesam = 1·2173 acres. In Nellore, veesam is 1/16 of a gorroo which is 3·161 acres. In Cuddapah veesam is 1/16 of a coonta, 40 of which make an acre; and a veesam = 7 9/16 square yards. Compare Cawny, Vithaicottay.—"c" Liquid measure. 1¼ pucka seers = 1 veesam, 16 veesams = 1 audam [alavay, 4a]. Approximate actual value, 1 veesam = 82¼ cubic inches. About 1¼ pucka seer. See vol. I, 609; II, 519.——Veetham (வீதம் - vítham, Tam.). From (vihita, san. fixed). Rate.——Veicoonta gaty (वैकुण्ठगति - vaikunt'hagati, San.). From (vaikunt'ha, san. paradise + gati, san. going). Obtaining Veicoontam. Euphemistic for death. Compare Shiva locam.——Veicoontam (वैकुण्ठ - vaikunt'ha, San.; வைகுண்டம் - vaigundam, Tam.). From (vi, san. negative prefix + kunt'ha, san. indolence); ever fresh. The heaven of Vishnoo. There is a Tamul proverb:—அசுழிவேலை விழுந்தமுதலைக்குஅதுவேவைகுண்டம்—"the moat into "which the alligator [mugger] has plunged is to itself veicoon-"tam." Compare Keilausam. Title used ironically for a dungeon. Also a Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar], as short for next item. See vol. I (74).——Veicoonta nautan (वैकुण्ठनाथ - vaikunt'hanát'ha, San.). From (vaikunt'ha, san. paradise + nát'ha, san. lord). Vishnoo, the lord of Veicoontam.——Veicoonta yecaudashy (వైకుంఠైకాదశి - vaikunt'haikádashi, Tel.). Heaven of vishnoo + eleventh lunar day. Also called Swarga dwaura yecaudashy; also Swargavausal yecaudashy; also Mooccoty yecaudashy. Lunar [chaundra maunam] festival [pundigay, 3a], subject to intercalation [adhicam]. On eleventh day of waxing moon [shooclapacsham] of ninth lunar month Margashiram [mausam] between 26th November and 25th December and is a special festival of the Veishnavas. Fasting day for Bramins and Shoodras. Particularly sacred at Shreerungam [maryauday].——Veidhrity (वैधृति - vaidhriti, San.). From (vi, san. suffix of separation + dhrita, san. held); stopping place.—"a" The index [yogam] star of Raivaty [q.v.], the 27th lunar asterism, either η or ζ Piscium [nacshatram], meenam [q.v.]. Veidhrity is the hindoo First point of Aries [maisham] in the fixed sidereal zodiac [raushy chuckram]; see Madhyama sowra maunam and Nacshatram. Longitudes from this star are known as Nirayana spootam or Dhroovacam [q.v.] or fixed longitudes; the longitudes from the true vernal equinox [craunty pautam, maishauyanam, vishoo] being known as Sauyana [q.v.] spootam or longitudes liable to precession [craunty pauta gaty] error. The space between this star and the true vernal equinoctial point is known as Ayanaumsham [q.v.].—"b" Veidhrity is the term also for a particular position of the sun [sooryan] and moon [chundran] when they are on the same side of either solstice and of equal declination [craunty] but of opposite direction. This is considered a malignant aspect in astrology [jyotisham, vaunashastram].——Veidooryam (वैदूर्य - vaidúrya, San.; వైడూర్యము - vaidúryamu, Tel.). From (vidúra, san. very distant). An ancient country.—"a" Northern parts of Western ghauts [q.v.].—"b" Lapis lazuli. This silicious fossil, which the Greeks and Romans called cyaneus, is of a saxon-blue color, inclining to purple. It is only translucent at the edges and is variegated with bright yellow veins and speckles owing to pyrites [teecull]. Its powder furnishes the paint known in Europe by the name of ultramarine. One of the nine gems or Navaratnam [ratnam].——Veinateyam (వైనతేయము - vainatéyamu, Tel). Means garoodan. Godavery district, Amalaupooram talook. A mouth of the Godavery. Separates the Amalaupooram and Narsapore talooks. An irrigation canal from Lolla is taken to the Nagara khandam across Vasishta by means of an aqueduct about half a mile long near Gunnavaram.——Veiraugyam (वैराग्य - vairágya, San.). From (vi, san. privative prefix + rága, san. passion). Suppression of worldly passions, whether of affection or aversion [beiraugy].——Veishaishicam (वैशेषिक - vaishéshika, San.). From (vishish, san. to distinguish). A division of the Nyauyam school of philosophy. Attributed to an author Canaudan [q.v.], extending the Nyauyam [q.v.] to physical inquiries. The most interesting of all the systems, both from its practical character and from the parallels it offers to european philosophical ideas. It begins by arranging its inquiries under seven Padaurtams [q.v.], which, as they are more properly categories, i.e., an enumeration of certain general, properties or attributes that may be predicated or affirmed of existing things, are now the generally received categories of neiyauyican. They are as follows:—Substance or dravyam; Quality or property or goonam; Act or action, carmam; Generality or community of properties, saumaunyam; Particularity or individuality, vishaisham; Co-inherence or perpetual intimate relation, samavauyam; Non-existence or negation of existence, abhauvam. Compare the ten aristotelian categories:—οὐσία, substance; ποσόν, how much? quantity; ποιόν, of what kind? quality; πρός τι, in relation to what? relation; ποιεῖν, action; πάσχειν, passiveness or passivity; ποῦ, where? position in space; πότε, when? position in time; κεῖσθαι, local situation; ἔχειν, possession. The seven veishaishicam categories are all subdivided.—"a" There are nine Dravyams [q.v.]:—earth, water, light, air, ether, time, space, soul the internal organ, and mind.—"b" There are seventeen Goonams [q.v.] or qualities:—color, savour, odour, tangibility, numbers, extensions, individuality, conjunction, disjunction, priority, posteriority, intellections, pleasure, pain, desire, aversion, and volition.—"c" The third category, Carmam [q.v.], act or action, is thus divided:—elevation literally throwing upwards, depression or throwing downwards, contraction, dilatation, and going or motion in general.—"d" The fourth category, Saumaunyam, generality, is said to be twofold, viz., higher or param and lower or aparam; the first being simple existence, applicable to genus; the second being substantiality, applicable to species.—"e" The fifth category, Vishaisham, particularity, belongs to the nine eternal substances of the first category, viz., mind, soul, time, place, and the five atoms [bhootam] of earth, water, light, air, and ether, all of which have an eternal ultimate difference, distinguishing each from the other.—"f" The sixth category, Samavauyam, co-inherence or intimate relation, is of only one kind. This relation is that which exists between a substance and its qualities, between atoms and what is formed out of them, or between any object and the general idea connected with it. Cf. tanmautram subtle atoms, and punchabhootam gross atoms therefrom, of Saunkhyam. In connection with this sixth category may be mentioned the Nyauyam [q.v.] theory of causation. A cause is declared to be that which invariably precedes an effect which otherwise could not be, and three kinds of causes are enumerated, viz.:—Co-inherence cause, or that resulting from intimate and constant relation; substantial cause, as threads are the substantial cause of cloth; this corresponds to the material cause of aristotle; Non-substantial cause, as the putting together of the threads is of cloth; this corresponds to the formal cause; Instrumental cause as the weaver's tools, the loom, or the skill of the weaver himself, &c., are of cloth; this corresponds to the efficient cause. Aristotle's four causes are:—Material cause, i.e., the matter ὕλη, from which anything is made, as marble of a statue, silver of a goblet; Formal cause, i.e., the specific form or pattern according to which anything is made, as a drawing or plan is the formal cause of the building of a house; Efficient cause, i.e., the origin of the principle of motion, ὅθεν ἡ ἀρχὴ τῆς κινήσεως, as the energy of a workman is the prime-mover in producing any work; Final cause, i.e., the purpose for which anything is made, the motive for its production or the end served by its existence.—"g" As to the seventh category in veishaishicam, Abhauvam or non-existence, four kinds are specified, viz.:—Antecedent, or the non-existence of anything before it began to exist, as a jar not yet made; Cessation of existence, as of a jar when it is smashed to pieces; Mutual non-existence as of a jar in cloth; Absolute non-existence, as of fire in a lake. See vol. I (74) [matam].——Veitarany (वैतराणि - vaitarani, San.). From (vi, san. intensive prefix + tar, san. to cross). The Indian styx. ——Veivaswatan (वैवस्वत - vaivasvata, San.). From (vivasvat, san. the brilliant one). The seventh Menoo [q.v.]. His son Icshwhuk was head of the ancient aryan [q.v.] Solar race [sooryavamsham]. He much resembles the biblical Noah. The number of years elapsed since his appearance is by native shastrams stated to be 18,618,733.——Vibhactam (विभक्त - vibhakta, San.). From (above + bhaj, san. to divide). Divided; either the property or the sharer. Partitioned among separated heirs [avibhactam].——Vibhaugam (विभाग - vibhága, San.). From (above + bhaj, san. to divide). According to law, either the simple apportionment of the property of a deceased person amongst his heirs who may nevertheless hold the whole in common, or sometimes the several distribution of the shares amongst the sharers and their mutual separation. For undivided family see Avibhactam. For hindoo law of inheritance see Dauyam. For partition generally see Bhaugam. For mahomedan law of inheritance see Vaurs.——Vibheeshanan (विभीषण - vibhíshana, San.). From (above + bhíshana, san. terrifying). A younger brother of Ravanan [q.v.]. After the death of Ravanan [q.v.] he was raised by Rama [q.v.] to the throne of Lunka [q.v.]. He is one of the ever-living saints [chiranjeevy]. ——Vibhoo (विभु - vibhu, San.). From (above + bhú, san. to exist). Powerful.——Vibhooty (विभूति - vibhúti, San.; விபூதி - vibúthi, Tam.). From (above + bhúti, san. wealth). The ashes of burnt cowdung [shauny]; made with ceremonies and muntrams [q.v.]. With these ashes the forehead, breast and shoulders are smeared in the case of Shoodras [q.v.] of the Sheiva class. Aundies [q.v.] or Sheiva ascetics have their face and all visible portions of their body smeared over with the ashes. Sheiva bramins draw three lines with them on their forehead mostly horizontal [tripoondram], but sometimes curvilineal [uugooly toranam]. On the central line Smartas [q.v.] place a dark circular spot [pottoo, tilacam]. Three lines or tripoondram [q.v.] are marked on the shoulders and breasts of all Sheiva or Smarta bramins. Most local Sheiva pooraunams [q.v.] have a section entitled Vibhooty mahatwam or mahimay, narrating the wonders done by its use [naumam, neer, tirneer]. ——Vicalay (विकला - vikalá, San.). From (above + kalá, san. time). Indian minute. 6 praunacalays = 1 vicalay; 60 vicalays = 1 dandam or indian hour [caulam, 6]. Approximate actual value, 1 vicalay or indian minute = 24 english seconds. Same as San. vighaticay [caulam, 5], Hind. pal, Tam. vinaudy [caulam, 1].——Vicauram (विकार - vikára, San.). From (vikri, san. to change). Change from a natural state, applied to a product or production in cosmogony [saunkhyam]. Cf. Vicrity. ——Vicramadityan (विक्रमादित्य - vikramáditya, San.). From (vikrama, san. power + áditya, san. sun). Title assumed by numerous princes. But especially a ruler of Oojjein who gave his name to an era [saca] and who flourished some century and a half before Shalivahanan [q.v.]. Era begins 56 B.C. He has many names; as Vicrama sainan, powerful armied; Vicramasimhan, powerful lion; Vicramarcan as below; Vicraman. It is said that Oojjein was destroyed by earthquake [mahy campam] in his time. For his nine poets see Navaratnam.——Vicramam (विक्रम - vikrama, San.). From (above + kram, san. to step). Prowess. Vicraman is vishnoo [q.v.] in his vaumana [q.v.] avatar [q.v.]; cf. trivicraman. Vicraman is also short for vicramadityan. Has given names to many south indian rulers, especially of chola [q.v.] and paundyan [q.v.] dynasties [raj].——Vicramarca charitram (विक्रमार्कचरित - vikramárkacharita, San.). From (vikrama, san. prowess + arka, san. sun + charita, san. story). Or Dwautrimshat saulabhanjicay or the thirty-two games with the wooden puppet. Favorite collection of tales [katay]. The original in sanscrit consists of 32 stories in prose. The author not known. They are supposed to be narrated by puppets placed on the throne of Vicraman, to king Bhoja when he attempted ascending it. Written by Gopoorauz in eight books [hamsa vimshaty].——Vicramarcan (विक्रमार्क - vikramárka, San.). From (vicrama, san. prowess + arka, san. sun). Same as Vicramadityan.——Vicramorvashy (विक्रमोर्वशी - vikramórvashí, San.). From (vikrama, san. valour + úrvashí, san. the divine courtezan, so called), valour-won oorvashy. A drama by Calidass [q.v.]. In five acts, telling how Poorooravan by his valour rescued Oorvashy from a demon who carried her off, and afterwards married her.——Vicravaundy (விக்கிரவாண்டி - vikkiravándi, Tam. vikravándi *). Called after Vicrama paundyan. Railway station; South arcot dist., Villoopooram tal.; pop. 2,734; acres 3,152; lat. 12° 02′; long. 79° 35′; height 126 feet; from Cuddalore N.W. 27 miles; from Villoopooram N.N.E. 8 miles; from the sea W. 22 miles.——Vicrayam (विक्रय - vikraya, San.). From (above + krí, san to sell). Sale. Vicraya chit is a bill of sale, otherwise Vicraya shausanam.——Vicrity (विकृति - vikriti, San.). From (above + kri, san. to do). Change [vicauram]. In the Saunkhyam [q.v.] philosophy, a generated effect, not producing any other effect, and so distinguished from Pracrity [q.v.]. Also one of the 60 years of the Jovian cycle [brihaspaty chuckram, yoog].——Vicshaipam (विक्षेप - vikshépa, San.). From (above + kship, san. to throw).—"a" Projection; one of the two modes in which avidyay [anyaunam] or ignorance operates on the soul [autmam], the other being auvarnam [vedauntam]. This is that power of ignorance, which, affecting the soul in its state of pure intelligence [chit], raises upon it the appearance of a world [mauyay], producing first the five subtle elements [tanmautram] and drawing out from them seventeen subtle bodies and the five gross elements [bhootam, tatwam]. Compare Avastay.—"b" Celestial latitude, with double meaning according as theoretical or practical. In theoretical hindoo astronomy vicshaipam is exactly the same as in the european system, that is to say reckoned by taking great circles proceeding from the pole of the ecliptic [craunty mundalam], otherwise circles of celestial latitude, as circles of measurement [rishy raikhay]. In practical hindoo astronomy however the circles of measurement are great circles from the pole of the equator [naudy mundalam], otherwise declination or meridian circles [raikhay], which fall upon the ecliptic thus at an angle and not perpendicularly [golayantram]; vicshaipam then is an arc of the meridian passing through an object intercepted between the object and its intersection with the ecliptic, and is somewhat longer than the perpendicular to the ecliptic. In the former case the latitude or vicshaipam is called aspootam or invisible, in the latter case it is called spootam or visible. For terrestrial latitude see Acsham. For longitudes see Deshauntaram, Dhroovacam and Sauyanam; also Veidhrity and Vishoo.——Videha moocty (विदेहमुक्ति - vidéhamukti, San.). From (above + déha, san. body + mukti, san. deliverance). Complete deliverance [mocsham].——Vidhy (विधि - vidhi, San.). From (vidhá, san. to enjoin). Rule. Fate. Name of Bramha [q.v.]. Bramha is supposed to write the fate of each human being on the forehead. The crooked lines on the frontal bone of the skull are this writing. Talay yezhoot or writing on the head is commonly used for fate.——Vighadiya (विघटिका - vighatiká, San.; ವಿಘಳಿಗೆ - vighalige, Can.; విఘడియ - vighadiya, Tel.). From (vi, san. prefix of separation + ghat, san. to join). Division. Indian minute. Measure of sidereal or star time. 60 params or indian seconds = 1 vighadiya; 60 vighadiyas = 1 ghadiya or indian hour [caulam, 5]. Approximate actual value, 1 vighadiya = 24 english seconds. Same as San. vicalay [caulam, 6]; Hind. pal [caulam]; Tam. vinaudy [caulam, 1]. ——Vignam (विघ्न - vighna, San.). From (above + han, san. to kill). Obstacle.——Vigneshwaran (विघ्नेश्वर - vighnéshvara, San.). From (vighna, san. obstacle + íshvara, san. lord). Implying a power to forbid success or fame; the idea of malevolence to be averted is connected with all deity in s. india; compare the village goddesses [amman]. Called in the north Ganesh [q.v.], by the english the Belly-god, and by the ordinary people of the country Pillaiyaur [q.v.] or the noble child. The elder son of Shiva [q.v.] and Parvaty [q.v.]. One of the most popular of the deities of southern india. He is a male Minerva, a Lar, and the Janus of the public ways; his image stands in every house, and is painted on every school boy's slate; he is supposed to preside in the above sense over good fortune and success, particularly in mercantile and farming operations. Vigneshwaran was originally born of beautiful shape; in a matrimonial dispute shiva [q.v.] reproached parvaty [q.v.] with infidelity, whereupon vigneshwaran interfered to protect her; on which the father seizing the sword of an attendant cut off his son's head at a blow; in consequence of this act parvaty was inconsolable; and all the deities reproached shiva so severely that he decided to replace the head by that of the first animal which should approach, which was an elephant [q.v.]; the elephant's head is probably the emblem of sagacity. Vigneshwaran is thus represented by a figure, half man and half elephant, but also in a sitting posture, and with a great belly; he wears a crown, while his ears are adorned with two flowers and two jewels, and his forehead with sacred ashes [vibhooty]; of his four arms he lifts two up, holding in the left hand a pausham [q.v.] or rope, and in the right a cootaury or elephant goad [ancooshapaushamaindy], and in the right one of his other two hands he holds a piece of his own elephant's tooth, which he himself broke when enraged, and in the left a pancake; round his neck he wears jewels of pearls and precious stones, and also on his arms and feet, and a garland hangs from his shoulders; not infrequently only half of his image, made of stone, is carved out, that is to say the elephant's head with trunk and ears, and the large belly; in some pagodas [coil, pagoda] he is found in a standing posture. Vigneshwaran has in all the pagodas of shiva a small temple, in which his image, made of stone or cast metal, is worshipped with offerings; but he has also pagodas of his own; indeed there is hardly a place inhabited by sheivas where there is not a pagoda in honor of vigneshwaran; these pagodas are small, usually consisting of one building only, and not surrounded by a wall, but standing free at roads and streets where everybody passes by; as he is thought to be shiva's most beloved son, he receives the same divine honor as shiva, and has also similar names; in shiva's pagodas, as well as in his own, offerings are made to him daily twice, thrice, or four times, which offerings do not differ from those made to shiva and parvaty; his image stands in almost every house, and is adored by men and women, usually only with devout addresses, but sometimes also with offerings and all the prescribed ceremonies, more especially when they are about to begin something important, inasmuch as they believe that their affairs do not prosper unless they are begun in his name; for instance, when they wish to make a special offering to shiva, they first ask his son to make it prosper; there is hardly a tamul book to be found, on the first page of which there are not some words in honor and praise of vigneshwaran. Vigneshwaran is not married. He has various names, the most common of which are the following:—Ambica tanayan or ambicay's son; Ancoosha paushamaindy or the wearer of an elephant goad and a cord; Auc vauhanan or he whose vehicle is a large rat; Aunay mookhavan or the elephant faced; Coonjaramoodaiyone or the elephant owner; Coonjaran or the elephant or the excellent; Coottaudoom pillaiyaur or the dancing son; Eeshamaundan or eeshan's or eeshwaran's son; Eingaran or the five-handed, the elephant's trunk being his fifth hand; Gaja mookhan or the elephant-faced; Ganapaty or lord of hosts; Gunga sootan or gungay's son; Modaca priyan or he who is fond of rice flour cakes; Mooccunnan or the three-eyed; Moonnone or the elder son; Peraroolaulan or the most gracious; Pillaiyaur or the son; Poyyauthameyyoodaiyore or the possesser of pure truth; Toombikeiyan or he who has an elephant's trunk; Vinauyaca moorty or lord; Vinayacan or lord. Among the annual fasts [oopavausam] observed in honor of Vigneshwaran, there are two principal. The first is the Pillaiyaur chatoorty [pundigay, 3a], when the tamulians fast for the purpose of getting understanding, and carry his image about in the streets, and worship him also in their houses. The second is Pillaiyaur nomb or pillaiyaur's fast observed more especially for the purpose of obtaining his blessing on the household; on this day the householders make pancakes, which after having first been offered to the god in the pagodas and houses, are eaten by themselves when the time for fasting is over. Vigneshwaran is adored and his image carried about in the streets at all the festivals of shiva [q.v.] and parvaty [q.v.]. Among the books written specially in his honor, the principal is the Vezhamookhatt or Pillaiyaur sindh. A legend is told to the effect that, when vyausan [q.v.] dictated the bhauratam [q.v.], this god wrote it down with such rapidity that vyausan was embarrassed, and bethought himself of giving out here and there passages of extraordinary difficulty, still called knots; when the amanuensis laid down his stylus, and pondered over the meaning, vyausan found time to go on with the thread of the subject. See vol. I (77), (79) [matam].——Vigraham (विग्रह - vigraha, San.). From (vigrah, san. to spread out). Idol [shilay].——Vihauram (विहार - vihára, San.). From (vihri, san. to walk about). Means a promenade. A Booddhist [booddha] convent. Like the Cheityams, these resemble very closely the corresponding institutions among Christians. In the earlier ages they accompanied, but were detached from, the Cheityams [q.v.]. In later times they were furnished with chapels and altars of their own in which the service could be performed, independently of the Cheityam halls, which may or may not be found in their proximity. Not to be confounded with Vimaunam [baur, cheityam, dagoba, goomta, laut, staupatyam, tope].——Vijaya (विजय - vijaya, San.). From (vi, san. prefix of excellence + jí, san. to conquer). Victorious. Favorite prefix in place names. Name of the founder of the Booddhist [booddha] civilisation in Ceylon. See vol. I (117). ——Vijaya dashamy (విజయదశమి - vijayadashami, Tel.). Means vijayarungan, vishnoo, the victorious + chokkanautan, shiva, the holy lord, the special designation under which shiva is worshipped in madura. Last of the Naick [q.v.] dynasty [raj] of Madura A.D. 1704–1731. See vol. I (120); II, 250.——Vijayarungan (விசயரங்கன் - visayarangan, Tam.). Means victorious vishnoo. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar].——Vijayay (विजया - vijayá, San.). Epithet of Doorga [q.v.]. Parvaty [q.v.].——Vijianugger (విజయనగరము - vijayanagaramu, Tel.). From (vijaya, san. victory + nagara, san. city). Distinguish from the modern Vizianagram of Vizagapatam district. The ancient city which was the capital of the last and most important Hindoo kingdom existing in the peninsula of India during the late middle ages and ruled by the Roya [q.v.] dynasty [raj]. The corruption Vidyanagar or city of learning was applied after the place in the thirteenth century had become the seat of a great revival of hindooism under the famous Shayana maudhavan [q.v.], who amongst other works wrote commentaries on the vedams [q.v.]. Both the city and the kingdom were commonly called by the early portuguese Narsinga [q.v.] from Narsimhan about 1490—1508 who was rajah at the time of their first arrival. The place is now known as Humpy and is entirely in ruins [humpy]. The history of the dynasty will be found at vol. I (151) [charitram]. See also vol. II, 251.

——Vilausam (विलास - vilása, San.). From (above + las, san. to shine). Pastime. As applied to deities it means the same as the tamul Vileiyaudal [q.v.]. Oopa prefixed to either of the above means a sub-head. For inorganic minerals, see Dhautoo.——Vishishta (വിശിഷ്ട - vishishta, Mal.). From (above + shish, san. to distinguish). Noted for rank, learning or sanctity. Class of Bramins. They have other titles according to function and dignity, as Adootiry, Chomantiry, Akkitiry and Bhattatiry, officers of burnt sacrifice, ascetics, and so forth.——Vishishtam (विशिष्ट - vishishta, San.). Distinguished.——Vishishtaudweitam (विशिष्टाद्वैत - vishishtádvaita, San.). Means adweitam modified. The doctrine that the soul [autmam], though identical in essence, is still practically different from the supreme being [paramautman] for all human purposes. Principally inculcated by the veishnavite Ramaunoojan, whose followers are called Ramaunoojeeyans or Shree veishnavas. The bramins of southern india are divided into three great sects according to philosophical tenets; those who believe there is but one soul, in short that everything is God, Adweitam; those who believe there are two souls, God and man, Dweitam; and those who take a medium course, and believe there is but one soul, which in man and created things is somewhat different from the divine soul, Vishishtaudweitam. Ramaunoojacharry [q.v.] accepted with the others the vedauntam [q.v.] system of Vyausan [q.v.]; but opposed the extreme construction put on it, and on the last part of the Bhagavat geeta [q.v.] by Shuncaracharry [shuncaran]. Shuncaracharry had maintained the perfect unity of the Paramautman [q.v.] and Jeevautman [q.v.], or the divine spirit and the human soul. He rejected sacrifice [yanyam, yaugam] and made nyaunam [q.v.] or γνῶσις the highest attainment; and the highest degree of it in his view was to be able to say Aham shiva, I am God. Ramaunoojan opposed these as extreme views, and held that the human soul is almost, but not quite, one with the deity. His chief argument was that the soul is finite, the deity infinite; and a finite being cannot become infinite. He also maintained the need of ritual homage and sacrifices; and was himself an ascetic, surnamed Yatirajan or king of ascetics. Ramaunoojan and Madhwacharry were apostles of the Vishnoo creed, while Shuncaracharry was an apostle of the Shiva creed. See Ramaunoojacharry for the author, Shree veishnava for the sect. See vol. I (74), (89) [matam].——Viss (வீசை - vísai, Tam.). From (vítham, tam. from vi, san. suffix of division + hita, san. placed); division, distribution, share. Apportioned weight. Measure of weight.—"a" The old scale ran:—10 pagoda weights = 1 pollum, 40 pollums = 1 viss, 8 viss = 1 maund of 25 lbs., 20 maunds = 1 candy.—"b" Using the mahomedan seer [q.v.] the scale is:—5 cutcha seers = 1 viss; 8 viss = 1 Madras maund [niray, 2e]. Approximate actual value, 1 viss = 3 lbs. 2 oz. avoir. Used everywhere except in Malabar and Tinnevelly. Same as Hind. punchair. See vol. I, 609; II, 506–518.——Vitalam (वितल - vitala, San.). From (vi, san. privation suffix + tala, san. surface). One of the seven lower worlds; see Bhoogola shastram.——Vitasty (वितस्ति - vitasti, San.). From (above + tams, san. to move); measured by the extended thumb and little finger; long span as distinguished from short span or pradesham [q.v.]. Span. Linear measure. 12 ungoolams = 1 vitasty; 2 vitasties = 1 hastam [alavay, 1f]. Approximate actual value, 1 vitasty = 9 inches. Same as San. gocarnam, Hind. bilisht, Can. guenoo, Tel. jena, Tam. jaun. Compare San. pradesham, Tam. adee, wottay.——Vityausam (व्यत्यास - vyatyása, San.). From (vyatyas, san. to invert). Difference. In Hindoo books three kinds of differences are mentioned:—Soobhaidam, the difference in a thing itself; Soojautybhaidam, the difference between one kind and another; Vijautybhaidam, difference of nature.——Viraica chintaumany (विवेकचिन्तामणि - vivékachintámani, San.). From (vivéka, san. discrimination + chintá, san. thought + mani, san. gem). Or jewel of knowledge. Contains an account of hindoo sects. Canarese prose work on Tatwa nyaunam by Nisacoonayogy, leaning to sheiva system of the better kind.——Viraicam (विवेक - vivéka, San.). From (above + vich, san. separate). Discrimination, distinguishing reality from illusion [mauyay].——Vicaram (विवर - vivara, San.). From (vivri, san. to spread out). Particulars [tafseel].——Vivartanam (विवर्तन - vivartana, San.). From (vivrit, san. to turn round). Circumgyration, a rolling or going round a temple &c. as a penance [pradacshinam].——Vivaswat (विवस्वत - vivasvat, San.). From (above + vas, san. to shine forth). The diameter of a circle [chuckram, mundalam].——Vyausan (व्यास - vyása, San.). From (vyas, san. to arrange); means arranger or compiler. Title of compilers of the vedams [q.v.]. Vishnoo pooraunam [q.v.] gives a list of twenty eight Vyausans, the last of whom was the Vyausan called krishnadweipauyanan. He was a compiler of the vedams, as well as of the Mahabhaurat [q.v.]. Many of the individuals called by this name appear as the authors of different hymns of the vedams. It is very possible that the greater portion of them had a real existence, being the framers or teachers of hindoo religion, before a complete ritual was compiled.——Vyausa poonnama (వ్యాసపున్నమ - vyásapunnama, Tel.). Means the sage so called, founder of vedauntam + full moon day. Otherwise Vyausa poojah. Lunar [chaundra maunam] festival [pundigay, 3a], subject to intercalation [adhicam]. Festival on full moon [powrnimay] day of second lunar month Veishaukham [mausam] between 29th April and 28th May, when Bramin priests, engaged in reading Pooraunams [q.v.] during that month for the public benefit, are led in procession and worshipped. Kept in commemoration of Vyausan [q.v.], reputed author of the 18 principal and 18 inferior Pooraunams, and also of all the Muntrams [q.v.] or forms of prayer in existence. Also held in Ashaudham [mausam] or july [maryauday].——Vyausasamoodram (వ్యాససముద్రము - vyásasamudramu, Tel.). From (vyása, san. the sage + samudra, san. ocean). Tank; Cuddapah dist., Madanapully tal.; from Cuddapah S.W. 70 miles; from Madanapully W.N.W. 28 miles. Near Cundoocore. Tank fed by the Paupughny which flows through it. Finest tank in district, and formed by bunding two hills. It was built under the Vijianugger dynasty by a gooroo, Vyausan, to whom a shausanam [q.v.] was given, granting him the land as an inam [q.v.]. A scheme is in existence for conducting the surplus water to Pedda tippasamoodram and from thence to Runga samoodram.——Vyavahauram (व्यवहार - vyavahára, San.). From (vyavahri, san. to act). Practice, procedure. Practices of law and kingly government; these embrace the procedure of legal tribunals and all the rules of judicature and civil and criminal law [dharmam]. For precepts concerning dravidian mode of government see under Raj and Rajah.——Vyavahaura maula (വ്യവഹാരമാല - vyavahāramála, Mal.). From (vyavahára, san. law + málá, san. garland). Treatise on Malabar law, especially land-law. It contains the law of division of produce between the cultivator [coodiyaun] and proprietor [jenmy], without allusion to any assessment which did not at that time exist.——Vyavasauyam (व्यवसाय - vyavasáya, San.). VICAUR (وقار - wikár, Ar.). From (vakara, ar. to be modest). Honor. Prefixed to an alam forms a lacab; as Vicaur ally, honor of ally. Mostly taken by Shiahs [ism].

VID (विद - vid, San.). To know.——Vedam (वेद - véda, San.). See sep. title.——Veidyalingam (வைத்திலிங்கம் - vaittilingam, Tam.). From (vaidya, san. physician + linga, san. phallic emblem of shiva); shiva as a physician [veidyanautan]. Hindoo second or pers. name. Common among non-bramins [peyar].——Veidyam (वैद्य - vaidya, San.). From (vidyá, san. learning). Belonging to vedam [ayoor vedam]. Medicine.——Veidyan (वैद्य - vaidya, San.); one who is well versed in vedam [ayoorvedam]. Physician [hakeem]. See sep. title.——Veidyanautan (வைத்தி நாதன் - vaittináthan Tam.). From (vaidya, san. physician + nát'ha, san. lord). Epithet of Shiva, lord of physicians. Compare Veidyalingam. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar]. Familiarly contracted into Veitty or Veittoo or Veittah.——Veidya shastram (वैद्यशास्त्र - vaidyashástra, San.). From (vaidya, san. medicine + shástra, san. science). The art of healing. May be classified as follows:—"a" original samhitays to which a divine origin is ascribed;—"b" digests and compilations ascribed to human authors;—"c" vaujeecaranam, medico-magical;—"d" rasauyanam, almost exactly the same as the mediæval alchemy;—"e" tantric system;—"f" dictionaries of materia medica; for instance abhidhauna ratnamaulay is a well-known dictionary of materia medica, arranged according to the six rasams [q.v.];—"g" cookery and diet;—"h" veterinary medicine, of horses [ghorah] and of elephants [q.v.].——Vidya lutchmy (विद्यालक्ष्मी - vidyálakshmí, San.). From (vidyá, san. learning + lakshmí, san. the goddess). The goddess of knowledge. One of the eight kinds of wealth or lutchmy [ashta lutchmy].——Vidyaudharan (विद्याधर - vidyádhara, San.). From (vidyá, san. learning + dhri, san. to hold); holder of occult knowledge. Scholars in the world of gods. Good and evil spirits attending the deity.——Vidyay (विद्या - vidyá, San.). From (vid, san. to know). Knowledge. The tamul Cooral [q.v.] has the following:—அஃகி யகன்ற வறிவென்னும் யார்மாட்டும் வெஃகி வெறிய செயின்—"what is the advantage of extensive and accurate knowledge if a man through covetousness "act senselessly towards all."—கற்றதனா லாய பயனென் கொல் வாலறிவ னற்றா டொழாஅ ரெனின்—"what profit "have those derived from learning, who worship not the good "feet of him who is possessed of pure knowledge?"—பரியினு மாகாவாம் பாலல்ல வுய்த்துச் சொரியினும் போகா தம—"whatever is not conferred by fate cannot be preserved "although it be guarded with most painful care; and that, which "fate has made a man's own, cannot be lost, although he should "even take it and throw it away."—வகுத்தான் வகுத்த வகையல்லாற் கோடி தொகுத்தார்க்குந் துய்த்த லரிது—"even those who gather together millions will only enjoy them, "as it has been determined by the disposer of all things."—ஊழிற் பெருவலி யாவுள மற்றொன்று சூழினுந் தான்முந் துறும்—"what is stronger than fate? If we think of "an expedient to avert it, it will itself be with us before "the thought."—நுண்ணிய நூல்பல கற்பினு மற்றுந்த னுண்மை யறிவே மிகும்—"although a man may study the "most polished treatises, the knowledge which fate has decreed "to him will still prevail."—ஒருமைக்கட் டான்கற்ற கல்வி யொருவற் கெழுமையு மேமாப் புடைத்து—"the learning, "which a man has acquired in one birth, will yield him pleasure "during seven births."—அரங்கின்றி வட்டாடி யற்றே நிரம்பிய நூலின்றிக் கோட்டி கொளல்—"to speak in an "assembly of the learned without fullness of knowledge, is like "playing at chess on a board without squares."—கல்லா தவரு நனி நல்லர் கற்றார்முற் சொல்லா திருக்கப் பெறின்—"the unlearned also are very excellent men, if they know how to "keep silence before the learned."—உளரென்னு மாத்திரைய ரல்லாற் பயவாக் களரனையர் கல்லா தவர்—"the "unlearned are like worthless barren land: all that can be said "of them is, that they exist."—மேற்பிறந்தா ராயினுங் கல்லாதார் கீழ்ப்பிறந்துங் கற்றா ரனைத்திலர் பாடு—"the "unlearned, though born in a high caste, are not equal in dignity "to the learned, though they may have been born in a low "caste." Vidyashaulay is a school [madrissa, pullicootam].

VIDIYA (విదియ - vidiya, Tel.). From (dvitíya, san. second). Second day [tity] of the lunar fortnight [pacsham] in the month [mausam].

VIDOO (விடு - vidu, Tam.). To leave, release, abandon, remain.——Valencoorny (खरशिंग - kharashinga, Mahr.; [illegible] - ghanasinga, Can.; [illegible] - vítankurana, Mal.; வெடங்குறணி - vedanguruni, Tam.). Title corruption from malayalam. Mahr. from (khara, mahr. sharp + shringa, san. horn), from. long, cylindrical, incurved like horn, tubercled pod. Can. from (ghana, san. heavy + shringa, san. horn); from appearance of woody capsule. Mal. from (vitan, mal. inferior + kurana, mal log). Tam. from malayalam. Tam. also (alambalmaram), meaning sharp toothed tree; (shavadimaram), meaning collor bone tree, from shape of capsule. Title otherwise Walking-stick bignonia. Botanically - Stereospermum [pautalam] xylocarpum, wight., bignoniaceæ [vricsham, 99]. Alias Bignonia xylocarpa; Spathodea xylocarpa; Tecoma xylocarpa. Arboreous, glabrous; leaves bi-tri-pinnate; petiole sharply angular, leaflets petioled, ovate or oblong-acuminated, membranaceous, reticulately veined; panicle corymbose; branches dichotomous; calyx unequally five-toothed; corolla campanulate, shortly tubular; lobes rounded; capsule round-linear, incurved, woody, tubercled; flowers white, fragrant; flowering in august. Leaves are deciduous in cold weather, rapid grower, ornamental; native of malabar. Natives extract from the wood a thick fluid of the color and consistence of stockholm tar, which they use as a remedy for scaly eruptions on the skin. Tender fruit edible. Sapwood large, grey; heart-wood very hard, brown; wood tough and elastic, close-grained; used for cabinet-work; the wood is hard, but easily split; when sawn across it presents a yellow resinous surface; sections examined with the microscope show that the yellow color is due to a solid resinous deposit in the pitted vascular system.——Veed (వీడు - vídu, Tel.; വീട് - vítu, Mal.; வீடு - vídu, Tam.). From (vidu, tam. to remain).—"a" House. A native house consists generally of three detached huts; one serving as a sleeping room for the family, another for a working room and kitchen, and a third for a store room for goods and chattels. Built of mud and thatched; but in parts the roofs are of terraced earth laid on beams, with wattle and daub between. The ordinary description of hut is circular in shape, from about 12 to 20 feet in diameter; the walls are of mud, or wattle and daub, the roof pointed in the centre and thatched. There is but one door, and no other means of ventilation. Though a low-caste man may acquire wealth, his neighbours will not allow him to build a house with beams to support a roof, or to use tiles [wode] instead of thatch. The bramins' and comaties' houses are generally the best in every village. Except during the rains [mazhay] the cattle [maud] are always kept in the open air, but at that season they are admitted within doors, and among the poorer classes form a part of the family. Among the richer there are cattle sheds in the house enclosures. Among the wealthier the apartments of the females are always distinct, and the mahomedan practice of women being shut up is followed [gosha, purdah]. Among the middle and lower classes however the women mix freely in society, attend the market, assist in cultivation [vellaumay], bring water and firewood to the house, cook the food, attend to the cattle, and perform all the ordinary in-door and out-door avocations of life. Some of the houses of the well-to-do are ornamented with carved wood-work and ornamental devices on the walls. In some may be seen framed and glazed pictures, chiefly representations of the hindoo divinities. Both woollen and cotton carpets [cumbly, jamkhana] are also beginning to be more freely used, though mats [boriyah] are most common. The articles of furniture are generally confined to a few wooden cots, the bottoms of which are made of laced rope or tape, a few stools and boxes, sometimes a large jar or two for grain, a few brass [pittalay], bell metal [cunts], tin [tagaram] and earthen pots [chatty], and dishes for culinary purposes. Food is generally eaten on leaf plates, as caste requires that any earthen vessel which has been used for eating be broken and never used a second time for the same purpose. The Mahomedans are the only class who use crockery. The following are current shastram rules relating to the building of a house. Having selected a site, the frontage must be divided into nine equal parts, five being assigned to the right, and three to the left, the fourth division being reserved for the doorway. The enumeration begins on the left, and thus the fourth section is in the mansion of Mercury [boodhan]. The occupant of such a house may become as wealthy as Coobairan [q.v.]. A person born under Gemini [mitoonam], Cancer [carcatacam] or Leo [simham] must build his house on a line stretching east and west, the entrance being placed easterly [dic, tisay]. A person born under Virgo [canyay], Libra [toolaum] or Scorpio [vrishchicam] must build on a line running north and south, the doorway being southerly. One born under Sagitarius [dhanoos], Capricorn [macaram] or Aquarius [coombham] must build west and east, placing the entrance westerly. If born under Pisces [meenam], Aries [maisham] or the Twins [mitoonam], he must build south and north, the door being placed northerly. A family occupying a house built contrary to these rules will be ruined [maryaudaay, maunasauram, staupatyam]. There is a Tamul proverb:—வடக்குப்பார்த்தமச்சுவீட்டைப் பார்க்கிலும் தெற்குப்பார்த்த தெருத்திண்ணை நல்லது—"a pyall [q.v.] facing south is "preferable to a terraced house with a northern aspect."—"b" Also means happiness. Among tamulians there are enumerated four kinds or sources of happiness, termed respectively Aram, Porool, Inbam, Veed; or benevolent virtue, property, sensual pleasure, eternal bliss.——Vidigole (విడికోలు - vidigólu, Tel.). The time of letting out cattle [maud], early morning.

VIL (வில் - vil, Tam.). Bow. Each of the ancient Dravidian dynasties [raj] had its particular symbol or standard [dhwajam]; that of the Cholans [q.v.] being a tiger [pooly], of the Paundyans [q.v.] a fish [meenam], and of the Cherans [q.v.] a bow, to which the Congoo [q.v.] dynasty added that of an elephant [q.v.] still retaining the bow. Vil also indicates the rainbow; of which Varauha mihiran says;—"The many-colored rays of the sun "[sooryan] falling upon the clouds and being broken by the "winds take the shape of the rainbow in the sky; in the opinion "of certain writers the rainbow is formed of the expired breath "of certain serpents of the divine order; if two rainbows "similar to each other should appear perfect, unbroken, bent "towards the earth, bright, glossy, thick and variegated in "color, there will be abundant rain [mazhay, vaunashastram]." ——Villavan (வில்லவன் - villavan, Tam.). From (vil, tam. a bow); bowman. Another name for Cherans [q.v.].——Villi- VILLY (విల్లి - villi, Tel.). A corruption of (palli, tel. village). Suffix in place names [hully, milly, pully]; as Veeravilly, hero's town.

VILOOTHOO (ریچھ - ráchh, Hind.; விழுது - vizhuthu, Tam.). From (vizhu, tam. to fall). Heddle [nesavoo].

VINAY (வினை - vinai, Tam.). Action. In philosophy the accumulation of moral actions, entailed as a consequence of deeds in former births [jenmam, pirapp]; the latent cause of transmigration [samsauram]; same as Carmam. In common usage it means evil, pain, or misfortune. The tamul Cooral [q.v.] has the following:—தீயவை தீய பயத்தலாற் தீயவை தீயினு மஞ்சப் படும்—"because evil produces evil, therefore should evil "be feared more than fire."—இலனென்று தீயவை செய்யற்க செய்யின் இலனாகு மற்றும் பெயர்த்து—"commit not evil, "saying, I am poor, if you do, you will become poorer still."—தீயவை செய்தார் கெடுதல் நிழற்றன்னை வீயா தடியுறைந் தற்று—"destruction will dwell at the heels of those who com-"mit evil even as their shadow that leaves them not."—வினை வலியுந் தன்வலியு மாற்றான் வலியுந் துணைவலியுந் தூக்கிச் செயல்—"let a man weigh well the strength of the deed "he purposes to do, his own strength, the strength of his "enemy, and the strength of the allies of both, and then let him "act."—தனைநல மாக்கந் தருஉம் வினைநலம் வேண்டிய வெல்லாந் தரும்—"the efficacy of support will yield VINDHYAM (विन्ध्य - vindhya, San.). From (vind, san. to divide). The chain of mountains which divides Upper from Southern india. The course of the Nerbudda indicates the direction of the principal range, but the mountainous tract spreads much more widely. It meets the Ganges in several places towards the north, and the Godavery is held to be its southern limit.

VINOOCONDAH (వినుకొండ - vinukonda, * Tel.). From (vinu, tel. sky + konda, tel. hill) [vin].—(1) Talook, Kistna district. Tahsildar's pay Rs. 150. Area 643 square miles; population 82,445; language Teloogoo. S.W. of district. Bounded north by Pulnaud talook, east by Narsarowpett talook, south by Darshy division in Nellore district, west by Marcapore talook of Kurnool district. The road south from the Pulnaud and west from Narsarowpett meet at Vinoocondah, whence a road proceeds to Cumbum and Kurnool. Bellary-Kistna railway from Goontacull to Kistna passes through. Remains of vast antiquity are met with on every hand. Along the course of the Goondlacumma stone implements have been found similar to those found at Abbeville in the north of France. Dolmens [coday cull] abound and almost each village has inscriptions. The Goondlacumma flows through the southern portion. There are indications of the presence of copper [taumram] and iron [auhan] among the hills. Soil rocky; regar [q.v.] series predominate. Agricultural produce. Camping grounds:—Chintalcheroo, Velpoor, Vinoocondah. Places of archæological interest:—Agnigoondaula, Boggaram, Bollapalley, Canamarlapoody, Caurmanchy, Chintalcheroo, Cotsarla, Cottalore, Dondapaud, Eepoor, Gandiganamala, Garikipaud, Gocanacondah, Goommanampaud, Gootlapully, Inoomella, Madamunchipaud, Mookkellapaud, Moolacalore, Noozulla, Oommadivaram, Pedda cancherla, Pitchicalapollem, Potlore, Remidicherla, Royavaram, Saricondapollem, Shaunampoody, Shivapooram, Talaurlapully, Timmaupooram, Timmayyapollem, Tripooraupooram, Vaddemgoonta, Vanicoonta, Vellatore, Velpoor, Vinoocondah, Yainoogapollem. Trig. stations:—Cankiraula, Soodicondah, Yerracondah. The leading places, &c., in the talook are the following.——Cankiraula (కంకిరాల - kankirála, Tel.). Two old temples, Shiva and Vishnoo.——Vinoocondah (వినుకొండ - vinukonda, Tel.). See below.——Yerracondah (ఎర్రకొండ - errakonda, Tel.). From (erra, tel. red + konda, tel. hill). Trig. station; lat. 16° 05′ 51·34″; long. 79° 44′ 47·86″; height 1,147 feet; from Vinoocondah N.W. 4 miles.——(2) Town, Hill, General deputy collector's and talook head-quarters, Place of pilgrimage, Railway station on Bellary-Kistna line; Kistna dist., Vinoocondah tal.; pop. 6,911; acres 9,073; lat. 16° 03′; long. 79° 47′, from Bezwada W.S.W. 66 miles; from Guntoor W.S.W. 50 miles; from Madras N. 205 miles; from Masulipatam W. 92 miles. Hill-fort, on a rock composed of quartz [vencull] and mica [abruck], built by Saugy gannama naidoo, governor under Veera pratapa poorshottama gajapaty, A.D. 1462-1496, to whom is also attributed a temple and a finely sculptured mantapam [q.v.]. The hill is an extinct volcano. The fort was captured by Krishnadeva roya of Vijianugger [humpy] during his victorious march along the Eastern coast. It was for some time in the possession of the Condaveed reddies [q.v.]. Captured by Hyder ool moolk, Golcondah general, in 1578, and for some time in the possession of Goonda row, zemindar of Narsarowpett. After the English took Masulipatam the fort was regarded as a place of considerable strength, and in the many petty quarrels, among local zemindars towards the close of last century, it afforded a secure place of refuge. The Company established a garrison here about 1790, as it was a large depôt for stores being advanced on the road to Hyderabad and within easy reach of the seaport of Motoopully. In 1808 the stores were removed to Masulipatam and the fortifications demolished. In 1816 the Pindarries [q.v.] ravaged the country and the townspeople took shelter on the hill. The oldest fort, on the west side of the hill, was built or repaired by Vishwambhara deo gajapaty and repaired again by Poliya vaima reddy of Condaveed. Lower down is the fort of Pochineed gunnamaneed, one of the Reddy [q.v.] chiefs; five ruined palaces. The third fort, at foot of hill, was built by Saugy gannama naidoo. Another fort, built 250 years ago, surrounds the town. Raghoonautasawmy temple. Temple of Narsimhan with inscriptions. Codanda ramasawmy temple. Temple of Ramalingam on the hill of immemorial antiquity. Large mosque [musjid]. Dolmens [coday cull] in the vicinity. Shocks of earthquake [mahy campam]. On the hill are two tanks, water all the year round.

VIRIYAN (मातुलाहि - mátuláhi, San.; زهری سانپ - zahrí-sámp, Dec.; ಬಳೆಗಡಿಕಿನಹಾವು - balegadikinahávu, Can.; పెంజెర - penjera, Tel.; മണ്ഡലി - mandali, Mal.; விரியன் - viriyan, Tam.). Title from tamul [vary]. San. from (mátula, san. pomegranate, punica granatum, linn. + ahi, mal. serpent); from its spotted character. Dec. from (zahr, pers. poison + sámp, hind. snake). Can. from (bale, can. circle + gaduku, can. stout + hávu, can. snake). Tel. from (penu, tel. large + jerri, tel. centipede). Mal. from (mandala, san. circle), from its circles or coils. Tam. from (vari, tam. streak). Tel. also (katteda), meaning striped. Form the family Viperidæ, ophidii viperiformes, ophidia [sarpam], reptilia [sarpy, 30] of naturalists [jantoo]. The Viriyans or Viperidæ have the body robust; tail rather short, not prehensile; head broad or thick, generally scaly above, or incompletely shielded; no pit in the loreal région, eye of moderate size, with vertical pupil; viviparous; terrestrial snakes. The following are the only two species in Southern india :—Daboia elegans [chain viper]; Echis carinata [carpet snake]. Among Viriyans the Dravidians themselves distinguish the following.——Ass viper (గాడిదెకట్టెడ - gádidekatteda, Tel.; கழுதைவிரியன் - kazhuthaiviriyan, Tam.). So called on account of the slow manner in which it moves; it grows to a large size and is of a black color. Its bite is not deadly.——Blood viper (నెత్తురుకట్టెడ - netturukatteda, Tel.; രക്തമണ്ഡലി - raktamandali, Mal.; இரத்தவிரியன் - irattaviriyan, Tam.). The earth snake, Eryx johnii of naturalists. A very harmless reptile. See Irtalay maniyan which is the same thing.

VISH (विष् - vish, San.). To spread, pervade.——Veinavam (வைணவம் - vainavam, Tam.). From (vishnu, san. deity). Belonging to Vishnoo [q.v.]; also the Veishnava faith as opposed to Sheivam [q.v.] and Booddham [booddha].——Veishnava (वैष्णव - vaishnava, San.). The Beishnab of bengal. Follower of Vishnoo, or relating to Vishnoo.——Veishwaunaran (वैश्वानर - vaishvánara, San.). From (vishva, san. all + nara, san. man); common to all men. The active principle dwelling on the collected sum of solid matter, or he who is conscious of self-existence [viraut].——Veishwaunary (वैश्वानरी - vaishvánarí, San.). From (vishva, san. all + nara, san. man). The central avastaunnam [q.v.] of the sun [sooryan] and moon [chundran, nacshatram].——Vishajooram (विषज्वर - vishajvara, San.; கோவாரி - kóvári, Tam.). From (visha, san. poison + jvara, san. fever). Tam. means cow epidemic. Tam. also (alari), meaning spreading disease; (kóvári), meaning cow + epidemic. Rinderpest of cattle [pashoorogam]. Appears to be capable of origination de novo, and once generated is communicable with great facility. Its earliest symptom is a spasmodic twitching of the muscles of the chest and neck, and sometimes of the hind-quarters, which resembles but is different from the accompanying or following rigor. The temperature rises to 105° F., subsequently falling as low as 88°. The pulse is little disturbed at first but afterwards becomes quick and weak. The respiration is accelerated, and labored when the respiratory muscles are involved in the spasm. The disease may last from one to sixteen days, its usual duration being from three to nine. By the natives palmyra [q.v.] toddy [q.v.] is given as a cure; also the tender leaves of Cassia auriculata [tungaid], the succulent portion of the aloe [q.v.] leaf, cummin seed [jeerah], onions [piyaüz], and the tender bark of Balsamodendron berryii [kiloovay] well ground and mixed with vinegar [caudy]. Compare Shembah.——Visham (विष - visha, San.). From (vish, san. to pervade), Poison.——Vishnoo (विष्णु - vishnu, San.; بشن - bishn, Hind.; விட்டுணு - vittunu, Tam.). From (vish, san. to pervade). According to Matsya pooraunam [q.v.] the name alludes to his entering into the mundane egg [bramhaundam]; according to the Pudma pooraunam [q.v.] to his entering into or combining with pracrity [q.v.], as poorsham [q.v.] or spirit. In the Mahabhaurat [q.v.] the word is derived from the root (ví), signifying motion, radiance. ζεὺς of greeks; Jupiter of Romans; Osiris of egyptians.—"a" The second of the hindoo triad [trimoorty]; the preserver. During the period of temporary annihilation [pralayam] he is supposed to sleep on the waters floating on the serpent Sheshan [q.v.]. Bramha [q.v.] is said to have sprung from a lotus [nelumbo], which originally grew from the navel of Vishnoo, and the Ganges [gungay] springs from his foot; the different Avatars [q.v.] are considered as emanations of this deity, and in Krishnan [q.v.] he is supposed to have been really and wholly incarnate. Lutchmy [q.v.] is his wife; and he is usually represented as a mild and benevolent deity. In the vedic period Vishnoo was a god of subordinate importance, generally connected with Indran [q.v.], and seldom celebrated by himself. He did not rise much higher in the bramhanam [q.v.] period, at least among the bramins [q.v.] and cshatriyas [q.v.]. Presently however he was elevated to be the supreme god. The pooranic legend is, that from the navel of Narayanan [q.v.], or the first cause beneath the water, a lotus flower rose to the surface, and bore Bramha [q.v.] the creator; who disposed or set all things in order from Mauyay [q.v.] or matter, and handed over the preservation to Vishnoo, and destruction to Roodran [q.v.], both eminent like himself from Narayanau. The idea of a shacty [q.v.] for Vishnoo did not belong to the original system. That was superadded at a much later date by pooraunams [q.v.], and possibly after observing the effect produced by the Sheiveite dogma of a female énergy. In the Matsya avatar [q.v.], the eight persons that escaped the deluge, Satyavratan [q.v.] and the seven rishies [q.v.], were all males; and it was only in the next or Coorma avatar [q.v.] that Lutchmy [q.v.] was produced from the ocean [samoodram]. Most of the pooraunams [q.v.] belong to the Vishnoo faith. The Mahabhaurat [q.v.], Ramayanam [q.v.] and Harivamsham, were written by votaries of Vishnoo.—"b" Of the Vishnoo worship the doctrine of the avatars [q.v.] or incarnations, literally descents, is the most characteristic feature. Vishnoo, when danger threatened either the devas [q.v.] or their worshippers, assumed certain terrestrial forms to assist them. The doctrine of the avatars afforded an opportunity of identifying Vishnoo with favourite heroes of tradition. Such were Rama [q.v.] or Ramchendran [q.v.], who extended his conquests to Ceylon; and Parshooraman [q.v.] the axe-rama, a native hero of the deccan [q.v.] whom the bramins canonized as the destroyer of all the cshatriyas. In the Krishna [q.v.] avatar the worship of Vishnoo reached its climax. Krishna was probably an aboriginal hero of some of the northern tribes. In the Bhagavatgeeta [q.v.] he appears as the preacher of the ethical pantheistic doctrine [vedauntam], and proclaims himself as the supreme being. In the Geeta govindam prominence is given to the legends of his miraculous birth, his intercourse with the shepherds, and his life with the shepherdesses [gopy], the remembrance of which was celebrated by special religious festivals [ooryady]; but this was a later production. When booddhism had ceased to be dangerous to the bramins, Booddha [q.v.] himself was included among the avatars [q.v.] of Vishnoo. At the end of this age or kaliyoog [q.v.] Vishnoo is to appear as Calky [q.v.], to root out all wickedness.—"c" In south indian history Veishnavism shows itself in three stages. The first is the simple and primitive system; the second is with the addition of herolatry, in the persons of Ramchendran, and Krishnan; the third, with the further addition of the Puncharautram [q.v.]. The Veishnava system is much more modern in the peninsula than the Sheiva system. Traditionally, the Shreepermatore temple is said to be the first Veishnava temple in the south. The twelve Alwars [q.v.] were the twelve apostles of the creed, and they with great zeal led the way in the first establishment of the system. By their followers they are almost deified. They composed the works known as Tirmozhy or sacred word; being matter from the Vedams [q.v.], rendered into tamul in an obscure idiom [tirvyemozhy]. Some of the oldest monuments of the Veishnava faith in s. india may be found in the ruins of Mauvellipore or the Seven pagodas. Though symbols of Shiva [q.v.] and sculptured representations of Parvaty [q.v.] are found in the multitude of figures represented there in the various reliefs, yet the chief subjects are selected from the legends attached to the Veishnava faith; the dwarf [vaumanan] incarnation of Vishnoo may be particularized [matam].—"d" The idols and pictorial representations of Vishnoo exhibit him by a human figure with four arms and hands. In two of his hands he holds nothing, having them ready to give blessings, and of the other two, which he raises, he holds in the right the Chuckram [q.v.] or discus, and in the left the Chunk [q.v.] or conch-shell. The color of his body is usually dark-blue. On his head he wears a crown, and on his forehead a red sign of custoory [q.v.] or spot [pottoo, tilacam] of musk or the sign tirnaumam [q.v.]. His hair, ears, neck, breast, body, hands, and feet are adorned with pearls [moty], precious stones [ratnam], gold [pon], and silver [velly]. His robe is embroidered with gold. From his shoulders a garland hangs and he stands on a lotus [nelumbo] flower. In the pagodas [coil, pagoda] two great lamps are left burning near the idol [shilay, vigraham]. The image which is carried about in the streets at festivals is of cast metal; but the one in the innermost part of the pagoda, to which daily offerings are made, is of stone. In honor of Vishnoo many pagodas of various sizes have been erected. In larger ones of these the following images are to be found:—Vishnoo's image of stone in the innermost part, which is daily as often worshipped as the lingam [q.v.] in eeshwaran's pagodas; Vishnoo's figure of metal, which is after the offering adorned with various jewels and ornaments especially when it is to be carried about in the streets at festiva's; Maha lutchmy [q.v.], his consort, who stands in a small apartment of her own, and is daily worshipped together with her husband; her image is made both of stone and of metal; Dwaurapaulacans [q.v.], two door-keepers of ill-favored appearance standing at the entrance to the innermost apartment; Shellar, vishnoo's herald, who has a small place of his own, obtains a share in the worship, and takes always the lead at processions at festivals; Vatchicauran, a saint who has a small temple of his own; Pannirand alwar [q.v.], or the twelve devotees. The bird Garoodan [q.v.], Vishnoo's vehicle [vauhan], is found in all pagodas sacred to Vishnoo; and in the large pagodas at particularly sacred places many more images, chiefly forms of Vishnoo, representing him in his different incarnations and appearances, are found and adored together with those mentioned above. Vishnoo's ten avatars or incarnations are to be seen under Avatar. At the places where Vishnoo appeared and performed miracles, great pagodas have been erected. The most celebrated are those of Conjeevaram, Tripatty and Shreerungam. These are by pre-eminence respectively called Permaul coil, Tirmaley, Coil.—"e" Owing to his various incarnations and appearances, Vishnoo has many names, of which the following may be mentioned:—Atchyootan or the imperishable one, Alagya manavaula permaul or the beautiful bridegroom, Ananta shayanan or he who sleeps on the serpent anantan, Audinarrain or the supreme narayanan [q.v.], Audy varauhan or the supreme boar, Aulileimail pullicondone or he who took his abode on a banyan [q.v.] leaf, Bramhanaipettadhantry or bramha's father, Canavan or husband, Cariyavan or the black one, Condal vunnan or the cloud-colored, Codandaraman or rama as having the great bow codandam, Cunnan, Damodaran or he who was bound with a rope, Devaky meindan or devaky's mighty son, Gopaulan, Govindan, Hary, Jalaja lochanan or the lotus-eyed, Kelvan or lover or husband, Keshavan or he who has fine hair, Ketanan or the standard-bearer, Krishnan or the black one, Lutchmipaty or lutchmy's lord, Maudhavan, Maha vishnoo, Mooraury or the foe of mooran, Moocoondan or the bestower of salvation. Mauyone or the illusive, Narayanan, or the mover on the water, Narsimha moorty or man-lion form, Nediyone or the tall one, Nemiyone or the wearer of the discus weapon, Nundagopan or gopaulan or govindan or cowherd, Oolagoonda pemmaun or the great one in whose mouth the world appeared, Oondipoottone or he whose navel flowered, Padiyalandone or he who traversed the universe with three steps, Pudmanaubhan or the lotus-naveled, Pandavark dootan or the messenger of the pandavas, Partasauraty or arjoonan's charioteer, Peetaumbaran or the wearer of a silk or gold-colored garment, Permaul or the great person, Punchauyoodhan or he who has five weapons, Raghavan or rama as grandson of raghoo, Rama or the beautiful one, Ramasawmy or the god rama, Ramchendran or the moon-like rama, Shaurngapauny or the bowman, Shreedharan or the bearer of lutchmy, Shreerunganaickan or the lord of shreerungam, Soorimookha shankhamendy or the chunk-bearer, Tirmagan or the holy son, Tirmaul or vishnoo as lord of illusion, Vadamalaivaunan or the dweller on the mount of tripatty, Valavan or the mighty one, Vanamauly or the wearer of a garland of the basil [toolsy] plant, Varadaraja permaul or the benign king, Vausoodevan or krishnan, the son of vasoodevan, Vaumanan or dwarf, Veicoontanautan or the lord of veicoontam, Vencateshwara permaul or vencatachellamoorty or lord of tripatty, Vindoo or wind or cloud.—"f" About Vishnoo a great number of books have been written, which are regarded as authoritative in matters of religion; and every large pagoda [coil, pagoda] has a local pooraunam, [q.v.], in which the story believed to have happened at the places is described. Among the books that treat of Vishnoo in tamul, the following may be mentioned:—Baula caunda ramayanam or a part of the ramayanam, treating of rama's youth; Bharata ammaunay or a book of the same contents with bhauratam but written in less difficult poetical language; Canjan ammaunay or a book containing the story of cumsan, krishnan's maternal uncle, who intended to kill krishnan when a child; Coodanthay antaudy, a prayer-book in praise of vishnoo at combaconum, otherwise tircoodanthay; Covil calambagam or a collection of 100 songs in honor of vishnoo, sung everywhere in the pagodas; Gajendra mocsham or a book about the elephant gajendran, which was attacked by a crocodile [mugger] while bathing, but was saved by vishnoo and transferred to bliss; Garooda punchancsharam or a book of muntrams [q.v.], in which the bird garoodan [q.v.] the vehicle [vauhan] of vishnoo and destroyer of snakes, is invoked for enchanting snakes and counteracting their poison; Hanooman ammaunay, a part of the ramayanam [q.v.], treating of the ape hanooman [q.v.] who assisted rama [q.v.] in his war with ravanan [q.v.]; Indrajit patalam or a description of rama's war with indrajit, ravanan's son and the conqueror of indran; Krishnan tooth or a description of krishnan as ambassador of the pandoos [q.v.] to dooryodhanan [q.v.]; Mahabhaurat [q.v.], containing a description of the war of the five pandoos, assisted by krishnan [q.v.], with dooryodhanan and his brethren; Narrain shatacam containing prayers to vishnoo as narayanan; Nangapausha patalam about a noose similar to a snake, said to kill the enemy by itself; Permaul ammaunay, a collection of different stories concerning vishnoo; Pillay tamul or a collection of 1,000 songs about vishnoo's birth and childish plays; Ramajayam or a description of vishnoo's deeds in his incarnations; Ramayanam about rama, by the poet cumban; Sambanda pillay tirnaumam or 100 songs by tirmangay alwar [q.v.]; Shreerungaraja ammaunay containing diffuse stories about vishnoo; Tirpoogazh poem setting forth the praises of vishnoo; Varkaicovay a collection of songs; Vazhippatt prayers to vishnoo, and is read when a veishnava is about to die; Vencata maulay 100 songs about vishnoo's glory in general; Vishnoomel vunnam an ode on vishnoo; Yecaudashy pooraunam, the legend of the origin of the fast yecaudashy [q.v.].—"g" To Vishnoo two wives are ascribed, viz., Lutchmy and Bhoomidevy. In the opinion of the Veishnavas, Lutchmy is what Parvaty is with the Sheivas, namely the feminine power or energy of the supreme being, emanating from the masculine energy as a distinct being. And as Shacty [q.v.] or Parvaty [q.v.] is said to have multiplied into many shacties, so Lutchmy [q.v.] is said to have become Ashta lutchmy [q.v.] or eight Lutchmies. Maha lutchmy, Vishnoo's wife, is the chief one, in whom the other seven are both contained and worshipped. As the goddess of beauty and prosperity, Lutchmy is much reverenced even by the Sheivas, who have placed her image in Eeshwarans' pagodas; which honor they by no means confer on Vishnoo. Lutchmy is also said to have risen from the sea of milk [samoodram], when it was churned by the gods with the view of obtaining the beverage of immortality, named amritam [q.v.]. To Vishnoo are ascribed three sons, viz., Manmatan, Cooshan, and Lavan.—"h" The manner in which vishnoo is worshipped by the Veishnavas is very much like that in which Shiva is worshipped by the Sheivas; that is to say thrice every day offerings are made to the image in the pagodas, and privileged persons worship him also in their houses. The latter are called Tirnaumam teertam pannoogiravar, and must observe a particular diet, and not defile themselves with anything. Moreover, corresponding to the Sheiva order of Aundies [q.v.], there are the Veishnava orders of the Dausary [q.v.] and Beiraugies [q.v.]. The festivals that are celebrated in honor of Vishnoo are as numerous as his appearances and miracles. Two of his festivals are celebrated all over the land, viz., the Jayanty [q.v.] and Permaul tirnaul [q.v.]. The first falling in August is Krishnan's birth-day, at which the circumstances connected with his birth are acted in the pagodas. The duration of the festival depends on the revenues of the pagoda; in rich pagodas it lasts several days, in poor ones only one day. The other festival, Permaul tirnaul, lasts nine or ten days; it is however not like the Jayanty celebrated everywhere at the same time, but whenever it is most convenient to the people of a place. It is also called Tircalyannam [q.v.], because Vishnoo's marriage with Lutchmy is acted on it, while Vishnoo and Lutchmy are carried about in the streets on great cars. The famous pagodas sacred to Vishnoo have each five cars [rath], of which the first is used for Vishnoo as rama [q.v.], the second for Lutchmy as seetay [q.v.], the third for Lutchmanan [q.v.], the fourth for Bharatan, and the fifth for Shatroognan. The three last named, or Rama's brothers, are regarded as partial incarnations of Vishnoo. Among the fasts observed in honor of Vishnoo there are three principal. First, Yecaudashy [q.v.] vratam, a fast on the eleventh day after every new [amavausyay] and full moon [powrnimay]; this is believed to be very meritorious; its observance however is optional. Secondly, Veicoontayecaudashy [q.v.], a fast observed once a year in december, when the people fast the whole day and adore Vishnoo, taking in the evening either pancakes, or merely water consecrated by the leaves of toolsy [q.v.], and spend the night in watching and meditating; this fast is also called Swargavausal yecaudashy, that is to say, the door to heaven; and Bheema yecaudashy [bheeshma yecaudashy], because it was instituted by Bheeman, one of the five Pandavas [q.v.]; Bheeman could not bear hunger, but in order to fast at least once in the year, he observed this fast. Thirdly, Pooratanshy shanikizhamay, a fast observed on the four saturdays of the month [mansam] of pooratanshy [pooratanshy shany kizhamay] or september-october. Among those who observe this fast many make a pilgrimage to the pagoda at Tripatty, where in the month of september a great festival is celebrated.—"i" The Veishnavas in the Tamul country wear on their foreheads the figure called Tirnaumam or holy name [naumam]. Besides this they paint on their arms two other signs, viz., the Chunk [q.v.] shell and Chuckram [q.v.] discus, weapons of Vishnoo. Their principal form of prayer, called Ashtaucsharam [q.v.] or eight characters, is thus Omnamonarayananya, or Om salutation to narayanan [q.v.].—"j" In Southern india, compared with the Sheiyas, Veishnavas are only as about one to four. Their two principal divisions are Madhwacharries and Shreeveishnavas; the latter again being sub-divided into the Tengalays and Vadagalays. See all those heads. See vol. I (76), (85) [matam].—Vishnoo bhactan (विष्णुभक्त - vishnubhakta, San.). From (vishnu, san. the deity + bhaj, san. to adore). VISHOO (విషు - vishu, Tel.; വിഷു - vishu, Mal.). Corruption of (dvishu, san. loc. pl. of dvi, san. two); means in two equal parts. The equinoctial point [ayanam, craunty pautam] or the first point either of Aries [maisham] or Libra [toolaum] into which the sun [sooryan] enters at the vernal or autumnal equinox respectively [maishauyanam, toolauyanam]. Solar [madhyama sowra maunam] festival [pundigay, 2b] at what passes for the vernal equinox [maishauyanam], and actually at the astronomical new year's day [new year, nowroz] calculated on the siderial principle. Otherwise Maha vishoo. Distinguish from Vishoo poonyacaulam or toolauyanam below. It stands now at 12th april against 21st march the real vernal equinox [maunam, mausam]. The Malayauly is very superstitious about his conduct on this day, and the first thing that comes under his observation on the morning of the day is believed to be significant of the luck that will attend him throughout the year, then commencing. Hence the collection beforehand in houses of costly and auspicious objects, and hence the annual presents to superiors.—Vishoo poonya caulam (విషుపుణ్యకాలం - vishupunyakálam, Tel.; വിഷുവൽപുണ്യകാലം - vishuvatpunyakálam, Mal.). Pay Rupees 100.——(5) Town, Municipality, Port, Head-quarters of Collector, Revenue divisional officer, Deputy inspector-general of police and Salt deputy and Assistant commissioners, Superintendent of Police, Talook magistrate, District and Moonsif's courts, Observatory, Telegraph office; Vizagapatam dist., Vizagapatam division; pop. 34,487; lat. 17° 42′; long. 83° 20′; from Bimlipatam S.W. 17 miles; from Calcutta S.W. 470; from Coraputt S.S.E. 84 miles; from Madras N.E. 372; from Masulipatam N.E. 174; from Narsapatam E. 45 miles; from Parvatipore S.S.W. 74 miles; from Poodimadaca N.E. 23 miles; from Vizianagram S.S.W. 29 miles. On the Orissa coast [q.v.] in a small bay, the south extremity of which is bounded by the Dolphin's nose and the northern extremity by Waltair. To the west lies a large swamp, which is being reclaimed by Roman catholic missionaries. The town is separated from the Dolphin's nose by a small river, which forms a bar where it enters the sea, but is passable for vessels of 300 tons during spring tides. The best anchorage in the roads is with the castle on Dolphin's nose, S.W. ½ W. to S.S.W.; Sugarloaf hill from N.E. ½ N. to N.N.E.; Doorga hill from W. by N. to W.N.W.; Fort flag staff from N.W. to W.N.W.; with the mouth of the river open 6½ to 8 fathoms. A ferry plies between the north and south sides of the river. A pontoon bridge was constructed over the river on the road to Ankapully in 1887, and is known as Turner bridge. Within the site of the old fort are public buildings. The pettah [q.v.] immediately adjoins fort on its north and west sides; but shut in by sandhills to north, and the swamp already mentioned. The climate is unfavorable to Europeans. According to tradition founded by an Andhra king, Coolotoonga cholan, about the middle of the twelfth century. With the rest of the Calinga country, it fell to the Mussalman invader, and formed part of the Chicacole circar [q.v.] when Europeans first appeared on the scene. About the middle of the seventeenth century, the East india company established its factory. Factory seized and English officers murdered by Moghul's orders on 13th September 1689, owing to rupture between Aurungzeeb and Company. Cowle [q.v.] for factory renewed by Zoolfacar khan the Moghul [q.v.] general in the Deccan [q.v.], 28th December 1690. Factory allowed to be fortified by the same authority, April 1692. Entered in the dead stock account taken on the union of the two East india companies in 1702. Attack by Fakr ool lah khan, a local Nawaub [q.v.], repulsed 8th November 1710. Firmaun [q.v.] from the Emperor Ferokshere confirming the possession of the settlement, 1716. In 1726 garrison raised to thirty soldiers. Neither Jaffer ally nor his Mahratta mercenaries, who sacked Bimlipatam and harried the whole countryside, touched Vizagapatam; and save for a few months in 1757, when Bussy occupied the town, the company had undisturbed possession. The Rajah of Vizianagram took it from the French, and restored it to the English on 12th September 1758. Grant confirmed by the Moghul's firmaun [q.v.], dated 12th August 1765. Finally ceded by the Nizam together with the rest of the Northern circars [q.v.], 23rd February 1768. As a sea-port, is gradually increasing in business. Imports chiefly of piece-goods and metals from England. Principal exports are grain [dhaunyam] and sugar [q.v.]. The special industries of the town, elk horn and ivory knick-knacks, and silver filigreework, are well known. Residence of a Roman catholic vicar apostolic. The town owes much to the Maharajah of Vizianagram and the Goday [q.v.] family of Vizagapatam. At Dolphin's nose are remains of an old castle and battery, to the east of which is a large shallow cave. On a hill overlooking the harbour are the temple of Venkateshwaran, the Durgah [q.v.], two Mussalman tombs, and a Catholic church. A celebrated Mahomedan saint lies buried in the Durgah [q.v.]. Every vessel passing the bar inwards or outwards salutes him by hoisting and lowering its flag three times; he being considered allpotent over the elements in the Bay of Bengal. Silver dhonies [q.v.] are presented at his shrine by Hindoo shipowners after a successful voyage. The following are the travelling distances by road from Vizagapatam to different places:—

VIZIER (وزیر - vazír, Ar.). From (vazza, ar. to support). Minister. Usually the principal minister [muntry, peshwah, pradhaun, pragada] under a Mahomedan prince. Prefixed to an alam forms a lacab; as Vizier ally, minister of ally [ism].——Vizaurat (وزارت - vizárat, Hind.). The office of prime minister [muntry].

VOILPAUD (వాయల్పాడు - váyalpádu, Tel. váyalpád *). From (vávali, tel. five-leaved chaste tree, vitex negundo, linn. + pádu, tel. village). Sanscrit name (válmíkyáshrama), meaning vaulmeeky, the sage + hermitage.——(1) Talook, Cuddapah district. Tahsildar's pay Rs. 175. Area 831 square miles. 45 miles from east to west, and 18 miles from north to south. Population 127,043. Language Teloogoo. S.E. of district. Bounded by Royachoty talook on the north, Madanapully and Cadiry talooks on the west, Chundragherry talook, Poonganore zemindarry of North arcot on the south, and Poollampett talook on the east. The eastern portion is similar to that of Royachoty, and forms part of the same tableland with a few detached hills until shut in on the east by the hills which divide the talook from the main division. Towards the west and the south-west the talook is broken up by rocky hills. The sugar-cane [q.v.] is noted. Trade in jaggery [q.v.]. The Bauhoodah nuddy and Punchanuddy run through the talook. The principal tanks are Agrahauram, Chinnagottigull, Murripaud, Saukiraivpully and Targonda. There are 174 Government, 18 private, and 195 dasbandam [q.v.] channels [q.v.]. The two largest of the latter are the Madicoorty peddacaulwa and Voilpaud peddacaulwa. There are twelve anicuts [q.v.] of inconsiderable size. The number of wells is very large. Places of archæological interest:—Culcada, Devalapully, Gandlore, Goorramcondah, Medicoorty, Ramaupooram, Targonda, Voilpaud. Principal trig. stations:—Goondaulacondah, Suttevauripolliem, Toomcondah. The leading places, &c., in the talook are the following.——Agrahauram (అగ్రహారము - agrahāramu, Tel.). Means first gift. Bramin village. Village; pop. 1,063; acres 2,116; lat. 13° 37′; long. 79° 00′; from Cuddapah S. 60 miles; from Voilpaud E. 23 miles. Tank.——Bauhoodah nuddy (బాహుదనది - báhudanadi, Tel.). See sep. title.——Cheyair (చెయ్యేరు - cheyyéru, Tel.). See sep. title.——Chinnagottigull (చిన్నగొట్టిగల్లు - chinnagottigallu, Tel.). From (chinna, tel. small + gotti, tel. an edible root, spathium chinense, lour. + kallu, tel. stone). Village; pop. 1,733; acres 4,468; lat. 13° 39′; long. 79° 08′; from Cuddapah S.S.E. 60 miles; from Voilpaud E. 31 miles. Tank.——Chitticherla (చిట్టిచర్ల - chitticharla, Tel.). From (chiru, tel. small + cheruvu, tel. tank). Village; pop. 2,354; acres 9,399; lat. 13° 40′; long. 79° 13′; from Cuddapah S.S.E. 61 miles; from Voilpaud E. 36 miles. Seat of an important poligar's family. The only remaining polliem [q.v.] in the Ceded districts [q.v.].——Culcada (కలకడ - kalakada, Tel.). From (kallu, tel. stone + kada, tel. place). Village, Place of pilgrimage; pop. 2,705; acres 10,089; lat. 13° 50′; long. 78° 50′; from Cuddapah S. 45 miles; from Voilpaud N.E. 17 miles. On the Chittore-Cuddapah road, on a tributary of the Bauhoodah. Pagoda [q.v.] with lingam [q.v.] brought from Sidhout when that fort was taken by the Mussalmans. The festival commences about the beginning of March. Here a branch of the Cheyair, which in the rainy weather is swollen to some size, suddenly falls into the ground and, after a subterranean passage of several hundred feet issues from a cavern 200 feet lower than the spot where it made its descent. It then continues its course between high precipitous rocks through a narrow passage only four or five yards in breadth. This spot is held especially sacred. By the side of the waterfall is a pool called Dayyaulmadoogōo or devil's fountain. Those possessed of devils are dipped.——Doddipully (దొడ్డిపల్లె - doddipalle, Tel.). From (doddi, tel. backyard + palle, tel. village). Village; pop. 1,856; acres 6,456; lat. 13° 38′; long. 78° 57′; from Cuddapah S. 59 miles; from Voilpaud E. 18 miles. Seat of an old poligar's family.——Goondaulacondah (గుండాలకొండ - gundálakonda, Tel.). From (gundamu, tel. gorge + konda, tel. hill). Trig. station; lat. 13° 45′ 23·05″; long. 78° 54′ 46·44″; from Cuddapah S. 50 miles; from Soracauyalpett N.W. 2 miles; from Voilpaud E.N.E. 18 miles.——Goorramcondah (గుర్రంకొండ - gurramkonda, Tel.). Village; pop. 1,154; acres 12,081; lat. 13° 53′; long. 79° 03′; from Cuddapah S.S.E. 43 miles; from Voilpaud N.E. 31 miles. Once the seat of a poligar.——(2) Town, Talook head-quarters; Cuddapah dist., Voilpaud tal.; pop. 4,016; acres 9,879; lat. 13° 38′; long. 78° 40′; from Cuddapah S.S.W. 60 miles; from Madanapully N.E. 10 miles; from Madras W.N.W. 118 miles; from Sidhout S.S.W. 62 miles. Pagoda [q.v.] with endowment of Rs. 835 a year. Festival in March lasting ten days. Near the Bauhoodah nuddy. Till lately seat of a District moonsif's court close to Bauhoodah nuddy. Surrounded by gardens, and a place of considerable trade. Near it on the N.W. is a hill called Ancaulamma condah crowned by a tall square rock, which is a very conspicuous land mark for 10 miles round.

VOLE (వోలు - vólu, Tel.). Corruption of (prólu, tel. town). Town. Suffix in place names [pole, prole, wail].

VONTIMITTAH (ఒంటిమిట్ట - vontimitta, * Tel.). From (onti, tel. single + mitta, tel. mound) [or]. Sanscrit name (ékashilânagara), meaning single + rock + city [warangal]. Village, Railway station; Cuddapah dist., Sidhout tal.; pop. 4,484; acres 13,175; lat. 14° 24′; long. 79° 04′; height 423 feet; from Cuddapah S.E. 15 miles; from Sidhout S.E. 7 miles. Large pagoda [q.v.] dedicated to Codanda ramasawmy, built or restored by a Vijianugger rajah in 14th century. Car festival [ratotsavam] in April. Ancient mantapam [q.v.] close to a tank west of the village. North of this are two caves in the hill. Finely sculptured old temple of Gopaulsawmy. Under a tree east of the village are a number of naugaculls [q.v.], &c. Produces indigo [q.v.] and turmeric [country saffron].

VOWTAUN (வவுத்தான் - vavuttân, Tam.), From (vayiru, tam. belly + ân, tam. personal termination). Big-bellied man. Pariah proper name [peyar].

VRICSHAM (वृक्ष - vriksha, San.). From (vrih, san. to grow [vrih]). The most general term for a plant.——(1) A general sketch of the flora prevailing in the Presidency has been given in vol. II, appendix V. The present remarks compare the European and Dravidian systems of botanical terminology. Plants are arranged according to the natural system of Jussieu, De Candolle, and later writers in the first place in two main divisions called sub-kingdoms. The first sub-kingdom or Phanerogamia [vaunaspatyam] includes all plants commonly known as flowering plants, in which the sexual arrangement is apparent, with cypress [saro], pine [cheer] and casuarina [chowkmaram] trees, and grasses that have only minute flowers, or in which the flowers have not bright colors. The second sub-kingdom or Cryptogamia [vanaspaty] includes those in which the sexual arrangement is not so clearly apparent, viz., ferns [parny], mosses [pausy], mushrooms [caulaun], sea-weeds [cadalpausy], and other allied plants. The Phanerogamia sub-kingdom is again divided into two classes; Angiosperms and Gymnosperms. Angiosperms are divided into two sub-classes; Dicotyledons and Monocotyledons. Dicotyledons are also called Exogens, because the new wood is always formed outside the old wood. Monocotyledons are also called Endogens for the opposite reason. Dicotyledons are so called from the presence in the seed of two seed leaves; as in the pea [calauyam], and the castor-oil [aumanac] seed. These plants have the veins of the leaves forming an irregular network, so that if a leaf is torn the edge is irregular. The flowers have the various whorls of organs generally in fours or fives. The wood is formed in concentric annual bundles around a central pith, and increases in size by additions formed between the wood and bark, and the bark is separable. Monocotyledons are so called from the presence of one leaf only in the seed. The leaves of this class have the veins running parellel, as may be seen in a plaintain [q.v.] leaf, sugar-cane [q.v.], or any other grass. The parts of the flowers are in threes, and the wood is formed in wire-like bundles, which soon discontinue to grow in thickness. These bundles are easiiy distinguished in the stem of the cocoanut [q.v.], in the sugar-cane [q.v.], and the bamboo [q.v.]. As these divisions are natural groups in which the individual members resemble each other in many points yet differ in some respects, no single character or mark can be given by which they can be absolutely distinguished. The sub-classes are even again subdivided on account of structural considerations. Thus under Dicotyledons there are Thalamifloræ, in which the petals are distinct, and the stamens are inserted on the receptacle; Calycifloræ, in which the petals are free or more or less united, and the stamens are perigynous or epigynous and inserted on the calyx; Gamopetalæ or Corollifloræ, in which the petals are united and the stamens situated upon the corolla, and Incompletæ where the perianth is single or none. Monocotyledons are sometimes grouped, according to the nature of their inflorescence, into Spadicifloræ, Petaloideæ, and Graminiferæ. Cryptogams have also certain groups. Thus:—"a" Vascular cryptogams; class Dichotomæ, with sub-classes Ligulatæ, and Lycopodicæ; class Filicineæ, with sub-classes Rhizocarpeæ, Filices and Stipulatæ; class Equisetineæ:—"b" Muscineæ; class Musci; class Hepaticæ:—"c" Thallophytes; class Carposporæ; class Oosporeæ; class Zygosporeæ; class Protophyta. The next division after this is into Natural Orders, which is the most practically recognised. The Natural Orders are represented almost universally by Latin feminine substantives in the plural number. After the Natural Order in botanical classification comes the Genus represented by Latin substantive. Below Genus comes Species, represented by a Latin adjective, or occasionally by a Latin substantive in the genitive case. The genus in the singular and the species following and grammatically agreeing with it form a term which should if there was a universal accord among botanists be sufficient to indicate any particular species. It is usual however to add the name of the author who is responsible for the classification of the plant; as sometimes, according to different usage, one Latin name may stand for more than one plant. Another term indicating a variety of the species is sometimes added to the species. The above is the European system of botanical classification. The Dravidians have no method of classification answering to natural order, genus and species. They divide all plants however into five great structural divisions; according as they are shrub, creeper, tree, grass, or herbaceous plant. A verbal root gives the abstract name of the plant, and to that root they suffix the term expressing one of the above five divisions. The terms for these five divisions in the different Dravidian languages can be seen under the heads of shrub, creeper, tree, grass, and herbaceous plant, in section 7 below. Examples are:—(róśáshedi), a rosebush; (vellarikkodi), a cucumber; (púvarasamaram), a portia tree; (arugam pillu), dog's grass; (shanalpúnd), crotalaria. Again the Dravidians are careful, when they do not intend to indicate the whole plant, but only a part of it or one of its products, to express this by the word used. Similar to the five words indicating plant-divisions and like them to be suffixed to the abstract root, there are a large class of words indicating the parts or products of plants. Some of them can be seen in section 7 below under the heads:—bark, branch, bud, bunch, fibre, flour, flower, foliage, fruit, greens, gum, leaf, milk, nut, oil, root, seed, shoot, spathe, tuber, twig, unripe fruit. But there are many others, and in fact the number is indefinite, owing to the genius of these languages for composition. An example is the following:—in Tamul (má) is the verbal root of mango, and (mámaram) is the mango tree. But four terms can be substituted for (maram), giving the names of four different products. That is to say:—(mámpú), mango flower; (mámpiñju), mango fruit just forming; (mánkáy), unripe mango fruit; (mámpazham), ripe mango fruit. Again varieties of plants are very carefully expressed by the Dravidians through prefixes; see in section 7 below the heads, black, country, dry, foreign, garden, green, hill, large, red, small, sour, sweet, wild. There are many others of these also. An example is the following:—in Tamul (ámanakku) is the castor-oil, and (káttámanakku) is the wild castor-oil or croton. By bearing in mind the three principles here named, of structural or plant division suffix, of part or product suffix, and of descriptive prefix, the apparent complexity of Dravidian botanical nomenclature will be extensively reduced. In this work vernacular identifications of the vegetable kingdom are shown under the word-root only, leaving the reader who consults the work to add suffixes and prefixes after consulting the sub-heads of the present paragraph; in no other way could the subject have been set out within any reasonable limits. It may be noted that the term in Tamul for a barren tree is (avakósi), for a fruitful tree (palitham), for a male tree (agamkázh), for a female tree (purakázh), for a tree which has fruit without flowers (kóni); and all the Dravidian languages have the same distinction. The Dravidians attach much value to botany, and there is a Tamul proverb:—மூலிகை அறிந்தால் மூன்று உலகமும் ஆளலாம்—"he who is acquainted with botany may govern the "three worlds [trilocam]."—(2) The following is a key-synopsis of the principal flora of the Presidency indigenous, naturalized, or introduced, classified down to species, and connecting the european and native terminology. San. from (kantaka, san. spine). 101. Herbs or shrubs, with large leafy bracts, in the axils of which the flowers are partly concealed; calyx composed of deeply imbricated sepals forming a broken whorl; placenta expands into hard processes which are hooked [adhatoday, bhoonimbam, chebeera, corandy, coromandel chiretta, face plant, french chiretta, gendarussa, indra's creeper, nail-dye, neelaumbram, neermoolly, snake-jasmine, vaudaumbram].——Algæ (समुद्रशाकेयसन्तान - samudrasháké yasantána, San.). San. from (samudra, san. sea + sháka, san. herb). 163. Sea weeds, leafless, flowerless plants, usually, growing in water; many are nutritious [cadal pausy].——Amarantaceæ (अमरपुष्पीयसन्तान - amarapushpíyasantána, San.). San. from (a, san. prefix of negation + mri, san. to die

+ pushpa, san. flower), herbs which do not soon fade. 106. Amaranths. Herbs and shrubs, weeds, or occasionally showy annual plants, with inconspicuous apetalous flowers, in almost all cases of a scarious texture, most commonly of a white color, now and then pink, orange, and crimson [audayotty, indian burr, jaffer goondy, maurisham, moorgha, poolay].—— Amaryllidaceæ (कुमारीयसन्तान - kumáríyasantána, San.). San. means maiden, alluding to cool fleshy leaves. 145. Amaryllids, Narcissuses. Bulbous, sometimes fibrous-rooted, plants; have fleshy leaves, which are either flat or slightly concave, and arise in a tuft from the root, or from the top of a short stem; flowers resemble lily family; many display poisonous properties; some are emetic and purgative and some yield useful fibres [american aloe, bastard aloe, foreign aloe, poison bamboo].——Ampelideæ (द्राक्षेयसन्तान - drákshéyasantána, San.). San. from (drákshá, san. vine). 42. Vineworts. Otherwise vitaceæ. Shrubby plants climbing by tendrils; inhabitants of woods [angoor, draucshay, naralay, piranday, ratanhia, vegetable nerinjy].——Anacardiaceæ (अनुहृदीयसन्तान - anuhridíyasantána, San.). San. from (anu, san. like + hrid, san. heart), so called from the form of the nuts. 45. Anacards. Trees or shrubs having a resinous, milky, often caustic juice, dotless leaves, small inconspicuous flowers, with an ovary containing a single ovule suspended at the end of an erect cord. The juice often becomes black in drying. The fruit however in some cases is eatable [amrautam, cashew, chironjee, holigarna, kakrasinghy, mango, marking nut, mastic, otaheite apple, pistah, sumach, wodier].——Anonaceæ (गण्डगात्रेयसन्तान - gandagátréyasantána, San.). Title from (anóna, singh. custard apple). San. from (gandagátra, san. custard apple). 4. Custard apples. Trees or shrubs, tropical in habits; many abound in a powerfully aromatic secretion, which renders the flowers fragrant; the leaves of others give forth a perfume; the dried fruit of many is highly aromatic; of others the fruit is succulent and abounds in juice [anona, ashocam, doodooga, ilangilang, madmaunty].——Apocynaceæ (अपशुनेयसन्तान - apashunéyasantána, San.). San. from (apa, san. from + shuna, san. dog). 87. Dogbanes. Trees or shrubs, usually milky, allied to the asclepiadeæ; natives of the tropics; flowers ornamental; many are poisonous, some are drastic purgatives; the bark sometimes tonic and febrifugal; acrid principle combined with milky juice; tannic and gallic acid occasionally present [carondah, dita, gannair, ground paulay, odallam, pagoda tree, paula indigo, saptaparnam, shyaumalatay, snake root, tagaram, tellicherry bark, veppaulay].——Araceæ (वाराहीयसन्तान - váráhíyasantána, San.). San. from (varáha, san. an esculent yam). 152. Arums. Herbs or shrubby plants, sometimes climbing, often with corms; fruit succulent; acridity prevails and many are irritant poisons; the corms sometimes supply starch, which is separated from the acrid matter by washing [elephant creeper, elephant long pepper, elephant yam, kachvee, telinga potato, vashamboo, wild telinga potato].——Araliaceæ (तरुरुहेयसन्तान - taruruhéyasantána, San.). Title from American araba, ivy. San. from (taru, san. tree + ruh, san. to grow). 68. Ivyworts. Trees or shrubs, rarely herbs; several are conspicuous for their broad large foliage; fruit consisting always of more carpels than two, and having no double epigynous discs; they have aromatic qualities, usually slight, but occasionally intense.——Aristolochiaceæ (श्रेष्ठप्रसवेयसन्तान - shrésht'haprasavéyasantána, San.). San. from (shrésht'ha, san. best + prasava, san. delivery). 117. Birthworts. Herbs or climbing shrubby plants with axillary apetalous flowers. Resemble endogens in flowers, but exogens in stems and leaves. Have pungent, aromatic, and tonic properties [eeshwaram, indian worm-killer, isharmool].——Artocarpaceæ (अपूपफलेयसन्तान - apúpap'haléyasantána, San.). San. from (apúpa, san. bread + p'hala, san. fruit). 122. Bread-fruits. Trees or shrubs, with a milky juice, dense flower heads, and edible fruits. Many yield caoutchouc [jack, sack tree].—— Asclepiadeæ (अश्विनीयसन्तान - ashvníyasantána, San.). San. from (ashviní, san. physicians of heaven), much valued medicinally. 88. Milkweeds. Allied to apocynaceæ; lactescent, often twining, shrubs or herbs; have acrid, stimulating, purgative, diaphoretic, and emetic properties; most yield milky juice [caurallam, creeper champak, hedge cotton, indian ipecacuanha, indian sarsaparilla, mandey, nakchiknee silk cotton, needle paulay, paulay silk cotton, somam, vattoovally, yercum].——Basellaceæ (उपोदिकेयसन्तान - upódikéyasantána, San.). Title from basella, the malabar name. San. from (upódiká, san. basella genus). 109. Malabar nightshades. Mostly herbaceous climbers, with more or less succulent leaves, and small inconspicuous flowers; the perianth is usually thick and fleshy, and the style is three-cleft. Calyx double, stamens perigynous, outer calyx consists of two bracts which are adnate to the perianth [malabar nightshade]. ——Berberidæ (बर्बरीयसन्तान - barbaríyasantána, San.). Title from Arab. berberis, wild. San. from. (barbara, san. wild). 6. Berberids. Small trees or shrubs, with dry or succulent fruits, the latter of which contain large quantities of malic acid; bark and wood bitter; occur in hilly regions [berberry].—— Bignoniaceæ (पाटलीयसन्तान - pátalíyasantána, San.). San. from (pátala, san. trumpet flower tree). 99. Trumpet flowers. Trees or twining or climbing shrubby plants whose trumpet-shaped flowers are great beauty; distinguished by large flat seed-pods; large white or yellow, often malodorous, flowers prevail [indian cork, night paulay, pajanely, pautalam, pauthiry, valencoorny, water ailanto, wody].——Bixineæ (कुंकुमफलीयसन्तान - kunkumap'halíyasantána, San.). San. from (kunkumap'halá, san. saffron-fruited, arnotto, bixa orellana). Title otherwise flacourtiaceæ. 14. Arnottoes. Shrubs or small trees; some are bitter and astringent; others yield edible fruits [attack, ceylon plum, chaulmoogra, forest bair, golden silk cotton, indian plum, marotty, mauritius plum, monkey country saffron, swaudoocantacam, tomi-tomi].——Boragineæ (हृदयङ्गमेयसन्तान - hridyangaméyasantána, San.). San. from (hridaya, san. heart + gam, san. to go); beloved. 92. Borageworts. Herbs or shrubs, with round stems, alternate, rough leaves; remarkable for mucilaginous properties; some yield dyes [shauyam], others are used as potherbs [coorvitchy, donkey toombay, gowzabaun, indian heliotrope, keeray, sebesten].——Burseraceæ (वोलेयसन्तान - vóléyasantána, San.). San. from (vóla, san. myrrh). 35. Myrrhs. Yielding several kinds of aromatic resinous substances called Balsam [balm of gilead, balsam, bdellium, black dammer, bole, caunary, elemi, garooga, kiloovay, olibanum, pehimbia, yellow dammer]. ——Cacteæ (नागफणीयसन्तान - nágap'haníyasantána, San.). San. from (nágap'hana, san. serpent's hood, opuntia dillenii, haw.). 65. Melon-thistles. Succulent, often spiny herbs; many are ornamental; the fruit of many is sub-acid; in some instances, insipid; the stems of some are eaten by cattle [prickly-pear]. ——Campanulaceæ (घण्टिकेयसन्तान - ghantikéyasantána, San.). San. from (ghanta, san. bell). 76. Bellworts. Herbaceous plants, valued for beauty of flowers [water long pepper, wild pogauk].——Capparideæ (करीरेयसन्तान - karíréyasantána, San.). San. from (karíra, san. capparis). 11. Capparids. Herbs, shrubs, or thorny trees. In their properties resemble crucifers. They have pungent, stimulant, and antiscorbutic qualities [caper, nirvala, vailay].——Caryophylleæ (कणिकफुल्लेयसन्तान - kanikap'hulléyasantána, San.). San. from (kanika, san. grain + p'hulla, san. bloom). 17. Silenads or Cloveworts. Herbaceous plants often growing in tufts with grass-like leaves; opposite leaves and terminal flowers; inhabit mountains, hedges, rocks, and waste places.——Casuarinaceæ (कशकृशीयसन्तान - kashakrishíyasantána, San.). San. from (kasha, san. whip + krisha, san. slender); from long slender branches. 127. Beef-woods. Leafless trees, tropical or sub-tropical, having the aspect of equisetums [chowk maram]; they abound in australia; their wood is hard and heavy, and on account of its color is called beef-wood [chowkmaram]. ——Celastrineæ (हैमलेयसन्तान - haimaléyasantána, San.). San. from (haimala, san. winter), the fruit remaining on the tree all the winter. 40. Spindle trees. Shrubs or trees; more or less acrid and some of the plants yield oil [chintoo, malkangany, nerija].——Combretaceæ (हरीतकीयसन्तान - harítakíyasantána, San.). San. from (harítakí, san. terminalia chebula, retz.); the best known here of the order. 55. Myrobalans. Trees or shrubs; astringency, the prevalent principle [antyaparny, belleric myrobalan, catapang, chebulic myrobalan, dhavam, harra, madagascar mangrove, murdah, pauchimaun, rangoon creeper, tanakk, vekkauly, wodala].——Commelynaceæ (वत्सप्रियसन्तान - vatsapriyasantána, San.). San. from (vatsapriya, san. dear to calf, commelyna communis, linn.). 139. Spiderworts. Herbs, with flat leaves. Underground stems of many yield starch and are used for food [calf's grass, wild rattan].—— Compositæ (संयुक्तपुष्पीयसन्तान - samyuktapushpíyasntána, San.). San. from (samyukta, san. united + pushpa, san. flower). 74. Otherwise Asteraceæ. Herbs or shrubs, sometimes assume arborescent forms; flowers generally yellow; bitterness prevails to a greater or less degree; this is accompanied with tonic, stimulant, aromatic and narcotic qualities [akalkarah, ayappanay, baboona, bastard saffron, bhangrah, buffalo carolah, burdock datura, camel thistle, costum, country radish, elephant's foot, fever toolsy, gendah, hare's ear, indian absinth, indian endive, kahoo, madras absinth, moondy, nakchiknee, pig plant, ramtil, seed toolsy, shaumanty, style plant, wild jeerah].—— Convolvulaceæ (संवर्तितेयसन्तान - samvartitéyasantána, San.). San. from (sam, san. together + vrit, san. to roll). 93. Bindweeds. Herbs or shrubs, usually twining and lactescent. Very abundant; they twine round other shrubs or creep among the weeds of the seashore; brilliant wheel-shaped flowers, of pure white, blue, rose, purple and intermediate shades; characterized by purgative properties and contain some important medicinal plants [ajauntry, calamby, caushy ratnam, deer's foot, drowpady's hair, giant potato, indian pink, jalap, kaladanah, laldanah, malabar creeper, moon flower, quamoclit, rat's ear, red adambo, seashore paulay, scammony, seeta's knot, seeta's thread, sweet potato, tauly, tiger's foot, tooty coora, turbith, vishnoocraunty, white adambo].——Cornaceæ (शृङ्गेयसन्तान - shringéyasantána, San. from (shringa, san. horn), the wood being thought to be as hard as a horn. 69. Dogwoods. Trees or herbs usually with opposite leaves having no stipules; flowers in cymose clusters or in heads surrounded by an involucre; calyx adherent, its limb four-toothed, petals four valvate in bud; stamens alternate with petals; styles united into one; ovary two-celled; ovules solitary, pendulous; fruit a two-celled drupe; these plants are used as tonics and in ague [alanjy].——Crassulaceæ (स्थूलकेयसन्तान - st'húlakéyasantána, San.). San. from (st'húla, san. thick + ka, san. diminutive suffix), in allusion to the fleshy leaves and stems. 51. House-leeks. Succulent herbs or shrubs, found in the driest situations; acridity prevails; some are refrigerant, others astringent [zakhm hayaut].——Cruciferæ (क्रूशभरेयसन्तान - krúshabharéyasantána, San.). San. from (cross + bhri, san. to bear). Name from the cruciform disposition of the four petals. 10. Cabbages; Herbaceous plants; antiscorbutic and pungent and occasionally acrid; none are poisonous; the order contains many of the culinary vegetables in constant use; have much nitrogen and sulphur in their composition [country radish, haleem, kobee, rayaun, sarshapam, sarsoon, shalgham].——Cucurbitaceæ (कर्कटिकेयसन्तान - karkatikéyasantána, San.). San. from (karkatika, san. cucumis melo, linn., var. utilissimus, roxb.). 62. Gourds. Succulent, climbing plants; herbaceous, annual, very rarely perennial; the root of the annual is thin that of the perennial fleshy; possess a certain degree of acridity; in many cases however as in the melon [oorvauroo], the cucumber [oorvauroo], the vegetable marrow [q.v.], gourd [carcauroo], pumpkin [carcauroo] and squash [carcauroo], the fruit is edible when cultivated; the seeds are usually harmless [braminy kite, caper, carcauroo, carolah, fakeer's bottle, indian caper, indravally, luffa, mosmoosky, neyoonny, oorvauroo, penarvally, rama's caper, snake gourd, wax-gourd].——Cycadaceæ (अलकपत्रीयसन्तान - alakapatríyasantána, San.). San. from (alaka, san. curl + patra, san. leaf). 129. Cycads. Small palm-like trees or shrubs with unbranched stems. Have a mucilaginous juice, in which there is often much starch used for food [indian sago palm].——Cyperaceæ (खपुरेयसन्तान - khapuréyasantána, San.). San. from (khapura, san. cyperus pertenuis, roxb.). 155. Sedges. Grass-like or rush-like cæspitose plants; triangular stem without knots; found especially in marshes, ditches and about running streams [club grass, coray, nalam].——Dilleniaceæ (भव्यकेयसन्तान - bhavyakéyasantána, San.). San. from (bhavya, san. dillenia indica, linn.). 2. Handsome flowering trees and shrubs; some of the former affording excellent timber; but the shrubs are usually climbing or prostrate; a few herbaceous plants also occur; flowers often yellow; are generally astringent; the fruit of most are acid and used in curries [chaltah, curry].——Dioscoreaceæ (आलुकेयसन्तान - álukéyasantána, San.). San. from (álu, san. dioscorea genus). 132. Yams [auloo]. Shrubs; climbing and sarmentaceous; roots large, tuberous; acridity prevails, but is often associated with starch [auloo, malacca yam].——Dipterocarpeæ (द्विपत्रगर्भेयसन्तान - dvipatragarbhéyasantána, San.). San. from (dvi, san. twice + patra, san. wing + garbha, san. fruit). 24. Dipterads. Almost exclusively Indian. Large, fine flowering trees, abounding in resinous juice; leaves alternate, marked with strong parallel veins [caung, gurjan, piney, saul].——Ebenaceæ (तिन्दुकेयसन्तन - tindukéyasantána, San.). San. from (tinduka, san. diospyros embryopteris, pers.). 83. Trees or shrubs, not lactescent; fruit, a round or oval berry; give hard and valuable timber; the bark of some is astringent, the fruit is in many eatable; the heart-wood of several species of diospyros [indian ebony] constitute different kinds of ebony [calaminder wood, gaub, indian ebony, neilgherry satin-wood].——Equisetaceæ (अश्ववालीयसन्तान - ashvaválíyasantána, San.). Title from resemblance to horse tails. San. from (ashva, san. horse + vála, san. tail). 159. Horse tails. Plants having great resemblance to ferns; they are often perennial, new shoots being thrown up from creeping rhizomes; the spores germinate like ferns [parny]; shoots are jointed, the articulation having a toothed membranous sheath; fruit a terminal cone; good sand-binders [ashwa vauly, manal].——Ericaceæ (जाङ्गलेयसन्तान - jángaléyasantána, San.). San. from (jángala, san. heath). 78. Heathworts. Shrubs or under shrubs with evergreen, rigid, entire, whorled or opposite exstipulate leaves; calyx inferior, four to five-cleft; corolla four to five-cleft; stamens eight to ten or twice these numbers, hypogynous; anthers two-celled, with appendages, opening by pores; ovary surrounded by a disk or scales; fruits capsular, rarely berried; seeds numerous, albuminous. Divided into two sections; one in which fruits open loculicidally, rarely septicidally; buds naked; the other in which the fruits capsular, septicidal; buds scaly, resembling cones [neilgherry rhododendron].——Euphorbiaceæ (वज्रीयसन्तान - vajríyasantána, San.). San. from (vajra, san. euphorbia genus). 118. Spurgeworts. Trees, shrubs, or herbs; are generally acrid and poisonous, abounding in milky juice; starchy matter is procured from many as well as oils [yennay] and gutta [q.v.]; a few are garden plants, from the colored leaves surrounding the flowers [agaroo, amlashaucam, ammaun putcharisy, aumanac, aumlacam, brazil cherry, carpenter's tamarind, caunchy, caunjory, china tallow, chinny, cooppamainy, croton-lac tree, cuttimandoo, devil's goad, emblic myrobalan, garrar, gasambilla, ghantabeejam, jamalgota, java cedar, kamela, lumbang nut, malda dye, maumsicay, milk-hedge, neeroory, nelly, nicoombham, nolatauly, poolah, poolah coral tree, pootranjeeva, round-leaved nelumbo, round pepper, thorny vengay, tiger's milk, vattatauly, wild gannair, white tanakk].——Ficoideæ (उदुम्बरेयसन्तान - udumbaréyasantána, San.). San. from (udumbara, san. ficus glomerata, miq.). 66. Fig-marigolds. Succulent shrubs or herbs; some are esculent, while a few are diuretic; rich in alkaline carbonates; explained by their usually frequenting the seashore [hazaur danah, manaly, parpatam, shauranay, tirye].——Filices (पर्णीयसन्तान - parníyasantána, San.). San. from (parna, san. leaf). 157. Ferns. Two classes, evergreen and deciduous; the evergreen are most valued in cultivation; tree ferns grow on the Neilgherries [parny].——Fluviales (स्रोतोवहेयसन्तान - srótóvahéyasantána, San.). San. from (srótas, san. river + vah, san. to carry). 134. Naiads. Plants living in fresh or salt water, and having cellular leaves with parallel veins, and inconspicuous flowers, which are unisexual or hermaphrodite; fruit dry, one-celled, usually indehiscent.——Fumariaceæ (धूम्रेयसन्तान - dhúmréyasantána, San.). San. from (dhúmra, san. smoke); from the smell of some of the species. 9. Fumeworts. Have watery juice, and contain a bitter principle [pitpapra].——Fungi (शिलीन्ध्रेयसन्तान - shilíndhréyasantána, San.). San. from (shilíndhra, san. mushroom). 161. Mushrooms. Several nutritious, many poisonous [caulaun].——Gentianaceæ (कैरातेयसन्तान - kairátéyasantána, San.). San. from (kairáta, san. chiretta). 90. Gentianworts. Herbs, rarely shrubs; fruit, a capsule or berry; bitterness prevails; occasionally emetic and narcotic [chiretta, floating nelumbo, sankhvel].——Geraniaceæ (जलरञ्जेयसन्तान - jalarañjéyasantána, San.). San. from (jalarañja, san. crane); from the long beak-like prolongation of the axis. 31. Crane's bills. Herbs or shrubs; valued in gardens for flowers; have astringent and aromatic qualities [blimbing, coromandel gooseberry, goolmindie, lavaly, sour auray].——Gnetaceæ (काण्डदेवदारसन्तान - kándadévadárasantána, San.). San. from (kánda, san. joint + dévadára, san. pinus genus). 128. Joint firs. Small trees or creeping shrubs, with jointed stems and branches, with opposite reticulated, and sometimes scaly leaves; flowers monœcious or diœcious arranged in catkins or heads; the seeds of some of them are eaten.——Graminaceæ (घासेयसन्तान - gháséyasantána, San.). San. from (ghása, san. grass). 156. Grasses. Lance-shaped herbs, generally with hollow stems; the roots are fibrous, and not to be confounded with the creeping stems sometimes wrongly called roots; generally erect, all destitute of true thorns; the most numerous and useful of plants; the seeds of the grasses contain flour; chaff is the pericarp; the seeds of all, those of the darnel alone excepted, are capable by cultivation of becoming alimentary; they constitute a twentieth of all known plants; they are usually social plants, forming herbage, sometimes becoming arborescent, 50 or 90 feet high; the cultivated grains, have been so long under cultivation that the native state of most is unknown; properties nutritive in a marked degree; some yield fragrant oils [attar], others produce sugar [ant grass, bajrah, bamboo, beard grass, broom grass, cholum, cleft grass, coosham, coraly, coratty pausy, cumboo, cuscus, dharbhay, geung, ginger grass, guinea grass, hurrially, ibharancoosha, indian grass, jow, keshinee, khoda, lalong grass, lemon grass, moonj, moonshee grass, naunal, nivvary, nutt, paddy, priyangoo, purple grass, raggy, ravanan's whiskers, roussa grass, sharam, shaumay, soda grass, spear grass, squirrel ginger, sticky grass, sugar-cane, surprise grass, tinay, trail grass, varagoo].——Guttiferæ (विन्दुपत्रीयसन्तान - vindupatríyasantána, San.). San. from (vindu, san. drop + patra, san. leaf). 22. Gamboges. Trees or shrubs with resinous juice, opposite leathery leaves, and often incomplete flowers. Fruit dry or succulent, one or many-celled. The plants are generally acrid, and yield a yellow gum-resin [googal]. Ornamental foliage [gamboge, mangosteen, nauga champak, poon, ractaumram, tickor].——Hydrocharidaceæ (उद्रहर्षीयसन्तान - udraharshíyasantána, San.). San. from (udra, san. water + harsh, san. to rejoice). 148. Frog-bits. Aquatic plants; with flowers in spathe, often incomplete; perianth of six leaves, the three inner petaloid; fruit dry or fleshy, and opening; seeds albuminous.——Hydrophyllaceæ (उद्रफुल्लेयसन्तान - udrap'hulléyasantána, San.). San. from (udra, san. water + p'hulla, san. bloom). 91. Water-leaf. Herbs or small trees with alternate lobed hispid leaves; fruit a two-valved one-celled, or spuriously two-celled capsule; some are cultivated on account of their showy flowers [river blatty].——Hypoxidaceæ (अपाग्रेयसन्तान - apágréyasantána, San.). San. from (apa, san. beneath + agra, san. point); referring to the base of the capsule. 146. Herbs with a tuberous or fibrous perennial root, radical linear dry leaves, and tromerous flowers on scapes; fruit dry or berried; roots of some bitter and aromatic, and the tuber of a few are eaten [cauly moosly].——Labiatæ (तुलसीयसन्तान - tulasíyasantána, San.). San. from (tulasí, san. ocimum sanctum, linn.). 103. Mints [poodeenah]. Herbs or undershrubs; have no deleterious qualities; are generally aromatic and fragrant; odour depends on an essential oil [attar] containing camphor [q.v.]; some are tonics; many are used as carminatives and antispasmodics, and cultivated in gardens for culinary purposes [country borage, country lavender, indian sage, ipar, malabar catmint, marwah, patchouli, poodeenah, toolsy, toombay, zoofah].——Lauraceæ (तमालेयसन्तान - tamáléyasantána, San.). San. from (tamála, san. cinnamomum tamala, nees.). 111. Laurels. Trees; fruit, a berry or drupe; inhabiting cool places; in all cases more or less aromatic and fragrant; some are valuable for timber, others bear fruit that partake of the quality of the nutmeg [jautikye]; a certain number are febrifuges, some yield a fixed as well as volatile oil [yennay] and an abundance of camphor [alligator pear, cinnamon, cottaun, meida lukdy, nanmuh, zafnee].——Leguminosæ (शमीयसन्तान - shamíyasantána, San.). San. from (shamí, san. legume); pulse. 48. Beans. Leguminous tribe. Herbs, shrubs, or trees. Distinguished by the fruit being a pod, the flowers as a rule bearing a resemblance to a pea-blossom in shape. The order is among the most extensive known, also one of the most important to man. However upon the whole it is poisonous, and those species which are used for food by man or animals are exceptions to the general rule, deleterious juices of the order not being in such instances sufficiently concentrated to prove injurious, and being in fact replaced to a considerable extent by either sugar [q.v.] or starch. All the varieties have pinnate leaves, small and papilionaceous flowers, appearing in axillary clusters of a purple hue; the calyx is cleft; segments, acute; standard, roundish and notched at the upper extremity; keel furnished with a sub-acute spur on both sides; stamens, arranged in two distinct bundles, nine and one; legume, continuous, one or more seeded; seeds, truncated, separated by spurious cellular partitions. Leguminosæ have been divided into three sub-orders; Papilionaceæ, Cæsalpinieæ, and Mimosæ [agatty, anasandra, arabian manna, aurágvadham, australian blackwood, babool, bawchee, bengal ashocam, biswool, black nerinjy, bonduc, cabool country bean, calauyam, cantalam, casauree, casondy, catechu, caunooga, chakondah, condray, coobairaucshy, coral tree, corcapillay, corindah, country bean, cowitch, crow-creeper, dholl, divy divy, dog neem, ghantaravam, giligitcha, goa bean, gold mohur tree, gram, ground nut, guar, indian liquorice, indian medicago, indigo, iripa, karanj, kateerah, lobyah, maitee, malabar blackwood, manilla tamarind, masoor, maushaparny, mesquit, moodgam, mountain ebony, mysore thorn, neely, neer choondy, nemmy, nitta, orila, padouk, palaus, ratnagandhy, red nerinjy, red sanders, sappan, scimitar pod, senna, sesban, shamee, shaulicay, shingle tree, shivah, shiva's neem, shoondy, sially, sirissa, sissoo, soap-pod, solah, soonkeshwaram, sooptee, soovarnacam, sundra, sunn, tamarind, tambattam, three leaf poon, tungaid, vail, vengay, wagaty, wayaka, wild moringa, yaipy, yooga pattricay, zamang].——Lichenes (शिलावल्केयसन्तान - shilávalkéyasantána, San.). San. from (shilávalka, san. lichens). 162. Lichens [cullpausy]. Perennials, spreading in the form of a crust over rocks, trees, or the surface of the earth; some yield to ammoniacal solutions a variety of brilliant colors [cull pausy, shauyam].——Liliaceæ (व्याघ्रनखीयसन्तान - vyághranakhíyasantána, San.). San. from (vyághra, san. tiger + nakha, san. claw). 136. Lilyworts. Herbs, shrubs, or trees; ornamental foliage; some are used as emetic and purgatives, others are stimulant and diaphoretic; some yield resinous [raul] and astringent matter, others supply valuable materials for manufactures [adam's needle, aloe, indian salep, lussoon, marool, naugdown, piyauz, shakankool, shatamooly, soofaid moosly, soorinjaun, squill, wild bachnaug].——Lineæ (अतसीयसन्तान - atasíyasantána, San.). San. from (atasí, san. linum usitatissimum, linn.). 28. Flaxworts [alsee]. Showing a connection with malvaceæ in mucilaginous properties, and the strong fibre of the inner bark; seeds of all species are mucilaginous and oily [alsee, creeping falsah, deccany deodar].——Loganiaceæ (मुष्टीयसन्तान - mushtíyasantána, San.). San. from (mushti, san. strychnos nux vomica, linn.). 89. Strychnias. Shrubs, herbs, or trees; are highly poisonous; in very minute doses act as tonics [clearing nut, mooshty, papeeta, poison nut, snake-wood tree].——Lycopodiaceæ (शूकरेयसन्तान - shúkaréyasantána, San.). San. from (shúkara, san. lycopodium). Lycopodium is called vegetable sulphur. 158. Clubmosses. Consist of minute yellow particles [shookaram].——Lythraceæ (लोहितेयसन्तान - lóhitéyasantána, San.). San. from (lóhita, san. red). 58. Loose-strifes. Herbs, rarely shrubs; astringency is met with in many plants; some furnish dyes [adambo, agnivendram, anaur, blatty, cadaly, chennangy, godaury, mindie, venteak].——Magnoliaceæ (चंपकेयसन्तान - champakéyasantána, San.). San. from (champaka, san. michelia champaca, linn.). 3. Frutescent or arborescent plants, with alternate, generally entire leaves, terminal or axillary flowers; contain an essential oil [attar] often united with a bitter substance; many cultivated for beauty of flowers [champak, star anise].——Malpighiaceæ (माधवीयसन्तान - mádhavíyasantána, San.). San. from (mádhaví, san. hiptage madablota, gærtn.). 29. Barbadoes cherries. Trees or shrubs, often climbing; generally astringent; many are handsome trees or climber with showy flowers [madablota].——Malvaceæ (मृद्वेयसन्तान - mridvéyasantána, San.). San. from (mridu, san. soft); alluding to the mucilaginous properties of the plants. 25. Mallowworts. Herbs, shrubs, or trees; found in great abundance; have flowers resembling the common hollyhock in shape, the five-colored portions of the flower being united at their base to a tube; most are herbs or shrubs with stalked leaves, the seeds are usually kidney-shaped; the uniform character is that of abounding in mucilage, and an entire absence of deleterious properties [balah, baobab, bendy, carpausy, cotton, durian, khoobauzy, mootty, portia, tootty, wild bengal gram].——Marantaceæ (शीतलपत्रीयसन्तान - shítalapatríyasantána, San.). San. from (shítalapatri, san. cold leaf, maranta dichotoma, wall.). 143. Arrowroots. Herbaceous plants closely allied to zingiberaceæ; amylaceous qualities prevail [indian shot, seetalpaty].——Melanthaceæ (मलिनप्रसूनेयसन्तान - malinaprasúnéyasantána, San.). San. from (malina, san. dirty + prasúna, san. fruit). 137. Colchicums. Herbs with bulbs, corms, or fasciculated roots, and white green or purple flowers; fruit a three-celled capsule; they are acrid, purgative, emetic, and sometimes narcotic in their qualities.——Melastomaceæ (मलिनास्येयसन्तान - malinásyéyasantána, San.). San. from (malina, san. dirty + ásya, san. mouth); in allusion to the berry staining the mouth when eaten. 57. Melastomads. Trees, herbs, or shrubs, with opposite ribbed leaves and showy flowers; fruit many-celled, either capsular or succulent; there are no unwholesome plants in the order, and the succulent fruit of several are edible [cassa, forest bengal gram].——Meliaceæ (माल्केयसन्तान - málakéyasantána, San.). San. from (málaka, san. melia azadirachta). 36. Bead trees. Are bitter, astringent, and tonic; some act as powerful purgatives and emetics [chickrassy, crab-oil plant, lanesh, malay red wood, neem, rohitacam, satinwood, shrub orange, soymida, toon, tottila, walsoora].——Menispermaceæ (मासकबीजेयसन्तान - másakabíjéyasantána, San.). San. from (mása, san. moon + bíja, san. seed). Trailing shrubs. 5. Moonseeds. Important to physicians, containing several valuable remedies, and more than one formidable poison; inhabit only warm climates; the stalk is sarmentaceous, the leaves alternate, petiolar, simple or compound, the flowers axillary; pervading principle is a bitter substance, associated with mucilage or starch, and a yellow coloring matter of great intensity; common in the woods and climb among the trees to a great height [calumba, creeper mooshty, goolancha, indian berry, indian pareira, jamtee, vausana vully].——Moraceæ (वटेयसन्तान - vatéyasantána, San.). San. from (vata, san. ficus bengalensis, linn.). 121. Mulberries. Trees or shrubs with a milky juice; leaves commonly rough and lobed; flowers small, unisexual, collected in heads, spikes or catkins. Fruit is a succulent sorosis or syconus. Plants abound in milky juice yielding caoutchouc [indian caoutchouc]. Fruit often bland, nutritious, while their bark yields fibres [anjeer, atty, banyan, indian cautchouc, indian mulberry, nooga, peepul, stunted jack, tsiela].——Moringeæ (मुरुङ्गीयसन्तान - murungíyasantána, San.). San. from (murungí, san. moringa pterygosperma, gærtn.). 46. Horse-radishes. Long legumes; allied to leguminosæ; trees with pinnate or tripinnate leaves; properties usually stimulant and pungent; almond contains oil [moringa, yennay].——Musaceæ (कदलीयसन्तान - kadalíyasantána, San.). San. from (kadali, san. musa paradisiaca, linn.). 142. Bananas. The plants have shoots proceeding from subterranean root-stalks, which form spurious stems composed of the sheathing leaf-stalks; fruit either a three-celled capsule or succulent and indehiscent; natives of warm and tropical regions, and supply a large quantity of nutritious fruit, while their leaves afford valuable fibres [naur, plantain, traveller's palm].——Musci (शैवलेयसन्तान - shaivaléyasantána, San.). San. from (shaivala, san. moss). 160. Mosses [pausy]. Leaves more or less pointed and lanceolate, imbricated or distichous; fruit ovate, opening horizontally by the opening of a terminal lid; mosses are either annual or perennial; in the latter case new branches are thrown out; require a great deal of moisture when in active growth; in agriculture or in the garden, noxious weeds; not of any great utility [pausy].——Myristicaceæ (जातीयसन्तान - játíyasantána, San.). San. from (játí, san. myristica fragrans, houtt.). 112. Nutmegs. Natives exclusively of the tropics; trees bearing appearance of laurels; from bark exudes a viscous juice; the fruit is the important part; are acrid and aromatic [jauty].——Myrsineæ (विडङ्गसन्तान - vidangasantána, San.). San. from (vidanga, san. embelia ribes, burm). 81. Ardisiads. Trees or shrubs. Fruit fleshy. Many are handsome, evergreen shrubs [byebarang].——Myrtaceæ (जाम्बवीयसन्तान - jámbavíyasantána, San.). San. from (jambu, san. eugenia jambolana, lamk.). 56. Myrtle-blooms. Trees or shrubs, prevailing principle is volatile oil [yennay] in calices, fruits, bark, and leaves; tannic acid also abounds [australian gum tree, blue gum, cajeput, china pepper, coomby, foreign mindie, guava, indian oak, jamboo, jaumoon, lavangam, moy, red gum, rose-apple].——Nyctagineæ (नक्तगेयसन्तान - naktagéyasantána, San). San. from (nakta, san. night + gam, san. to go). 105. Marvel of Perus. Herbs or shrubs; roots are purgative [conky, false jalap, tikry].——Nymphæaceæ (अम्बुजेयसन्तान - ambujéyasantána, San.). San. from (ambuja, san. water-born, nymphæa lotus, linn.). 7. Water-lilies. Aquatic herbs with large showy flowers; chiefly inhabit quiet waters; attached to the earth by fibres, with elliptical or circular leaves floating on, or in the lotus [nelumbo] sometimes standing out of, the water; possesses bitter, astringent, and narcotic properties; the plants contain much starch in their rhizomes which are used for food in the same way as potatoes [indian water-lily, makhanah, nelumbo, potato].——Ochnaceæ (कनकचम्पेयसन्तान - kanakachampéyasantána, San.). San. from (kanakachampa, san. ochna squarrosa, linn.). 34. Ochnads. A small group of under-shrubs or trees allied to rutaceæ; bitter, tonic properties [shilandy].——Olacineæ (वासकेयसन्तान - vásakéyasantána, San.). Title from (vásaka, san. perfuming). 38. Olacads. Tropical or sub-tropical trees or shrubs, with simple alternate exstipulate leaves; fruit fleshy, one-celled, one-seeded [false sandal, poovana].——Oleaceæ (जितवृक्षेयसन्तान - jitavrikshéyasantána, San.). San. from (jitavriksha, san. olea). 85. Oliveworts. Trees or shrubs; sweet smelling flowers; some have emollient and laxative properties; others are bitter, tonic, and febrifugal; some supply oil [yennay], others manna [indian olive, jasmine, jita, sicilian manna, weaver's beam, zeitoon].——Onagraceæ (वनरासभेयसन्तान - vanarásabhéyasantána, San.). San. from (vana, san. wild + rásabha, san. ass); from leaves resembling ass's ears. 59. Evening primroses. Herbs or shrubs; properties mucilaginous and astringent; some yield edible roots and fruits [lowly lavangam, singhaura].—— Orchidaceæ (मुष्केयसन्तान - mushkéyasantána, San.). San. from (mushka, san. testicles); from similar root. 141. Orchids. Terrestrial or epiphytic herbs, or shrubs, with showy flowers. Groups of petals frequently resembling insects or birds. Cling to the trunks and limbs of trees, and to stones and bare rocks, where they vegetate among ferns and other shade loving plants. Fragrant, aromatic, tonic, and mucilaginous properties. The roots of some of the terrestrial species contain bassorin and constitute the nutritious substance called salep [q.v.]. A short distance north of Sookhanuddy. The scene of several important operations in Carnatic [q.v.] wars. The fort belonged to a member of the family of the Nawaub [q.v.] of Arcot. In 1752 it was attacked by Major Lawrence. In 1757 Colonel Aldercom destroyed the town, but failed to capture the fort. The French garrison twice in that year repulsed the English, A more energetic attack under Monson in 1759 was also unsuccessful. Immediately after this the French soldiers mutinied, and although they were speedily pacified the fort surrendered to Coote before the end of the year. In 1760 the French appeared before the fort and in the pitched battle which ensued the French were utterly routed and Bussy was taken prisoner. This victory was in itself and in its consequences the most important ever won over the French in India. In 1780 Lieutenant Flint by a bold stratagem saved the fort from falling into the hands of Hyder ally, and with very inadequate means held it for nearly three years against every device of the enemy. Twice he was relieved by Sir Eyre Coote, and twice at least he repelled most vigorous assaults. Fort probably built by Mahrattas. In ordinary Hindoo style, being rectangular, with circumference of a mile. A plantation of indigo [q.v.] within the walls. Traces of its many sieges remain. The jagheer [q.v.] was first given by the emperor Mahomed shah to Mahomed takee khan at the request of his father-in-law nawaub Dost ally. He was deposed by Wallajah because he and Chundah sahib had married sisters, and he had admitted French officers into the fort. After some years, Wallajah conferred it upon his daughter Daryah begum, who held it for some years. At the cession the Nawaub [q.v.] was in possession of the revenues, which therefore passed to the Company. Temple of Jhallacaunteshwara sawmy in which Runganauta sawmy is also worshipped, the idol [shilay, vigraham] being placed in the Calyauna mantapam [q.v.]. Wandiwash hill is better known as Dhavalagherry. Trade in grain. Mats [boriyah] and leather [chamrah] manufactured.

Tel. from (gurramu, tel. horse + tsabuku, tel. whip). Tam. from (kadal, tam. sea + kuthirai, tam. horse). Tam. also (karbámbu), meaning stone + snake. Title otherwise Pipe-fish. Syngnathus serratus, syngnathidæ, lophobranchii, teleostei [matsyam, 43], of naturalists [jantoo]. Alias Syngnathus subbookoo, typle; Trachyrhamphus cultirostris, serratus. Subbookoo from teloogoo, meaning whip. Eyes large, situated in the middle of the length of the head; body scarcely deeper than broad; shields without spines; light brown with light spots along the side, and the body banded in rings, tail fin black with a white lower edge; a dark mark at base of anterior dorsal rays; and a dark line along the middle of the fin; sea; very common. No other species here.——Whip snake (دھامن - dhámin, Hind.; ಹಸರುಹಾವು - hasaruhávu, Can.; పసరికపాము - pasarikapámu, Tel.; പച്ചപ്പാമ്പ - paççappámbu, Mal.; பச்சைப்பாம்பு - paççaippámbu, Tam.). Title from the slender body. Hind. from (dháv, san. to run quickly). Can. from (hasaru, can. green + hávu, can. snake). Tel. from (pasarika, tel. green + pámu, tel. snake). Mal. and Tam. from (paççai, tam. green + pámbu, tam. snake). Tam. also (kanguttippámbu), meaning eye + piercing + snake [pit viper]. The terms may be considered as co-extensive with the family Dryiophidæ, ophidii colubriformes, ophidia [sarpam], reptilia [sarpy, 21], of naturalists [jantoo]. The whip-snakes are distinguished by their excessively slender body, compared to the cord of a whip, by their prevalent green color with two white stripes on the belly. Movements are awkward on the flat ground, but graceful and rapid in their natural haunts among the branches of trees. The following are the South indian species:—"a" Passerita mycterizans. Alias Coluber mycterizans; Dryinus nasutus; Dryiophis nasuta. Bright grass-green, bronze shade on back; on the anterior part of trunk skin between scales is white or black, these colors forming alternate cross bands when the animal expands that portion of the body; yellow stripe runs along each side of the pale-green abdomen; sometimes brownish olive instead of green; length of more than six feet. Feeds on birds and lizards. Often found on trees, and so called a Tree-snake; but see that head. Said to attack passengers, aiming particularly at the eyes, but it is perfectly harmless.—"b" Tragops dispar. Males bright green; females bronzecolored; skin between the scales black; a yellowish line with a greenish inner edge runs along each side of the abdomen.—"c" Tragops fronticinctus. Alias Dryiophis fronticinctus. Form grass-green above, paler below, with a yellow band along each side of the belly.——Whip tree (சவுக்கு - shavukku, Tam.). From long slender branches. Same as Chowk maram.

WHITE (श्वेत - shvéta, San.). Common prefix. For white arsenic see Soofaid soombal. For white lead see Moottoo velly. For white pepper see Pepper. For white vitriol see Vellay toottam.——White-ant (पुत्तिका - puttiká, San.; ارضہ - arzah, Ar.; دیوک - díwak, Dec.; خورہ - khurah, Pers.; دیمک - dímak, Hind.; ಚೆದಲು - chedalu, Can.; ಒರಲೆ - orale, Too.; انائی انائی - anaianaí, Malay; చెదలు - chedalu, Tel.; ചെതൽ - chetal, Mal.; கறையான் - karaiyán, Tam.). Title from color. San. from (puttala, san. doll), from its form. Ar. from (arz, ar. earth). Hind. from old persian. Tel. from (shit'hila, san. decayed). Mal. from (chel, mal. sharp). Tam. from (karai, tam. to tarnish). Tam. also (shellu). Termes bellicosus, termitidæ, neuroptera, hemimetabola, insecta [poochy], of naturalists [jantoo]. The portuguese Formigas brancas. A species of termite and not an ant [choomtee]. Being blind it is exposed to attack of other animals, on which account it ordinarily remains underground; if it must come above ground, as to feed on a tree, &c., it first throws up sufficient earth to act as a screen. This is the meaning of the familiar white-ant earth. The large mounds of earth 7 or 8 feet high which are found all over the country are caused in this way. To destroy the cells of white-ants and dig out their queen is the best way of getting rid of them. Other remedies are:—Equal parts of lime [choonam], tar [keel], and soap [sauboon] boiled together and smeared over places where they appear; the earth-oils [munnteilam] of burmah; the wood-oils [q.v.] from the various species of dipterocarpi. Mixture of 3 of gambier [q.v.] and 12 of dammer oil; from ½ lb. to 4 lb. of hartaul [q.v.], the yellow sulphuret of arsenic mixed with the concrete of masonry; a mixture of pounded arsenic [paushaunam] and aloes [q.v.], scraped soap and dhoby's earth [q.v.] boiled in a large pot half full of water and when cold filled up with cold water; sulphate of copper or of arsenic mixed with lime next to timber. Small quantity of arsenic and flour moistened with molasses [jaggery], made into a dough and placed near their tumuli. There are Tamil proverbs:—அந்தி ஈசல் பூத்தால், அடைமழை அதிகரிக்கும்—"if white-ants take wing in the evening, rain will increase." —காலைச் செல் பூத்தால் அடுத்த மழை அடங்கும்—"should winged white-ants appear in morning, approaching rain will cease."—புற்றிலே ஈசல் புறப்பட்டாலும், மழை ஙிலேசுறையான் கூடிஞலும் மழை வரவே வரும்—"when winged white-ants issue out of a hole and white-ants "swarm, it will certainly rain [mansam, mazhay]."—ஈசல் இறகு எல்லாவற்றிலும் மிருது—"the wing of a white-ant "is the softest of all things."—பாம்புக்குத்தச்சன்கறையான்—"the white ant is the carpenter of the snake;" these ant-hills are always the habitations of snakes [sarpam].——White honey (श्वेतकाम्बोजी - shvétakámbóji, San.; سفید مدھ کا پیڑ - sufedmadhkáper, Hind.; سفید مدھ کا جھاڑ - sufedmadhkájhár, Dec.; తెల్ల పురుగుడు - tellapurugudu, Tel.; வெள்ளைப்பூலாஞ்சி - vellaippúláñji, Tam.). San. from (shvéta, san. white + kámbóji, san. abrus precatorius, linn.); from white round fruit. Tel. and Tam. mean white + poolah [q.v.]. Tam. also (varadbúlá), meaning dry ground poolah. Sweet juice taken from whitish fruit of Securinega leucopyrus, müller, euphorbiaceæ [vricsham, 118]. Cf. Black honey.

Tam. also (appiriyatharu), meaning not + liked + tree; (ánaikkárai), meaning elephant + canthium parviflorum, lam., from food of elephants. Title otherwise Aunacauray, Elephant webera, Ging, Goompany, Jingam. Botanically Odina wodier, roxb., anacardiaceæ [vricsham, 45]. Generic from tamul. Alias Haberlia grandis; Rhus odina. Large deciduous tree; leaves alternate about the ends of the branches, unequally pinnated; leaflets three to four pair opposite, almost sessile, oblong-obvate, acuminated, glabrous, entire, paler below; calyx shortly four-lobed, segments rounded; petals five, oblong, spreading; drupe uniform, very hard, one-celled; seeds solitary, of the same shape as the nut; racemes terminal, fascicled; flowers small, greenish yellowish, externally purplish; commonly cultivated; dark-red gum [gond] exudes from bark. The gum occurs in bazaars partly in tears of a yellowish tinge, and partly in colorless angular fragments, which are full of fissures like gum arabic; it has disagreeable taste and is not astringent, about one-half of it is completely soluble in water, the remaining portion forms a slimy mucilage, but is not gelatinous; the soluble portion, which is feebly acid, is precipitated by alcohol, and in a less degree by oxalate of ammonium, not at all by perchloride of iron or borax [vencauram]. The bark of the younger plants is ash-colored and smooth externally, and very fibrous and of a flesh color internally; that of the older trees is very rough, scaly, generally about ½ of an inch in thickness, brown externally, and reddish-brown internally; the taste of the inner bark is slightly astringent, due to tannic acid. Gum beaten up with cocoanut milk and applied medicinally to sprains and bruises; pulverised bark, boiled in or mixed with oil, applied to ulcers and wounds; leaves boiled in oil externally applied to bruises; bark forms gargle; bark and gum are in pharm. non-officinal, as demulcent and tonic respectively. Decoction; take of the inner bark, in coarse powder, five ounces; water, three pints; boil on a slow fire till the liquid is reduced to one point, cool and strain. Dose, from one and-a-half to three fluid ounces, three or four times in the 24 hours. Substituted; the bark for tinctura myrrhæ, liquor plumbi sub-acetatis dilutus, alum, gentian and calumba; the gum for gum-acacia. Tree is pollarded for fodder, especially for elephants [q.v.]; used as avenue [shaulay] tree, but is bare of leaves for several early months in the hot season; gum used in cloth printing; bark yields coarse cordage and a good bast fibre and also is used in tanning [chamrah]. Outer wood is white and worthless; there is a Tamul proverb:—ஒதி பெருத்துத் தூணாகுமோ—"though the wodier grow large, "will it become a pillar?"; heart-wood of good seedling trees, deep reddish mahogany, useful for many purposes, excellent for cabinet purposes. No other common species here.

Botanically Feronia elephantum, corr., rutaceæ [vricsham, 32]. Alias Cratæva balanghas, vullanga. Vullanga, from tamul, meaning wood-apple. Handsome erect growing tree, 50–60 feet, armed with spines; leaves pinnated, smelling of aniseed; leaflets five to seven, obovate, almost sessile; petioles winged, pointed; racemes lax, axillary or terminal; calyx five-toothed; petals five; style scarcely any; flowers small, pale pink with crimson anthers smelling of aniseed; much cultivated, common in dry forests. Fruit as occurring is some-like the bael [q.v.], round, of a pale green color, and about the size of a cricket ball; when the hard shell-like rind is cracked, the interior is found full of a brown, soft, mealy kind of substance, rather acrid, having a strong smell of rancid butter, and not palatable, containing flat woolly seeds; fruit is extremely acid before maturity; is sometimes used to adulterate bael [q.v.] fruit. The pulp of the fruit contains citric acid and mucilage. The leaves yield to distillation a small quantity of essential oil similar to that obtained from bael leaves. Vilaum gum, a true transparent gum [gond], exudes from wounds in bark; this occurs in small roundish, oblong or tapering tears, or in broken pieces, varying in size from a pea [calauyam] to a soap-nut [q.v.]; generally colorless and transparent, sometimes opaque with numerous minute cracks on the surface; odourless, bland and mucilaginous in taste; much whiter and more transparent than acacia arabica [babool]. The root bark is thick, white and starchy; it has the odour of the leaves and contains essential oil [attar]. Young leaves medicinally stomachic and carminative, especially for children; ripe fruit useful in affections of the throat; sherbet [q.v.] made from fruit has alexipharmic properties; pulp applied externally is a remedy for the bites of venomous insects, if not obtainable the powdered rind may be used; astringent pulp of unripe fruit used in dysentery and diarrhœa; gum used as an adjunct to other medicines and especially for the purpose of suspending heavy powders, substituted for british gum arabic; in pharm. non-officinal; oil from leaves is a good substitute for oil of anise [q.v.]. Syrup; take of the pulp of the ripe fruit, ten ounces; mix well in thirty ounces of water and strain through cloth; add twenty ounces of refined sugar to the strained liquid, and apply heat till the sugar is dissolved and the liquid assumes the consistence of a thick syrup. Infusion; take of the fresh leaves, three ounces; boiling water, one pint; infuse in a closed vessel for two hours and strain. Doses; of mucilage, from two to four fluid ounces; of syrup, from four fluid drachms to one fluid ounce; of the infusion, from two to four fluid ounces. Substituted; the gum for the gum arabic and tragacanth [kateerah] imported from europe; the syrup for effervescing draughts, diluted phosphoric and sulphuric acids; the leaves for dill [sowa] and anise [q.v.]. Pulp of fruit makes an edible jelly [morabba], like black-currant; this has a peculiar flavor, agreeable but more astringent; also eaten raw with sugar [q.v.]. Gum used by dyers [shauyam] and painters, particularly miniature and chintz-painters; employed in making ink [mashy] and varnish [rangh], and by bricklayers in preparing certain cements and plaster [cauray]; it forms a stronger mucilage than gum arabic; forms a part of the gum ghautty [q.v.] and east india gum arabic of commerce. Wood yellowish-white, hard; annual rings distinctly marked by a white line; heavy and durable; is used for various purposes. There is a small variety of this tree, the properties of which are nearly the same. There is a Tamul proverb:—அருகாகப்பழுத்தாலும் விளா மரத்தில் வெளவால் சேராது—"although the fruit of the "wood-apple tree close by ripens, bats will not approach it." There is another:—விட்டுதடா ஆசை விளாம்பழத்து ஓட்டோடே—"the pleasure of wood apple ceases with the "shell."——Dark wood-apple (नीलकपित्थ - nílakapitt'ha, San.). Same as Mango.——Dog wood-apple (ನಾಯಿಬೇಲದಮರ - náyibéladamara, Can.). From inferior but similar fruit. Malay also (málela); (waja). Tam. also (ehgu), meaning sharpness. Indian steel. Made especially in Salem. Steel is iron [auhan] combined with a small quantity of carbon [kary]. Brittle, resists the file, cuts glass, affords sparks when struck on flint, and retains the magnetic virtue for any length of time. It loses this hardness by being ignited, and cools very slowly. The σίδηρος ἰνδικὸς καὶ στόμωμα of the Periplus. Damascus sword blades were made from the wootz of S. india. The Arabian poets celebrate swords made of indian steel. Indian iron is mentioned in the Pandects as an article of commerce. Salmasius says that among the surviving Greek treatises was one περὶ βαφῆς ἰνδικοῦ σιδήρου. The art of converting iron into steel has been immemorially known to the more civilised nations of the Malay archipelago, and they have native names for it. Prepared here from small pieces*of malleable iron made from magnetic ore, which are packed in crucibles with pieces of Cassia auriculata [tungaid] wood, and covered with leaves and clay [calimunn].

WOTTAM (ஒட்டம் - ottam, Tam.). From (ottu, tam. to stick on). A conical pile of earth left by tank diggers [wodda] as a measure of the depth to which they have dug.——Wottay (ஒட்டை - ottai, Tam.). Otherwise Wottay chaun. A short span or span between the tips of the thumb and forefinger extended [pradesham]. Jaun [q.v.] is a long span, viz., between the tips of the thumb and little finger extended [vitasty].

WUCK (വക്ക - vakka, Mal.). From (valka, san. bark). Same as Sunn.——Wucknaur (வக்குநார் - vakkunár, Tam.). Fibre of Sunn.

WUNKA (వంక - vanka, Tel.). From (vankara, tel. crooked). Channel [vaug]; suffix in place names, as Booggawunka, meaning spring + channel.

WUNTOO (వంతు - vantu, Tel.). Literally a turn. A share, part or portion.——Wuntoodar (వంతుదారుడు - vantudárudu, Tel.). From (above + dár, hind. holder). The holder of a share. A petty superintendent, because he gets more than the one wuntoo or share which an ordinary labourer receives, and is therefore wuntoodar by pre-eminence.

WURD (ورد - vard, Ar.). Rose.——Wurd i abyaz (ورد ابيض - vardiabyaz, Hind.). From (above + abyaz, ar. white). Indian white rose [gool].——Wurd i ahmar (ورد احمر - vardiahmar, Hind.). From (above + ahmar, ar. red). Cabbage rose [gool].——Wurd i ahmar i boostauny (ورد احمر بستانى - vardiahmaribustání, Hind.). From (bustán, ar. garden). Damask rose [gool].——Wurd i jabalee (ورد جبلى - vardijabalí, Hind.). From (jabal ar. hill). French rose [gool].——Wurd i seeny (ورد صينى - vardisíní, Hind.). From (sín, ar. china). Indian rose [gool].

WURG (ವರ್ಗ - varga, Can.). From (vrij, san. to remove) [vargam]. Means division. A holding, an estate. Wurgdar is a landlord.

WURREE (وارى - wárí, Hind.). From (varaka, san. desirable). Same as Varagoo.

From (irai, tam. raise water). Irrigation [pauchal] by lift [yaitampota].

YAJ (यज् - yaj, San.). To sacrifice.——Yajanam (यजन - yajana, San.). Performing holy sacrifice.——Yajoos (यजुस् - yajus, San.; யசுரு - yasuru, Tam.). From (yaj, san. to sacrifice). The second of the four Vedams [q.v.].——Yanyam (यज्ञ - yaña, San.; யக்கியம் - yakkiyam, Tam.). Tam. also (eççam), by corruption. Prayers employed at periodic solemn rites, hence the periodic rites themselves [yaugam]. For daily rites of Bramins see Mahayanyam. The following ancient yanyams are mentioned in Shoocla yajoor vedam [q.v.]:—Darshapoornamausow, ceremonies performed at the new [amavausyay] and full moon [powrnimay] of every lunar [chaundramaunam] month [mausam]; Pitry medham, obsequies in commemoration of a deceased ancestor; Agnishtomam or praise of agny [q.v.], including jyotishtomam, drinking of the juice of somam [q.v.]; Vaujapeyam, drinking of an acetous mixture of meal and water; Rajasooyam or king making, the consecration of a king [rajah]; Sowtraumany in honor of sootrauman or indran [q.v.]; a substitute for soma sacrifice, spirituous liquors and milk [paul] used instead of somam [q.v.] juice; Ashwamedham or horse [ghorah] sacrifice; according to vedam [q.v.] in this sacrifice 609 animals of various prescribed kinds domestic and wild including bird [pacshy], fish [matsyam], reptiles [sarpy] are made fast, the tame ones to 21 posts and the wild ones in the intervals between the posts; after some prayers are finished these are set at liberty uninjured; later on a ceremony performed by cshatriyas [q.v.] ambitious of universal empire and consisting in the immolation of a horse; Poorshamedham or human sacrifice; according to vedam 185 men of various specified tribes, characters and professions are tied to 11 posts; after the recitation of certain hymns [muntram], they are all set at liberty uninjured; later on it consisted in the immolation of one man, traces of which lingered till recent times in the doorga poojay [q.v.] and meriah [q.v.] of the hill tribes; Sarwa medham or sacrifice of all, prayers and oblations for universal success. Five yanyams are enjoined by Menoo [q.v.] on every householder [grihastan] of the twice-born [dwijan] castes to be performed every day:—Brambayanyam or the devotional act of teaching or repeating the vedams [q.v.] or other sacred texts; Devayanyam or worshipping the superior gods by oblations to fire or through fire the other gods [deva]; Pitry yanyam or worshipping the manes of ancestors or obsequial offerings; Manooshya yanyam or devotion due to men or the honoring of guest by acts of hospitality; Bhoota yanyam or the devotion due to beings in general, which is performed by throwing up into the air, generally at the door of the house, a baly [q.v.] or ball of rice, the remains of the morning and evening meal with mantrams [q.v.] or prayer addressed to gods, demi-gods, men, animals and even to spirits of trees, waters, &c. Yanyam in the abstract is conceived to be a kind of machinery, in which every piece must tally with the other; or a sort of large chain in which no link is allowed to be wanting; or a staircase by which one may ascend to heaven; or as a personage endowed with all the characteristics of the human body; it exists from eternity and proceeded from the supreme being, prajaupaty [q.v.] or bramh [q.v.] neuter, along with the traividyay, i.e., the three-fold science; the creation of the world is even regarded as the fruit of a sacrifice performed by the supreme being; the yanyam exists as an invisible thing at all times; it is supposed to extend, when unrolled from the ahavaneeyam or sacrificial fire into which all oblations are thrown, to heaven, forming thus a bridge or ladder, by means of which the sacrifice can communicate with the world of gods and spirits, and even ascend when alone to their abodes.——Yanyeshwaran (எக்கியேசுவரன் - ekkiyésuvaran, Tam.). From (yaña, san. sacrifice + íshvara, san. lord); lord of sacrifice. Epithet of vishnoo. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar]. Familiarly Yanyan.——Yanyopaveetam (यज्ञोपवीत - yañópavíta, San.). Wrote White yajoor vedam [q.v.], Shatapata bramhanam [q.v.] and Brihad auranyacam. Also author of the most important law book [smrity] next to that of Menoo [q.v.], this emanating from the White yajoor vedam [q.v.] as the code of the Maunavas did from the Black yajoor vedam [q.v.]. Yaunyavalcyan's work is more concise than that of Menoo [q.v.], being comprised in three books instead of twelve. The first book, consisting of 376 couplets, is chiefly on social and caste duties or auchauram [q.v.]; the second, consisting of 307 verses which have been transferred almost word for word to the Agny poorauna [q.v.], is mainly on administrative judicature and civil and criminal law or vyavahauram [q.v.]; third, consisting of 335 verses, is principally on devotion, purification, expiation, penance or prauyaschittam [q.v.], &c. See vol. I (56).——Yejmaun (यजमान - yajamána, San.). Corruption of (yajamána, san. sacrificer). Properly means the householder at whose expense and on whose behalf a religious ceremony is performed [carnaven, inam]. Householder [grihastan], manager, master. YANAM (యానాము - yánámu, Tel.). Means sea beach.

French colony, Town, Port; Godavery dist., Cocanada division; pop. 4,971; lat. 16° 44′; long. 82° 15′; from Bendamoorlunka N.E. 26 miles; from Cocanada S. 15 miles; from Madras N.N.E. 278 miles; from Neelapully W. 1 mile. At the bifurcation of the Godavery and Coringa, about 9 miles above the embouchure of the former. Bounded by these rivers on the east and south and surrounded by British territory. Extends along the banks of the two rivers for two leagues and-a-half, and its breadth varies from 390 metres to 3 kilometres. The mouth of the Godavery is obstructed by sand banks which prevent the entrance of ships. The Coringa has a deep bed which at spring tides admits vessels of 200 tons. Founded shortly before 1750, in which year it was seized by order of Nizam nauzir jung. Its fortunes followed the vicissitudes of French history in Southern india. With other French possessions in India it was secured to the French by the treaty of 1814-15. Till 1857 the territory was farmed out to an agent called the farmer-general. In that year this system was superseded by the Government dealing directly with the ryots [q.v.]. The Chief, appointed by the President of the Republic, governs under the control of the Governor-General of the French possessions in India. He has under his orders a priest, a head of police and other administrative affairs, a collector of taxes who also acts as treasurer and receiver of unclaimed property, a medical man, and a registrar. The Chief fills the functions of president of the criminal court, of commerce, and of the magistracy and police. There is also a European civilian in charge of the registration of births, deaths, and marriages. In November 1839, a hurricane, accompanied by an inundation of the sea, destroyed all the official records. There are three schools :—a girls' school, superintended by four nuns of St. Joseph of Lyons, paid by the State; a school for high-caste girls, under the same superintendence; and a free school for boys. There is a jail and a dispensary. The soil is fertile. Abundance of rice [paddy] is cultivated. See vol. I (175), 3.——Yanaudy (యానాది - yánádi, Tel.). From (yánádamu, tel. seashore). An aboriginal tribe of northern coast districts, especially Nellore. They reside on the hills dividing Cuddapah from Nellore and North arcot; but also still inhabit the jungles along the seashore of the Nellore district. They speak a dialect of Teloogoo. An account received from an old man of that tribe is, that of old one named Raghavan brought with him sixty families from Pauknaud district and located himself with them at Shreeharicote, and clearing the country formed Raghavapooram; the people by degrees spread through a few adjoining districts. Yanaudies are small in stature with poor attenuated frames, and indicate evidently a very aboriginal survival. They live upon roots and what grain they can get in exchange for honey [shahad] and medicinal herbs; they are useful servants in the forest department, where their knowledge of the forests is turned to good account, and they are often found as village night-watchers. The shreeharicote estate lapsed to the british government in 1835; till then, the yanaudies of that island were in a state of complete barbarism, did not know the use of money, were rarely seen, and lived on fruits, roots, and other jungle produce; in order to civilise them, government employed them to gather jungle produce, and gave them in exchange rice [q.v.] and clothing. Numbers of the tribe about 85,000. See vol. I (36), 195; II, 75, 113, Tamulian drawers extract the juice from palmyras [q.v.] and cocoanuts [q.v.] and but rarely from the date [kharjooram], the Teloogoos from palmyras and dates but never from cocoanuts [jauty].

YEL (ఏలు - élu, Tel.). To rule.——Yelagherry (ஏலகிரி - élagiri, Tam. yelagiri*). From (above + giri, san. mountain); overruling or high. Hills; Salem dist., Tripatore tal.; acres 19,657; lat. 12° 31′ to 12° 38′ N.; long. 78° 38′ to 78° 45′ E.; from Salem N.N.E. 71 miles; from Tripatore N.N.E. 4 miles. On the N.E. border of the district separating it from the S.W. portion of South arcot. Somewhat triangular in shape, the base being south of a line from Vaniyambaudy through Vellacoottay to Alangauyam, and the apex of the triangle being towards Tripatore. The summit consists mainly of a ridge varying from 3,000 to 4,441 feet above the sea, and pierced on the south-east, a little north of the apex, by a remarkable cleft in the solid rock, which narrows up to a point near Attanauvore, where a tributary to the Paumbaur rises. The plateau looks as if it had been artificially flattened; and for a long distance towards the south flat terraces succeed each other on the very summit of the hill, which appear to have been originally cultivated. Brushwood is springing up over them. Following this plateau southwards, in an angle formed by the ridge which faces Tripatore, is a valley which is the richest part of the hill, but neglected. These hills contain six villages. On the Devamullay is a remarkable monolith [laut]. Under it are stone images of deities. Stone implements, chisels, axe-heads, hammers, and wedges have been found in the hills. The natives of the neighbourhood possess many of these, and they worship them, saying that they fell from the sky.——Yelair (ఏలేరు - éléru, Tel.). From (above + éru, tel. river). River; Godavery dist., Peddapore tal. and Cocanada division. Takes its rise in Doommacondah hill near Mattam bheemavaram in Goortaid mootah [q.v.]. During its course it is joined at Noonnamaunmidy in the Rumpa country by the Caunair coming from Kotah side and the Maudair near Timmapooram in the Jaddangy tracts. After a course of about 60 miles, it crosses great northern trunk road at Yerravaram, a little below which it begins to form into branches. One of the branches which supplies water to many villages in Pittapore division joins sea at Ramannapollem near Ooppauda in Pittapore division. Another branch after supplying many villages in Peddapore talook for irrigation, goes via Peddapore to Samulcottah, where it divides into three branches, the Bheemanuddy, the Narayadoo, and the Merakayair, also called the main stream. It is bridged at Yerravaram, 15 vents of 36 spans each. A bridge across the Maudair is now in course of construction.——Yeleshwaram (ఏలేశ్వరము - éléshvaramu, Tel.). A wealthy fisherman and merchant, the disciple of Tirvulloovan [q.v.]. There is a Tamul proverb:—ஏலேல சிங்கன்பொருள் ஏழு கடலிற் போனாலும் திரும்பும்—"the property of yelailasingan, "though it pass over seven seas [samoodram], will return."

YELAM (एला - élá, San.). From (il, san. to send down); removing nausea. Cardamom.——Yelattary (ഏലത്തരി - élattari, Mal.). Means cardamom + seed. Hence Elettaria, generic term.

YELIMITCHAY (எலுமிச்சை - elumiççai, Tam.). From (límun, ar. lime). Lime [q.v.].——Yelimitchay poolipp (ನಿಂಬೆಹುಳಿ - nimbehuli, Can.; నిమ్మపులుసు - nimmapulusu, Tel.; எலுமிச்சம் புளிப்பு - elumiççambulippu, Tam.). Can. from (nimbi, can. lime + huli, can. acid). Tel. from (nimma, tel. lemon + pulusu, tel. acid). Citric acid. Obtained from lime-juice; met with in crystals [palingoo, spaticam]; employed by calico [q.v.] printers. For acids generally see Poolipp and Tezaub.

YELL (எள் - el, Tam.). The root means slender, slight. Sesamum [gingelly] seed, one of the nava dhaunyams or nine kinds of grain [dhaunyam]. Linear measure. 8 yells = 1 nell or paddy seed [alavay, 1a]. Approximate actual value, 1 yell = $\frac{1}{64}$th of a native inch or $\frac{1}{72}$th inch. Same as Mal. yenmany.——Yenmany (എണ്മണി - enmani, Mal.). From (above + mani, mal. grain). Sesamum seed. Linear measure. 8 yenmanies = 1 tora [alavay, 1d]. Approximate actual value, 1 yenmany = $\frac{1}{72}$ of an inch. Same as Tam. yell. See vol. I, 609.

YELLAY (ఎల్ల - ella, Tel.; எல்லை - ellai, Tam.). A boundary [inam]. Yellay cull is a boundary stone.——Yelattore (എളത്തൂർ - elattúr, Mal.). From (above + úr, mal. village).—"a" Village, Port; Malabar dist., Calicut tal.; pop. 3,817; lat. 11° 21′; long. 75° 46′; from Bombay S.S.E. 550 miles; from Calicut N.N.W. 7 miles; from Caupautt S.S.E. 3 miles; from Poothiyangaudy N.N.W. 3 miles. Small port at mouth of river of same name. Two ruined temples [coil, pagoda]. Connected with the Cullye river and backwaters [cauyal] and with the Beypore river beyond by the Conolly canal.—"b" River; Malabar dist., Calicut tal. Rises in the mountains west of the Tamracherry pass, near Poonoordeshom in lat. 11° 30′ N., and long. 75° 54′ E., and, after a devious course of about 32 miles through Malabar district, flows into the extensive backwater [cauyal] which communicates with the sea near Yelattore town, in lat. 11° 21′ N., long. 75° 46′ E. A shallow stream unsuited for boat traffic.——Yellamanchily (ఎల్లమంచిలి - yellamanchili, Tel.). From (above + manchi, tel. good). Sanscrit name (ilámañjari), meaning earth + garland. Town, Head-quarters of Tahsildar; Vizagapatam dist., Sarwasiddhy tal.; pop. 6,296; acres 2,796; lat. 17° 33′; long. 82° 54′; from Coraputt S.S.E. 86 miles; from Madras N.E. 340 miles; from Narsapatam E.S.E. 19 miles; from Parvatipore S.S.W. 91 miles; from Vizagapatam W.S.W. 30 miles; from Vizianagram S.W. 52 miles; from the sea N. 9 miles. Former seat of shepherd kings, who built pagodas [q.v.] of which ruins are visible, with a building called Nookpaupa maida. One pagoda on a rock has a figure of Veerabhadra [q.v.] sawmy a form of Shiva [q.v.]. Cave temple to Gopaulsawmy, with inscription 400 years old. On top of a hill is a ruined temple and an inscription [shausanam]. A jar containing copper coins [naunyam] of the old shepherd [yaudava] dynasty [raj] was found in the hill fort in 1863; on one side they bore the effigy of a bullock.——Yellamma (ఎల్లమ్మ - ellamma, Tel.). From (above + amma, tel. goddess). One of the best known of the village goddesses [graumadevatay]. If one is bitten by a poisonous serpent he calls on Yellamma; fishermen the same when in danger. She is represented in the arts in a sitting posture, with a red skin, a fiery face, and four arms and hands. On her head she wears a crown, round which there are serpents; on her forehead she has three streaks [tripoondram] of sacred ashes [tirneer, vibhooty], and on the whole she is adorned like the other goddesses. In her four hands she holds respectively a drum, called Damaroo [q.v.]; a trident, called Shoolam [q.v.]; a bundle of ropes, called Pausham [q.v.]; and the skull of Bramha's fifth head, which was cut off by Shiva [q.v.]. Of this skull [capaulam] it is said that it attracts all the bloodshed on earth, and nevertheless is never full; and inasmuch as the Graumadevatays [q.v.] receive animal sacrifices, they usually hold it in their hands. An image [shilay, vigraham] of the above description, cast of metal [loham], is found in her pagodas [q.v.]; but her principal image, to which offerings are made, is of stone, representing only her head, in the earth. The temples of Yellamma are numerous, but usually very small. The images found in them, besides that of herself, are the following:—Bhadra cauly; Jamadagny maharishy, her husband, who ordered her to be killed; Mullagashetty a hero who assists her in battle; Mautangy, the pariah woman on whose head yellamma's head was put; Parshooraman, her son, incarnation of vishnoo; Potrauz or bull-king, her herald; Ooyirtoondilcaurs, her servants who, having themselves died a violent death, catch those who die a violent death, and bring them into Yellamma's court; Vigneshwaran with his elephant's head. Besides these, there are sometimes also images of serpents [naugam] in her pagodas, to which the people make salutation. See vol. I (77) [matam].

——Yellan (எல்லன் - ellan, Tam.). Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar].——Yellannan (எல்லண்ணன் - ellannan, Tam.). From (above + annan, tam. elder brother, titular affix). Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar].——Yellappan (எல்லப்பன் - ellappan, Tam.). From (above + appan, tam. father, titular affix). Pariah proper name [peyar].——Yellay mullay (എല്ലമല - ellamala, Mal.). From (above + malai, tam. mountain).—"a" Hill; Neilgherry dist., Wynaud S.E. division; lat. 11° 26′; long. 76° 29′; from Goodalore S.W. 5 miles; from Ootacamund W.N.W. 17 miles. The north side of the Neilgherries towards Mysore rises about 3,500 feet above that tableland, with which it is connected by a neck about 15 miles in width. The isolation of the Neilgherries would be complete, but for this singular, sharp, and precipitous ridge of granite [caroom cull] peaks, which projects from the base of Yellay mullay on the western crest of the range and taking a west by north course towards the coast unites itself with the Western ghauts [q.v.].—"b" Coffee [q.v.] estate, Ouchterlony valley; Neilgherries. Acres 199.——Yellayyan (எல்லய்யன் - ellayyan, Tam.). From (above + ayyan, tam. master, titular affix). Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar].

YELLOW (மஞ்சள் - mañjal, Tam.). Prefix.——Yellow buttons (جعفر گندی - jafarígundí, Hind.). Same as Jaffer goondy.——Yellow-flower tree (மஞ்சள்பூச்செடி - manjalbúççedi, Tam.). Same as Coral jasmine.——Yellow root (عروق الصفر - arúkussifr, Ar.). Same as Country saffron.——Yellow wood (دهورا - dhaurá, Hind.). Same as Satin wood.

YELY (எலி - eli, Tam.). Means dark one. Rat [ely].——Yelicair (ఎలికేరు - elikéru, Tel.). From (elika, tel. rat + éru, tel. river). River; Nellore dist., Cundoocore tal. Rises in Ammavauripollem shrotriem [q.v.] tank [q.v.]. Chief feeder to the Chaugolloo tank. Crossed by a bridge near Veereypulley. Disembogues two miles north of Ramapatam and three miles south of Teeya vaugoo channel [q.v.].

YEM (എൻ - en, Mal.; எம் - em, Tam.). My, our.——Yembramanaur (எம்பெருமானார் - emberumánár, Tam.). From (above + perumán, tam. king + ár, tam. plural suffix). Our lord. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name among Veishnavites [peyar]. Another name of Ramaunoojan [q.v.].——Yembraun (എമ്പ്രാൻ - embrán, pers. sing.; എമ്പ്രാന്മാർ - embránmár, pers. pl., Mal.). From (above + purán, mal. lord). Otherwise Yembrauntry. A class of sacrificing Bramins [q.v.] in South canara and in Travancore. Chiefly Tooloo [q.v.]. Officiate at Shoodra [q.v.] ceremonies. Largely employed in Travancore and Cochin as poojarries [q.v.] of temples [coil]. See vol. II, 100 [jauty].——Yembrauntry (എമ്പ്രാന്തിരി - embrántiri, Mal.). From (above + purán, mal. lord + tiri, mal. goddess of fortune). Title given to the Tooloo bramins in Malabar corresponding to Potty in Travancore. Hindoo third name [peyar].——Yencarttah (എൻകർത്താ - enkarttá, Mal.). My lord. Title.

YEN (எண் - en, Tam.). Number. Science of numbers or calculation. Arithmetic; mathematical astronomy [ganitam]. Seven [saptam] is regarded as the most lucky number, after which five [puncham] and other odd numbers have precedence. There is a Tamul proverb:—எண்ணுமெழுத்துங் கண்ணெனத்தகும்—"numbers and letters may be regarded as eyes." And another:—எண்ணெழுத்திகழேல்—"think not lightly "of numbers and letters [yezhoot]."——Yennam (എണ്ണം - ennam, Mal.). Counting. Charge for reaping, usually 10 per cent.; or if paid in kind, one sheaf out of ten.——Yensoovady (எண்சுவடி - ensuvadi, Tam.). From (above + shuvadu, tam. mark). The multiplication table.

YENAMACULL (ഏനാമാക്കൽ - énámákkal, Mal.). From (ínam, corruption of hína, san. low + váya, mal. mouth + kal, mal. case ending showing place), meaning low place at the mouth of the lake.—"a" Village; Malabar dist., Ponnany tal.; Syrian christians. In Venkitanga amshom [q.v.], about 8 miles south-east of Coottingal and four from Chittatkara. Important ancient Syro-roman catholic church [syrian]. Chief articles of trade are cocoanut [q.v.] and cocoanut oil.—"b" Fresh-water lake, Malabar dist., Ponnany tal., and large anicut 8 miles from the mouth of Chetwye river. The anicut [q.v.] keeps out the salt water and renders a wide expanse of land cultivable. The area protected mostly belongs to native Cochin. For description of lake see Trichore.

YENDA (ఎండ - enda, Tel.). Hot.——Yendacaur (ఎండకారు - endakáru, Tel.). Hot season [caur, coday, ritoo, vainil].

YENNAY (तैल - taila, San.; دهن - duhn, Ar.; روغن - raughan, Pers.; تيل - tel, Hind.; ಎಣ್ಣೆ - enne, Can.; నూనె - núne, Tel.; എണ്ണ - enna, Mal.; எண்ணெய் - enney, Tam.). San. from (tila, san. sesamum seed). Hind. from sanscrit. Tel. from (núvu, tel. sesamum seed + neyi, tel. ghee). Tam. from (el, tam. plant, sesamum indicum, linn. + ney, tam. ghee). The sanscrit and dravidian etymologies show the prevalence of gingelly [q.v.] oil. The terms however include all oils. In classification oils are first divided into three large classes according to the kingdom of nature whence they are derived; that is to say Animal [jantoo], Vegetable [vricsham], and Mineral [dhautoo].——(1) The following is a key-list of the principal animal oils of s. india:—Aumay yennay, turtle [cadalaumay] oil. Aunt cozhooppoo, mutton [aud] suet. Boochy pitta nooney, boochy bird [kilkilah] oil. Carady ney, bear's [ricsham] grease. Cantt paumb yennay, wild serpent [paumb] oil. Ghee [q.v.]. Jella chaipa nooney, jella [q.v.] fish oil. Maun cozhooppoo, deer's [mrigam] lard. Mayil yennay, peacock's [mayil] fat. Meen yennay, fish-oil [malabar oil]. Mezhoogoo yennay, wax [mom] oil. Pashoo mautt caul yennay, neat's [pashoo] foot oil. Pooly ney, tiger's [pooly] fat. Pundry ney, hog's [soor] lard. Soorah ney, shark-liver [soorah] oil. Tavalay cozhooppoo, frog's [bhaicam] fat. Vaulooga chaipa nooney, vaulooga [vaulay] fish oil.——(2) The vegetable oils are obtained from seeds such as castor [aumanac], croton [jamalgota], gingelly [q.v.], ground-nut [q.v.], linseed [alsee], &c.; from fruit, as the olive [zeitoon]; from rind and leaves, as the orange [q.v.], lemon [q.v.], &c.; from flowers, as the neroli [bitter orange]; and from roots and wood, as sandal [q.v.], &c. The modes of extraction of vegetable oils vary with different circumstances; see below. Vegetable oils are generally sub-divided into three sub-classes:—fixed oils, fat or drying; volatile oils or essences or attars [q.v.]; wood oils [q.v.] or oleo-balsams.—"a" The first sub-class are fixed oils, or oils which communicate a permanently greasy stain to paper or cloth. These are best obtained by submitting the seeds or fruit to the strong pressure of a screw-press [gaunam]; this is called cold-drawing. The bruised mass may however instead, be submitted to heat, which facilitates the exudation; this is called hot-drawing. In the former case the oil must be afterwards clarified as it contains albuminous and mucilaginous matter; these are eliminated by gently boiling the expressed oil with a small quantity of water, taking care not to raise the heat beyond the boiling point of water, nor to continue the boiling after the water has been dissipated; this process coagulates the albumen and mucilage, which become precipitated in lumps carrying with them all other impurities; if the process of pressing and clarifying have been conducted with care, the oil is clear and colorless. The hot process which begins with boiling [aumanac, e] gives a greater yield, but the oil then soon becomes rancid and is never colorless. The ordinary vegetable fixed oils, more especially gingelly and cocoanut, are largely used by the natives in their daily diet; although they are for the most part uniform in their chemical composition, there is a considerable difference in their nutritive value, probably owing to physical conditions of form or aggregation, whereby some are more easily taken up into the system than others. "i" The first group of the above sub-class or the Fat oils form the ordinary bulk of the oils used. They are represented by such oils as Belgaum walnut [lumbang-nut], Bennut [moringa], Cashew-nut [cashew], Castor [aumanac], Catappa [catapang], Chironjee [q.v.], Cocoanut [q.v.], Colocynth [bitter water melon], Coorook [bramhadand], Cotton [q.v.], Country cress [haleem], Croton [jamalgota], Cucumber [oorvauroo], Gamboge butter [mate mangosteen], Gingelly [q.v.], Gogoo [hemp bendy], Ground-nut [q.v.], Hemp seed [kinnab], Iloopay [mohwah], Karanj [q.v.], Margosa [neem], Marking-nut [q.v.], Malkangany [q.v.], Melon [oorvauroo], Modooga [palaus], Moorgana [mate mangosteen], Mustard [rayaun], Nauga champak [q.v.], Neeradimoott [marotty], Nux vomica [poison nut], Paugal [carolah], Physic-nut [wild aumanac], Piney [q.v.] tallow, Pinnay cottay [common poon], Poovennay [poovana], Pumpkin [carcauroo], Ramtil [q.v.], Rape [sarsoon], Safflower [bastard saffron], Soapnut [q.v.], Vernonia [wild jeerah], Viscid cleome [dog vailay], &c. Fat oil is contained in that part of the seed of plants which gives birth to the cotyledons; it is thus termed because it cannot be distilled without decomposition, and it is not until a temperature of between 500° and 600° is reached that it begins to boil and undergo decomposition, giving off acroleine and other compounds. "ii" The second group of the above sub-class or the Drying oils is represented by such oils as Hemp [kinnab] seed, Linseed [alsee], Poppy [opium poppy], &c. These dry quickly on exposure to the atmosphere and retain their transparency on solidifying. They form the basis of many paints and varnishes [rangh]; also of printing ink. Before they can be used in the arts they must be thoroughly deprived of all mucilaginous matters and brought into a state which will increase their affinity to combine with oxygen when exposed to the air in a thin stratum; this is effected by further boiling and adding from time to time the basic acetate of lead; that chemical re-agent combines with the mucilage and forms with it a new compound, which is thrown down; the boiling is continued briskly, and the heat allowed to reach to such a degree as will scorch a feather when dipped into the boiling oil; when the heat has arrived to this degree, it is allowed gradually to subside, and after it has cooled down the oil is drawn off clear, and allowed to repose in large cisterns until no further deposit takes place; it then becoms clear and transparent, and is fit for use. The older the oil the better its drying qualities.—"b" The second sub-class are Volatile oils, or oils which do not communicate a permanent stain to paper or cloth, the greasy stain being dissipated by heat; they are otherwise known as ethereal or essential oils [attar]; they can be distilled without decomposition and possess in a concentrated form the odour characteristic of the plants or vegetable substances whence obtained; they are for the most part insoluble or only with difficulty and sparingly soluble in water, but dissolve freely in ether, alcohol, fatty oils, and mineral oils. They are generally distilled, though a few are pressed, such as lemon [q.v.], orange [q.v.], and citron [q.v.]. The distillation is carried on in large copper stills; the fruit, seeds, leaves, flowers, or the whole plant, is put into the body of the still, and as much water is poured on as to cover the article to be operated upon; on the application of heat, the water impregnated with oil distils over and is collected in a receiver; the oil either floats on the top, or if heavier than water, as clove [lavangam] oil, it sinks to the bottom; in distilling oils heavier and less volatile than water, the heat must be above the boiling point of water, and to obtain this increased temperature common salt [ooppooo] is added to the water to increase its capacity for taking in heat, otherwise the oil will not distil over. These oils are principally used in perfumery [attar], and medicine; some are used in the arts as solvents of resins [raul]. Of vegetable substances producing volatile oils there is an immense variety, but with the exception of the oils of cassia [q.v.], cinnamon [q.v.], and roossa [grass oil], and the rose [gool] attar [q.v.], few are of any commercial importance, nor are they prepared in any quantity for consumption in this country. Scented oils erroneously termed volatile obtained by the repeated distillation of fragrant herbs, &c., into a receiver containing a portion of any fixed oil, to which the aroma is imparted, are prepared to some extent but chiefly for native use; sandal-wood oil [sandal] and the large variety of common attars [q.v.], which form the principal part of native perfumery are included in this class.—"c" The third sub-class are wood oils or oleo-balsams [teilam], or oils having the qualities of a fixed oil and a liquid resin [raul]. These form the connecting link between the oils and resins of the natural kingdom. They are a sort of empyreumatic liquid resin, consisting of a volatile oil holding in solution a resin, and are generally classed under the head of Balsams [q.v.]. They are obtained from various trees of the order dipterocarpeæ, some of which also yield the dammers [q.v.] of commerce. The mode of extraction is similar to that adopted for obtaining the solid resin and is nearly the same as that for tar [keel] in europe; about the end of the dry season, that is to say in march or april, several deep incisions are made with an axe into the trunk of the tree, and a large-sized piece scooped out; into this hole fire is placed and kept burning until the oil begins to run, when it is received into a bamboo [q.v.] and allowed to run slowly drop by drop; the oil, when freshly obtained from the tree and allowed to rest, separates into two layers, the upper consisting of a clear chestnut-colored liquid balsam [q.v.], and the lower being a flocculent deposit of the more solid resin [raul] of a light ash color. These wood-oils are much used as natural varnishes [rangh] for indoor work, especially in conjunction with dammer [q.v.], but are very brittle and require constant renewal; also employed by moochees [q.v.] in the preparation of pigments [rangh]. Many substances called wood oil by veidyans [q.v.] are little else than varieties of tar [keel] obtained by the destructive distillation of chips of various woods. Wood oil of a superior kind is brought from burmah.——(3) The following are two key-lists in the briefest possible terms of the principal vegetable oils of all kinds in s. india; further information must be traced in the glossary paragraphs through the small type cross-references at end of this volume; see also vricsham, 7, for the method of expressing the products, &c., of the plants in the dravidian languages.—"a" Abrus precatorius, indian liquorice, seed, fixed fat; Acorus calamus, sweet flag, root, volatile; Adenanthera pavonina, false red sanders, seed, fixed fat; Albizzia lebbek, common sirissa, seed, fixed fat; Aleurites triloba, lumbang nut, kernel, fixed fat; Allium cepa, onion, seed, volatile; Allium sativum, garlic, bulb, volatile; Amomum subulatum, wild cardamom, seed, volatile; Amoora rohituka, rohitacam, seed, fixed fat; Anacardium occidentale, cashew, nut, fixed fat; Anamirta cocculus, indian berry, berry, fixed fat; Andropogon muricatus, cuscus, root, volatile; Andropogon nardus, citronella, fresh plant, volatile; Andropogon schœnanthus, lemon grass, grass, volatile; Anisochilus carnosus, country lavender, whole plant, volatile; Anisomeles malabarica, malabar catmint, whole plant, volatile; Aquilaria agallocha, eagle wood, chips of wood, volatile; Arachis hypogæa, ground-nut, seed, fixed fat; Argemone mexicana, mexican poppy, seed, fixed fat; Argyreia speciosa, broad-leaved bind-weed, whole plant, volatile; Artemisia vulgaris, indian absinth, whole plant, volatile; Atalantia monophylla, monkey lime, berry, volatile; Balanites roxburghii, fire-work plant, seed, fixed fat; Baliospermum montanum, wild croton, seed, fixed fat; Bassia latifolia, wild mohwah, seed, fixed fat; Bassia longifolia, common mohwah, seed, fixed fat; Bauhinia acuminata, white mountain ebony, seed, fixed fat; YERCUM (अर्क - arka, San.; रुई - rui, Mahr.; रुवि - rúvi, Conc.; عشر - ushshar, Ar.; خرك - kharak, Pers.; مدار - madár, Hind.; آگ کا جہار - ágkájhár, Dec.; ಎಕ್ಕೆ - ekke, Can.; ಎಕ್ಕಮಾಲೆ - ekkamále, Too.; జిల్లేడు - jillédu, Tel.; എരിക്ക - erikku, Mal.; වරා - vará, Singh.; எருக்கு - erukku, Tam.). Title from sanscrit through tamul. San. means sun from cuneiform shape of leaf. Mahr. from sanscrit. Ar. from (ush, san. to burn); from the dried twigs of plant being tied to the tail of wild bulls, and set fire to by ancient arabs in times of drought to induce rain. Hind. from (mandára, san. the purple flowered variety). Dec. and dravidian from sanscrit. San. also (pratápasa), meaning very hot, the white var.; (shvétárka), meaning white + calotropis gigantea, r. br; (vasuka), meaning abiding; (ásp'hóta), meaning opening from all sides [arabian jasmine, wild jasmine]; (ganarúpa), meaning multitude + shape; (vikírna), meaning scattered; (mandára), meaning minor disease + expeller [coral tree]; (arkaparna), meaning sun + leaved; (áditya), meaning sun; (alarka), meaning adorning arcan, the white var. [prickly shoonday]; (rudra), meaning shiva; (súryapatra), meaning sun leaf. Ar. also (ushmor). Pers. also (darakhtizahrnák), meaning poisonous tree. Hind. also (akond); (akan); (safedák), meaning white calotropis; (ák) [dyeing mulberry]. Dec. also (ákrá), by corr. from sanscrit. Tel. also (mandáramu) [white mountain ebony]; (nallajillédu), meaning black + plant so called; (tellajillédu), meaning white + plant so called; (rátsajillédu), meaning king + the plant. Mal. also (vellerikku), meaning white + calotropis gigantea, r. br. Singh. also (múduvará), meaning ocean + the plant. Tam. also (vellerukku), meaning white + the plant. Title otherwise Bow-string hemp [marool] Curled-flowered swallow-wort, French cotton, French jasmine, Gigantic nettlewort, Gigantic swallow-wort, Lightning leaf, Madaur, Madaur silk cotton, Mudar, Sun plant, Vegetable mercury, Yerook. Botanically Calotropis gigantea, r. br., asclepiadeæ [vricsham, 88]. Alias Asclepias gigantea. Shrub, 6-10 feet; leaves stemclasping, decussate, oblong-ovate, wedge-shaped, bearded on the upper side at the base, smooth on the upper surface, clothed with woolly down on the under side; segments of corolla reflexed, with revolute edges; stamineous corona five-leaved, shorter than the gynostegium; leaflets keel-formed, circinately recurved at the base, incurved and subtri-dentate at the apex; umbels sometimes compound, surrounded by involucral scales; follicles ventricose, smooth; seeds comose; flowers rose-color and purple mixed; flowering all year. Stem and branches covered with a fibrous, corky, soft bark; stem abounds in acrid milky juice; leaves opposite, 6 inches in length; fruit full of fine silky hairs; common in south, especially in sandy and barren soils. The root barks occur in bazaar in short quilled pieces $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{3}$ of an inch thick; the outer surface is yellowish-grey, soft and corky, fissured longitudinally, and can be easily separated from the middle cortical layer, which is white, friable, and traversed by narrow brown liber rays; the taste is mucilaginous, bitter and acrid, and the odour peculiar. From an alcoholic solution of powdered root, the spirit being then distilled off, is obtained a resinous decoction mudarine, which possesses the property of coagulating by heat and becoming again fluid by exposure to cold; mudarine is very bitter, soluble in alcohol and cold water, but insoluble in sulphuric ether or olive-oil [zeitoon]; dried bark of root is of greyish yellow color; an acrid milky juice flows from every part of the shrub when wounded. The roots are collected in april and may, and after washing are dried in open air without exposure to the sun, until the inherent milky juice becomes so far dried that it ceases to flow on incision made; the root bark is then carefully removed, dried, reduced to powder, and preserved in well-corked bottles. To procure the fibre, the straightest branches are cut and exposed to the weather for at least twenty-four hours; on the second and third day they are slightly beaten, the skin is then peeled and the stringy substance between the bark and the wood taken out; they are then dried in the sun; this slow process is necessarily expensive, but if the bark is steeped in water, it becomes discolored, and cutting will destroy it; the fibre is strong and possesses many of the properties of europe flax [alsee]; it can be spun into the finest thread for sewing or weaving cloth. The rind below outer crust of root pulverised and made into an ointment is medicinally efficacious in the treatment of old ulcers; powdered root-bark is internally alterative-tonic, diaphoretic and emetic, substituted for british ipecacuanha; the inspissated juice is used externally in almost all cutaneous affections, especially ring-worm and leprosy, this is more powerful than the root-bark; the juice mixed with common salt [ooppoo] is given in toothache; the juice of the young buds is given in ear-ache; the leaves warmed and moistened with oil are applied as a dry fomentation in abdominal pains, and form a good rubefacient; flowers are digestive, stomachic, tonic, useful in asthma, catarrh, and loss of appetite; dry leaves burnt for fumigating obstinate sores; these remedies have been used in hindoo medicine from time immemorial; gives to pharm. root-bark dried, calotropis cortex, alterative tonic, diaphoretic, and in large doses emetic, officinal. The plant is a poison for goats and sheep [aud]. Hairs from seeds used for stuffing pillows; milky sap on evaporation forms a caoutchouc [pauchonty]; the liquor called bar is prepared from this plant by the tribes of the western ghauts [q.v.]; root is used in manufacture of gunpowder charcoal [adoopp kary]; the silky floss which surrounds the seeds has been woven into shawls [q.v.] and handkerchiefs [roomaul] and even paper, besides a soft kind of thread [nool]; the fine strong fibre is a good substitute for flax [alsee], fit for cambric cloth, and twine, used for making fishing-lines by native fishermen; the milky juice imparts yellow color to the skin, and used by chucklers [q.v.] with lac [q.v.] in dyeing [shauyam] leather [chamrah] red; the powdered flowers adulterate safflower [bastard saffron]; fresh root is used as a toothbrush, considered by pataunns [q.v.] to cure toothache; ashes used as mordant [cauram]. A variety alba, with white, cream-colored flowers; another species procera [black yercum], in northern districts. There is a Tamul proverb:—வெள்ளெருக்கும் வெள்ளாட்டுப்பாலுக்கும் கள்ளக்கருமேகம் காணமற்போம்—"the treacherous disease which blackens "the skin will be thoroughly cured by white yercum and goats' "milk [paul.]".——Ant-hill yercum (పుట్టజిల్లేడు - puttajillédu, Tel.). Means ant-hill + yercum. Same as Ground paulay.——Black yercum (నల్లజిల్లేడు - nallajillédu, Tel.). Calotropis procera with pale-purplish flowers. See above.

YERKALA (ఎరుకల - erukala, Tel.). From (eruka, tel. fortune-telling). Call themselves Goory [q.v.], meaning fortune-tellers from marks on body. Called by mahomedans Corchewar. A branch of the Corava [q.v.] people. Nomad caste found wandering over the plains of southern india; numerous in the shreeharicote jungles. They are usually of a dark-brown color; the men are spare and light made, but hardy, with low forehead, small eyes, short nose; they wear only a strip of cloth [lungooty], and they tie their hair in a knot [conday] above their brow. The women are famous as fortune-tellers; they bring game and jungle produce for sale to madras; they live in grass, mat [boriyah], or reed huts, and make and sell mats and baskets [tokrah]; they are found on the outskirts of most towns; they also make wooden combs, work as laborers, and a few who have settled engage in cultivation; they rear pigs [soor], poultry, donkeys [gadhah], and dogs [nye], and eat the flesh of most animals; they admit polygamy, but do not re-marry their widows; numbers about 130,000 [jauty]. See vol. I (36), 195; II, 75, 113.

YERNAUD (ഏറനാട് - éranátu, Mal. ernad *). From (éru, mal. bullock + nátu, mal. country) [yer]. Sanscrit name (gópálapura), meaning cowherd + town; also (ábhíra), meaning cowherd place. The hebrew Ophir is probably a corruption of the latter. Talook, Malabar district. Tahsildar's pay Rs. 200. Area 811 square miles. S. centre coast of district. Bounded north by Calicut and Wynaud, east by Neilgherry district, south by Valavanaud and Ponnany, west by the sea. Comprises the two old talooks of Yernaud and Chernaud, amalgamated in 1860. 140 square miles under cultivation, remainder waste lands and hilly tracts. The eastern portion comprehends the Nelambore valley formed by the ghauts and the Coondah mountains. The most remarkable hills are the Vauvool range, Chekkmala or Checoonn hill, Pundalore hill whose ridge separates the Yernaud from Valavanaud talook, Oorotemala hill, which formed the boundary of the old Chernaud talook. Soil of the western portion and on the heights is red laterite [q.v.], intermixed with gravel; in valleys of cultivation, a rich brown free from gravel [kankar]; so also in cultivated tracts in interior. Dense cocoanut [q.v.] belt usually not more than 4 miles wide extending along coast runs up for 12 or 15 miles into very nearly the heart of the talook about Malapooram. Pine-apple [ananas] nowhere flourishes better. Productions generally are rice [q.v.], several species of dry grain [q.v.] and pulses [dholl]; pepper [q.v.] is produced but not in abundance. Ginger [q.v.] is largely cultivated, areca [q.v.] palm is cultivated extensively about central parts, and grows luxuriantly on banks of all rivers, scarce to the east of Nelambore. Timber, bamboos [q.v.], honey [shahad], and bees' wax [mom] are obtained from forests. Iron [auhan] ore is found in different parts, chiefly in Chembracherry and Paundicaud amshoms [q.v.], but very little actually worked. Gold [pon] ore is found in beds of rivers and streams running down from ghauts [q.v.] into Nelambore valley. One principal branch of Beypore river is called Ponpoya or gold river. The manufactures are of little moment and consist of some cloth of an inferior quality. The cloths formerly famous as Shaliyat derived their name from Chaulyam. Oils from cocoanut and castor [aumanac], coir [q.v.] on the sea coast, jaggery [q.v.] and arrack [q.v.] from toddy [q.v.] are manufactured almost everywhere. Rivers are the Beypore and Cadaloondy. Places of archæological interest:—Aliuyilam, Cadaloondy, Carippore, Cauracoonn, Cauraud, Charye, Cheroocauv, Codevanyore, Cunnamungalam, Indyanore, Irimbooly, Irvetty, Munjery, Munnore, Nelambore, Niroomgythacottah, Nullore, Ooragam mailmoory, Palanjannore, Pommala, Pooliyacode, Tricalangode, Tricolam, Vandoor, Vencara, Vullicoonn. YEROO (ఎరువు - eruvu, Tel.; எரு - eru, Tam.). Manure. This divides into vegetable, animal and mineral.—"a" Vegetable manure comprises substances such as boughs and leaves of bushes and trees, indigo [q.v.] refuse, wood ashes, weeds, &c. These are simply thrown upon the land and dug or ploughed into the land in a fresh state. The plants containing milky sap [paulay] are preferred. Oil-cakes [ponnauk] especially of karanj [q.v.] are also used. Green leaves are used in case of paddy [q.v.] fields. The stubble of previous crop ploughed into the land serves to enrich it as it decays. The following is a list of the principal plants used as manure:—Adhatoda vasica [adhatoday]; Calotropis gigantea [yercum]; Cassia auriculata [tungaid]; Cedrella toona [toon]; Crotalaria juncea [sunn]; Datura fastuosa [purple datura]; Datura fastuosa, var. alba [white datura]; Dodonia viscosa [golla's plate]; Dolichos lablab [country bean]; Euphorbia tirucalli [round milk-hedge]; Holarrhena antidysenterica [tellicherry bark]; Indigofera tinctoria [common indigo]; Jatropha curcas [wild aumanac]; Mangifera indica [mango]; Melia azadirachta [neem]; Mirabilis jalapa [false jalap]; Ocimum sanctum [common toolsy]; Pongamia glabra [karanj]; Spondias mangifera [wild mango]; Tephrosia purpurea [zanzibar indigo].—"b" Animal manure consists mainly in the excreta of cattle [maud]. Sheep [aud] are folded on the lands to be cultivated. Red soils are manured by cattle-folding. Cow dung [shauny] is however not extensively used as manure as it is used for fuel [bratty]. In garden cultivation sheep's blood, garbage and stale fish are applied to betel [q.v.] and grape [angoor] vines.—"c" Mineral manures, such as lime [choonam], gypsum, nitrates, common salt [ooppoo], saline earth [sowdoo], &c., are only rarely used by the native cultivator. The fluviatile deposits found in the beds of channels and tanks [adaimunn] are however largely made use of. Common salt [ooppoo] is sometimes used for cocoanut [q.v.] trees.—"d" As a rule, garden lands are more frequently manured than others, and dry lands receive more frequent attention than wet. The amount of manure supplied varies according to locality and means of cultivator. The following is a fair average of the quantity of manure per acre:—Garden lands 3 to 6 tons; wet lands 1¼ to 3 tons; dry lands 0 to 1 ton. Garden lands are manured every year. Among wet lands those under veligada [q.v.] requiring more frequent application than those under coodapa [q.v.]; these last are manured every third, fourth or fifth year. The practice of diluting manure with large quantities of water is known to the ryots [q.v.] and various modes of making, altering and correcting soils are well understood. Regar [q.v.] land requires no manure.—"e" The following are Tamul proverbs:—பாயும் சலமுழுவதும் கட்டு பழய எரு வெடுத்துக்கொட்டு—"old muck and abundance of water."—காடுவெட்டி நஞ்சைபண்ணு, மாடுகட்டி வைக்கோல் போடு—"turn dry land into wet, pen your cattle in the field, "feed them with straw."—ஏரினும் நன்றாமெருவிடுதல்.—"manure is better even than the plough."—ஆட்டெரு அந்தபோகம் மாட்டெரு மறுபோகம்—"sheep dung for "the immediate crop, cattle dung for the succeeding crop." There is a Teloogoo proverb:—[illegible].—"a field without manure is as unproductive as a cow "[pashoo] without her calf."—"f" The following recipés for mixed manures are from the Brihat shaurngadharam:—"Mix with earth a variety of fragrant flowers; use the mixture as manure to a tree of scentless flowers; pour at the roots the juice of dhavam [godaury] and khadiram [cantalam]; smear over the tree sandal [q.v.] paste, and expose the tree to the smoke of ghee [q.v.]; its scentless flowers will become fragrant. Use as manure to the roots of the cotton [q.v.] the leaves of barley [jow], sesamum [gingelly] and of turmeric [country saffron], and pour at the roots water prepared with a mixture of these leaves; the plant will yield cotton throughout the year, bright and red as fire. Mix with water the juice of the sugar-cane [q.v.] and the root of the vidaury [giant potato]; heat the mixture and rub it over the roots of any flowering tree [phool], and pour at the roots the juice of the sugar-cane; the trees will yield flowers at unusual seasons. Make cakes of a mixture of madhooyashty [atimathooram], sugar [q.v.], coshtam [arabian costum] and madhoopooshpam [mohwah], and cover with the cakes the roots of fruit trees [pazham] and throw earth over the parts; the fruits will grow without stones. Kill a goat [velland] and immediately tie its shoulder skin over the branches of fruit trees; the fruits will long remain unripe. Pound in a stone mortar the bone of the monkey [bandar] mixed with the juice of the elephant [q.v.] in rut; rub the preparation over the roots of fruit trees; the fruits will remain unripe for a year. Tie over the branches of fruit trees the skin of an animal and grass; rub over the branches a mixture of vidangam [byebarang], honey [shahad] and milk [paul]; pour at the roots a mixture of milk [paul] and water; the ripe fruits will adhere to the tree for a very long time. Mix with milk [paul] the serum or marrow of flesh of the fish [matsyam] and the hog [soor] as well as the flesh of the two creatures; soak any seed in the mixture; dry it and expose it to the smoke of ghee [q.v.]; the seed when sown will grow in an unusual and wonderful manner. If the seed of the pomegranate [anaur] be soaked in the blood of the cock [moorghy] twenty-one times and dried each time, it will, the moment it is put into the ground, grow and bear fruits in a wonderful manner. Force into the root of the coomoodam [red indian water-lily] a variety of colors, soak the root in urine, rub over it ghee [q.v.] and honey [shahad], and then sow it in the soil, it will grow and bear flowers of the severai colors originally put into the root. Mix together the buffalo's [khoolgah] dung and urine, rub the mixture over the seed of the fruit of the coomoodam [red indian water-lily] for seven days drying the seed each time; if the seed be then sown into the ground, it will grow as a karaveeram [gannair] plant. Soak the seed of the pumpkin [wax gourd] or of the brinjaul [q.v.], or of the serpent cucumber [snake gourd] and the like in the serum or marrow of flesh of the fish or hog and dry the seed; if the seed be then sown in good soil and watered it will bear fruits of very large size and without stones. Soak the seed of the castor-oil plant [aumanac] in the blood and serum of flesh of the hog [soor] and dry it; soak it again in the oil of the ancolam [alanjy] and dry it; if the seed be now sown in the soil, it will grow and bear the fruits of cauravully [carolah]. Use as manure to the root of the plantain [q.v.] the excrement of the ass [gadhah] and the horse [ghorah]; burn dry twigs over the root; the plantain will then yield fruits as large as the trunk of the elephant [q.v.], and the fruits will appear as if to tear out the tree. If the root of the plantain be drenched with the blood or serum of flesh of the hog [soor] or with the decoction of the fruit of the ancolam [alanjy], it will bear pomegranate [anaur] fruits. If the rambhay or plantain [q.v.] be watered with a liquid mixture consisting of the flesh, serum and blood of man and the powdered tooth of the elephant [q.v.] and water, the tree will yield mango [q.v.] fruits. Mix together the shining decoction of the fruits of ancolam [alanjy], human flesh, the milk [paul] of the goat [velland] and oil cakes

"[ponnauk]; use the mixture as manure to the seed of the "mango [q.v.] put into the soil; the seed will grow out as "a spreading creeper like the vine [angoor] and will bear fruit "at all times. Form a mixture of krimiripoo [byebarang], of "barley [jow], of madhooyashty [atimathooram] and of jaggery "[q.v.], rub it over any tree yielding bitter fruit, after slightly "grazing the bark with a knife, pour at the root a mixture of "milk and water; the tree will thenceforth yield sweet fruits. "Soak any seed many times in human flesh and in the oil of the "ancolam [alanjy], drying the seed each time; take a quantity "of earth in the land, bury the seed in it and pour water over it; "the seed will grow that instant. Dig a pit, burn in it the bones "and the dung [shauny] of the cow [pashoo] and the hog [soor]; "remove the ashes; fill the pit with earth; plant in it the root "of the moolacam [country radish], the root will grow to the "size of the pit."

Within the present Madras district.

YEZHOOT (எழுத்து - ezhuttu, Tam.). From (ezhuthu, tam. to write). A letter. So orthography or one of the five divisions of the tamul Lacshanam [q.v.]. In the sanscrit phonetic system, names of letters are formed:—by adding cauram or varnam to the sound; by the unchanged sound itself, e.g. a; by adding a or some other vowel to a consonant, by a special name e.g. raipham (r); names of classes of letters are also formed by the first of the class followed by vargam. In tamul, letters are divided:—into vowels, consonants, and vowel consonants; into initial, medial, and final; into short, long, demonstrative, and interrogative; into hard, soft, and medial; into relative, dependent, and substituted letters. The tamul alphabet consists of 12 vowels [ooyir] and 18 consonants [mey]; in all 30 letters. Letters peculiar to the tamul language are ற, ழ and ள; and letters borrowed from the sanscrit are ஜ j, ஸ s, ஷ sh, ஹ h, and க்ஷ ksha. The tamul Cooral [q.v.] has the following:—எண்ணென்ப வேனை யெழுத்தென்ப விவ்விரண்டுங் கண்ணென்ப வாழு முயிர்க்கு—"letters "and numbers are the two eyes of man." There is a Tamul proverb:—ஙப்போல்வளை—"bend yourself like the letter "ங;" be humble [bhaushay].—And another:—எட்கிடை நெற்கிடை விட்டெழுத—"to write leaving space of a "sesamum seed [gingelly] between the letters and of a paddy "[q.v.] grain between the lines;" the correct order to be observed in writing [varnamaulay]. See vol. I (42), (44); II, 186–192, 205–210.——Yezhoottiyal (எழுத்தியல் - ezhuttiyal, Tam.). From (above + iyal, tam. nature). Orthography [iyal].

An under-tenant.——Yidaiyinam (இடையினம் - idaiyinam, Tam.). Middle letter. One of the three Tamul classes. ய், ர், ல், வ், ழ், ள். Of these ய் and வ் only are initial; all are final [yezhoot]. See vol. I (52); II, 205, 209.——Yidangay (இடங்கை - idangai, Tam.). Means left hand. Especially the left-hand faction among s. indian caste and tribes. The division into right-hand and left-hand occurred simultaneously with the religious agitation which introduced into Southern india the now-prevailing Braminical supremacy. The imminent decay of the Jeina [q.v.] power opened a prospect. This movement was always confined to Southern india, its centre being at Conjeeveram, where there are to this day special halls for both parties, called Valangay mantapams [q.v.] and Yidangay mantapams. The influence of Jeinas was always strongest in towns; Bramins appealed to the agricultural classes [vellaulan]. In various localities the same castes embraced different sides, yet on the whole the principal parties on both sides are always the same. There is a saying that the Pariahs [q.v.] are not left-hand people, but belong to the Tamulians; the meaning is that, as the Tamulians or Vellaular [q.v.], the masters of the Pariahs, and the principal Shoodras [q.v.], are right-hand men, so are their dependants the Pariahs.—"a" On the right-hand are enumerated:—1, Vellaular [q.v.] and cavarays with the following insignia; More generally a long period of years, at the expiration of which certain phenomena recur. See vol. I, 609.—"b" The Bramins divide the infinity of time [caulam] into four great ages, which they consider to be in constant revolution; these they denominate yoogs or conjunctions, implying cosmic cycles so delimitated. The first of these four ages is named Kritayoog referring to some conjunction which took place at the Kritam or creation [srishty]. It consists of 1,728,000 years. The second is denominated Tretayoog, the conjunction of the Tretay or three sacrificial fires, so called because the great sacrifice in which these fires are used was introduced during this period, which contains 1,296,000 years. The third is named Dwaupar yoog, a compound of two + 1 the next, that which followed the two first, viz., the third; this comprises 864,000 years. The fourth or present age is known by the name of Kaliyoog properly signifying vicious or sinful; to this age bramins assign a period of 432,000 years, of which 4,994 are already elapsed. If the years in the fourth age be doubled, the number of those in the third is given; if multiplied by three, the length of the second is found; and if multiplied by four, the product is the length of the first age.—"c" The Kritam, Tretay, Dwauparam, and Kaliyoog, correspond with the golden, silver, brazen, and iron ages of Greek and Latin writers.—"d" The predominant duties of the four yoogs are austere fervour in the Kritam age, knowledge in the Tretay, sacrifice in the Dwauparam, and liberality alone in the Kaliyoog.—"e" Some say that Kritam, Tretay, Dwauparam, and Kaly, are named from the marks on dice, the Kritam being the best throw of four points, and the Kaly the worst of one point.—"f" During each of the three first ages, mankind lost a part equal to one-fourth of truth [satyam] and moral rectitude [dharmam], until the last or wicked age in which man becomes wholly depraved and sinful. The third age or dwaupar is the renovated world described by Moses, in which is a chaos, or the wreck of a former world, and upon the surface of this moves the spirit of God. The Swayambh [q.v.] was the man-woman of the Hindoos, who was separated into a male and female, like Adam and Eve, and became the first progenitor of mankind. By both accounts, the life of man extended to one thousand years; and the days of the gods were as a thousand years of mortals [caulam, 2]. According to Menoo [q.v.], Noah lived in the third or in the beginning of the fourth yoog, when the age of man was fixed at one hundred years.——(1) The following are the yoogs in chronological order.—"a" Kritayoog (कृतयुग - kritayuga, San.). From (krita, san. good + above). Otherwise Satyayoog, or age of truth or virtue. The oldest or fourth yoog reckoning backwards consisting of four thousand eight hundred divine years, thus:—Kritayoog, proper, 4,000, Sundhyay, 400, Sundhyaumsham, 400, Total, 4,800. Otherwise 1,728,000 solar sidereal years. The golden age of the Hindoos, when virtue wholly prevailed, and the cow stood on its four legs.—"b" Tretayoog (त्रेतायुग - trétáyuga, San.). From (trétá, san. triad + above). The second oldest, or third yoog reckoning backwards, consisting of 36 thousand divine years; 1,296,000 solar sidereal years. The silver age of the Hindoos. Men were then tall and lived long; while vice was as one and virtue as three; the cow stood on three legs.—"c" Dwaupar yoog (द्वापरयुग - dváparayuga, San.). From (dvá, san. two + para, san, following + above). The second yoog, reckoning backwards. This age lasted 2,400 divine years; 864,000 mortal years. The Brazen age of the hindoos. In this equity and iniquity existed in equal portions. At end of Dwaupar yoog, the number of years elapsed since creation is 1955,880,000 as noted in punchaungams [q.v.].—"d" Kaliyoog (कलियुग - kaliyuga, San.). From (kali, san. evil + above). The latest age in every maha-yoog [q.v.]. It consists of 1,200 years of the gods. 432,000 mortal years. The date of the commencement of the present Kaliyoog is fixed at 3,102 B.C. 18th February, when Vishnoo [q.v.] returned to heaven after his incarnation [avatar] as Krishnan [q.v.]. It is the Iron age of the hindoos. During the currency of the present Kaliyoog all things will decline, and the deterioration of mankind will be general; the vedams [q.v.] will be disregarded; the minds of men will be wholly occupied in acquiring wealth; wealth will be spent solely on selfish gratifications; women will follow their inclinations and be fond of pleasure; men of all degrees will consider themselves equal to bramins [q.v.]; cows [pashoo] will be held in esteem only as they supply milk [paul]. These are a few of the evils, selected from the long catalogue of them contained in the Vishnoo pooraunam [q.v.], which are to prevail in the Kaly age. A few redeeming properties of the age are however mentioned; the efficacy of devotion [bhacty] to vishnoo [q.v.] is more strikingly manifested; the least moral merit obtains in this age greatest reward, and is by all classes most easily displayed. At present the number of years elapsed since creation is as noted in calendars [punchaungam] 1955, 884, 994.——(2)—"a" The following ancient dates in general chronology should be compared with reference to the Kaliyoog:—B.C. 5688 was according to the chronology of josephus the epoch assigned to the creation in accordance with the numbers of the ancient jewish bible. B.C. 5509 is the commencement of the era of constantinople, adopted by the œcumenical council held at constantinople in a.d. 381, as the date of the creation, in accordance with the chronology of julius africanus, and since maintained by the greek and armenian churches. B.C. 5439 is the commencement of the era of alexandria, adopted as the date of the creation in accordance with the interpretation of scripture adopted by the church council held at alexandria in the year a.d. 362. B.C. 5390 is the date of the creation according to the interpretation of scripture, followed in the septuagint version. B.C. 5369 is the period to which the indians carried back their history in the time of alexander the great, according to megasthenes, as cited by clement of alexandria. B.C. 4245 is the date of creation according to the chronological indications of the samaritan pentateuch. B.C. 4004 is the date of creation according to the reading of the received hebrew text of the old testament, which has been followed in the authorized english version. B.C. 3761 is the date of creation according to the orthodox jewish chronology of the bible; it is of all biblical chronological computations the most restricted, differing from that of josephus by 1,927 years, from that of the oriental churches by 1,748 years, from that of the alexandrain era by 1,678 years, from that of the septuagint by 1,629 years, from that of the samaritan text by 484 years, and from that of the english authorized version by 243 years.—"b" The following is from Sanchioniatho:—"We must also condemn the Babylonians, "and those who in the region of Caucasus pretend to have "observed the heavens and courses of the stars; we must "condemn them of folly, or of vanity, or of impudence, who "assert that they have preserved upon monuments observations "extending back during an interval of 470,000 years."—"c" The following is from Eusebius:—"Among the Egyptians "there is a certain tablet called the Old chronicle, containing "thirty dynasties in 113 descents, during the long period of "36,525 years; the first series of princes was that of the Auritæ, "the second was that of the Mestræans, the third of Egyptians. "It runs thus. The reign of the gods according to the old "chronicle. To hephæstus is assigned no time as he is apparent "both by night and day; helius the son of hephæstus reigned "three myriads of years; then cronus and the other twelve "divinities reigned 3984; next in order are the demigods, in "number eight, who reigned 217 years; in all, thirty dynasties "and 36,525 years. Which number of years, resolved and "divided into its constituent parts, that is to say 25 times 1,461 "years, shows that it relates to the fabled periodical revolution "[bhaganam] of the zodiac [raushy chuckram] among the "Egyptians and Greeks; or its revolution from a particular "point to the same again, which point is the first minute of "the first degree of that equinoctial sign [raushy] called the "Ram [maisham], as it is explained in the Genesis of Hermes "and in the Cyrannian books."—"d" The following is from Pomponius Mela:—"The Egyptians, according to their own "accounts, are the most ancient of men, and they reckon in "their series of annals 330 kings who reigned above 13,000 "years; and they preserve, in written records the memory of "the event that since the commencement of the Egyptian race "the stars have completed four revolutions and the sun has "twice set where he now rises."—"e" The following is from Censorinus:—the Pascal Chronicle:—The following is from the greatest, rather than the "The year which Aristotle calls the greatest, rather than the "great, is that in which the sun, moon and all the planets "complete their courses, and return to the same sign from which "they originally started together. The winter of this year is "the cataclysm, which we call the deluge; but its summer is "the ecpyrosis, that is to say the conflagration of the world. For "at these alternate seasons the world is burned and deluged. "Aristarchus supposes this periodical revolution to consist of "2,484 years; Aretes of Dyrrhachium of 5,552; Herodotus and "Linus of 10,800; Orpheus of 120,000; Cassandrus of 136,000. "Others suppose it to be infinite in duration, and that the "celestial bodies never again coincide in their original positions."—"f" Seneca has the following:—"Berossus, who thus "interprets the Babylonian tradition, says that these events "take place according to the course of the stars; and affirms it "so positively as to assign the time for the conflagration and the "deluge. He maintains that all terrestrial things will be "consumed, when the planets [graham], which now are traversing their different courses, shall all coincide in the sign [raushy] "of Cancer [carcatacam], and be so placed that a straight line "could pass through all their orbs [golam]. But the inundation

"will take place when the same conjunction of the planets
"[graham] shall occur in Capricorn [macaram]. The first in "the summer, the last in the winter of the year [caulam]."—
"g" Compare Madhyama sowra maunam.——(3) For modern chronological purposes the Kaliyoog begins with the sun's entrance [sancramanam] into the hindoo lunar mansion Ashwiny [q.v.], which happens now owing to the march of precession on the 12th of april [madhyama sowra maunam].——(4) A yoog of jupiter [brihaspaty] is a period of five terrestrial years [samvatsaram], or one-twelfth part of the whole cycle of sixty terrestrial years, or $\frac{5}{12}$ths of a jupiter revolution; this being an unnatural inversion of the ordinary periods shown under Brihaspaty. Under this mode of reckoning, the twelve yoogs are known as belonging respectively to the Devas, Vishnoo, Brihaspaty, Indran, Agny, Twashtry, Ahirboodnyay, Pitries, Vasoodevan, Soman, Indraugny, Ashwiny devah, Bhagan. The five years of each yoog are known as:—Samvatsaram, Parivat-saram, Idavatsaram, Anoovatsaram, Idvatsaram. These are sacred respectively to:—Agny [q.v.] fire, Arcan [sooryan] the sun, Chundran [q.v.] the moon, Prajaupaty [q.v.] the creator, Roodran [q.v.] the destroyer. The following are Varauha mihiran's remarks as to the seasonal, &c., prospects of the sixty years thus divided:—"Generally in every yoog, there will be "good rain in the first year and at the beginning of the second "year; excessive rain in the third year; moderate rain at the "end of the rainy season of the fourth year; and slight rain in "the fifth year. In the first four yoogs there will be prosperity
"in the land; in the next or middle four there will not be much "of it; and in the last four mankind will suffer miseries. When
"brihaspaty reappears at the beginning of the constellation
"of dhanishtay [q.v.] in the month of maugham [mausam] or "february march, the first year of the cycle of sixty years of "brihaspaty known as prabhavam commences; in it all creatures
"will be happy; in the same year there will be drought in "certain places and suffering from storm and fire; the crops
"will be injured; phlegmatic maladies [sheetam] will afflict
"mankind; nevertheless mankind will be happy; the next year
"is known as vibhavam; the third as shooclam, the fourth
"as pramodam [pramodootam] and the fifth as prajaupaty
"[prajotputty]; in each of these years mankind will be happier
"than in the next preceding year; in the same four years there "will be good growth of the shauly [paddy] crop, of sugar-cane
"[q.v.], of barley [jow] and other crops in the land; mankind
"will be freed from all fears and they will live at peace, in "happiness and without the vices of the kaliyoog [q.v.]. The "five years of the second yoog are known as angiram [angeera-
"sam], shreemookham, bhavam, yoovam and dhautoo; of these
"during the first three years mankind will enjoy happiness but "during the last two they will not enjoy much of it; in the "first three of the above five years there will be abundance of "rain and mankind will be freed from fears and anxieties, in "the last two years the rainfall will be moderate but disease
"and wars will afflict mankind. The five years of the third
"yoog sacred to indran [q.v.] are known as eshwaram,
"bahoodhaunyam [vegoodhaunyam], pramaudy, vicramam and
"vrisham [vishoo]; in the first two years mankind will enjoy
"the happiness of kritayoog [q.v.]; in the year pramaudy they "will feel miserable, but in the years vicramam and vrisham "[vishoo] they will again be happy. The first year of the "fourth yoog is known as chittrabaun, in it mankind will be "happy; the second is known as soobhaun; in it mankind will "be neither happy nor miserable, there will however be disease
"in the land but no deaths in consequence; the next year is "known as tauranam, in it there will be abundance of rain
"the next is known as paurtivam, in it crops [vellaumay]
"will thrive well and mankind will be happy; the fifth year
"is known as vyayam, in it amorous sensations will prevail
"over the land. The first year of the next yoog sacred to "twashtry is known as sarwajit; the next year is known as "sarwadhaury; the next three years are virodhy, vicrit and "kharam; in the second of these, mankind will be happy and "they will be afflicted with fears in the other years. The five "years of the next yoog are nandanam, vijayam, jayam,
"manmatam, doonmookhy; during the first three years there "will be happiness in the land; in manmatam mankind will "feel neither happy nor miserable, and in the year doon-"mookhy they will feel miserable. The years of the seventh
"yoog are hevilamby, vilamby, vicaury, shaurwary and plavam;
"in the first of these years crops will generally be injured
"and there will be storm and rain; in the second year
"crops will not grow in abundance and the rainfall will not "be much; in the third year mankind will be afflicted with fears
"and there will be much rain; in the fourth year there will be
"famine; in plavam, the fifth year, there will be prosperity in "the land and also much rain [mazhay]. The first year of the "next yoog sacred to vishwedevah is shobhacrit; the next year
"is known as shoobhacrit; the third is crodhy; and the remain"ing years are known as vishwauvasoo and paraubhavam;
"during the first two years mankind will be happy; during the "third they will feel exceedingly miserable; and during the last "two years they will be neither happy nor miserable; but in "the year paraubhavam there will be fear from fire and suffering
"from weapons and from disease, the bramins and cows will also "suffer. The first year of the ninth yoog is plavangam, the next "year is known as keelakam, the third is known as sowmyam
"and the last two years are known as sadhauranam and rodha-
"crit [virodhikrit]; during the years keelakam and sowmyam
"mankind will be happy; in the year plavangam mankind will "suffer much; in sadhauranam there will be slight rain and "crops will suffer; in the fifth year there will be a variety of "rainfall and crops will thrive. The first year of the next yoog
"sacred to indraugny is known as paridhauvy; the remaining
"years are pramaudy, anandam, raucshasam and analam [nalam];
"in the year paridhauvy the madhyadesham will suffer, the "ruling princes will perish, there will be slight rain and fear
"from fire; in the year pramaudy mankind will be disposed to "be inactive, villagers will be at strife, red flowers and red seed
"will be destroyed; in the next year mankind will be happy; in "the years raucshasam and analam [nalam] there will be deaths
"and decay in the land; in raucshasam again the summer crops
"will thrive, and in analam [nalam] there will be fear from fire
"and much suffering in the land. The five years of the eleventh
"yoog are pingalam, caulayoocty, siddhaurty, rowdry, doormaty;
"in the first year there will be much rain and fear from thieves
"and mankind will suffer from consumption of the lungs and "asthmatic complaints; in the year caulayoocty mankind will "suffer from various evils; but in siddhaurty they will be happy
"in more ways than one; in the year rowdry mankind will "suffer much and there will be loss and rain in the land; in "doormaty there will be moderate rain [mazhay]. In the "twelfth yoog sacred to the god bhagan the first year is known
"as doondoobhy, the crops will thrive well; the next year is "known as oodgaury [roodrotcaury], in it the ruling sovereigns
"will perish and there will not be good rain; the third year is "known as raucshasam [ractaucshy], in it there will be fear
"from the attack of tusked animals, and mankind will suffer
"from disease; the fourth year is known as crodhanam, in it
"there will be anger in the land and countries will be ruined in "consequence of internal strife; the last year of the last yoog is
"cshayam [acshayam], there will then be much rain in the land
"the bramins [q.v.] will be afflicted with fear, and farmers will
"prosper, the veisyas [q.v.] and shoodras [q.v.] will be happy
"as also persons that deprive others of their property. Thus "have been described briefly the effects of the sixty years of
"Brihaspaty's cycle [brihaspaty chuckram]."——(5) Yoogaudy (యుగాది - yugádi, Tel.). Means an age of the world + beginning. Generally used among those who follow the lunisolar [chaundramaunam] calendar [punchaungam], for beginning of the new year [q.v.] as anniversary of the epoch [samvatsaraudy, teloogoo new year].——Yoog dinam (युगदिन - yugadina, San.).
The anniversary of the day on which the current Mahayoog [q.v.], and any one of the four lesser yoogs began; which anniversary is always noticed in the calendar [punchaungam].

YOOJ (युज् - yuj, San.). To join [jog].——Yogam (योग - yóga, San.; யோகம் - yógam, Tam.). From (yuj, san. to join).—
"a" The third of the four stages of progress towards union with god. The eight kinds of yogam are:—Ausanam, position; Dhauranay, fixing the mind on a member of the body; Dhyaunam, silent meditation; Niyamam, religious observances; Pratyauhauram, restraining the sense; Praunayaumam, breathing in a particular way; Samaudhy, silent contemplative worship; Yamam, restraint of the appetites.—"b" Also the name of one of the ancient Darshanams [q.v.] or philosophies. The Yogam philosophy was propounded by Patanjaly [q.v.], of whom nothing is known, except that he was probably not the same person as the author of the Mahabhaushyam. The aim of the Yogam is to teach the means by which the human soul [autmam] may attain complete union [mocsham] with the supreme soul [paramautman]. This fusion or union of individual with universal spirit may be effected even in the body by the practice of Veiraugyam [q.v.], or complete suppression of the passions. This Veiraugyam is only to be obtained by Eeshwara pranidhaunam or the contemplation of the supreme being, who is defined to be a particular Poorsham [q.v.] or spirit unaffected by works [carmam], afflictions, &c., and having the appellation Pranavam [q.v.] or Om [q.v.]. The repetition of this monosyllable is attended with marvellous results, and the muttering of it with reflection on its meaning is conducive to a knowledge of the supreme and to a prevention of all the obstacles to Yogam. This mysticism pervades every sect of the Hindoos and is analogous to the Soofee [q.v.] reveries among Mussalmans [q.v.], and to the european system of Swedenborg [matam].—"c" Proper name common to both sexes, used in composition with distinctive suffixes, masculine and feminine [peyar].—"d" Conjunction [sangam, sangamam]. In astronomy, a period of variable length during which the joint motion [chauram, gaty] in longitude [dhroovacam, sauyanam] of the sun [sooryan] and moon [chundran] amounts to one nacshatram [q.v.] or 13° 20′. The duration of a mean yogam is $56^g\ 29^v\ 21^p$ [caulam, 5], answering to $23^h\ 47'\ 44''\ 24'''$ european time; but the apparent yogam varies in proportion with the sun and moon's respective apparent motions, which depend on the place of their apogees and afford a vast variety of combinations. Hence a yogam star is theoretically the junction or limiting star of a lunar mansion [nacshatram]. There are twenty-eight yogam stars including Abhijit [q.v.] in the lunar zodiac [raushy chuckram]. Harshanam [q.v.], Spica virginis, was the yogam which most attracted the attention of the more recent hindoo astronomers; probably on account of its convenient magnitude and declination [craunty], which latter at the beginning of the ninth century was 9° 38′ 13″ S. To this star they referred the beginning of the seventh month of the solar sidereal year, from which they concluded the beginning of the first month. It was by observations of the same star that Hipparchus first discovered in the second century before Christ the motion of the fixed stars from west to east, and in this respect it is possible that hindoo astronomy borrowed from the greek. As regards yogam stars being junction stars, this is in reality only very approximate; see Nacshatram and Madhyama sowramaunam. The following are the yogam stars in order of right ascension [lagnam], with the best conjectures that can be made as to the stars on the european system which they represent. They will be found alphabetically arranged under Nacshatram [q.v.]:—

Serial No.	Yogam.	Assumed corresponding star on European system.
1	Vishcambham	α Arietis, hamel.
2	Preety	35 Arietis.
3	Ayooshmat	η Tauri, alcyone.
4	Sowbhaugyam	α Tauri, aldebaran.
5	Shobhanam	λ Orionis.
6	Atigandam	α Orionis, betelgeux.
7	Soocarmam	β Geminorum, pollux.
8	Dhrity	δ Canceri.
9	Shoolam	α Canceri.
10	Gandam	α Leonis, regulus or cor leonis.
11	Vriddhy	δ Leonis.
12	Dhroovam	β Leonis.
13	Vyaughautam	δ Corvi.
14	Harshanam	α Virginis, spica.
15	Vajram	α Boötis, arcturus.
16	Siddhy	α Libræ, zubenesch.
17	Vyateepautam	δ Scorpii.
18	Vareeyas	α Scorpii, antares.
19	Parigham	λ or ν Scorpii.
20	Shivam	δ Sagittarii.
21	Siddham	τ Sagittarii.
21a	Abhijit	α Lyræ, vega.
22	Saudhyam	α Aquilæ, altair.
23	Shoobham	α Delphini.
24	Shooclam or Shoobhram ...	λ Aquarii.
25	Bramham	α Pegasii, markab.
26	Mahendram or Eindram ...	α Andromedæ, alpheratz.
27	Veidhrity	η or ζ Piscium.

—"e" Yogams also mean in an applied sense the concurrences of certain sauvanam or natural days [dinam, 2] of the week [vauram] of 7 days, with certain of the 27 lunar asterisms [nacshatram] occupied on those days by the moon; these giving without abhijit 189 permutations, as the lunar month exceeds 4 weeks and is always shifting in relation to the 4-week period. These permutations are ranked astrologically under 6 heads, which are held to give the astrological quality of the actual resulting day. Thus:—Amrita siddham, immortal and accomplished or perfect, the best; Amritam, immortal; Siddham, accomplished or perfect; Ootpautam, portentous; Mrityoo or maranam, death; Prabalaunishtam, excessively bad, the worst. The influence of these yogams do not operate during rahoo caulam [vauram], sancramanam [q.v.], tyaujyams [q.v.], and certain other periods. They are always entered against each day in the native calendar [punchaungam]. The following is the complete table of these yogams, it being called the Amritaudy yogam table. The assignment of qualities is according to the conflicting or mutually modifying or cumulative qualities of the presiding deity of the mansion [nacshatram] and the planetary lord of the week-day [vauram]:—

——Yoga nidray (योगनिद्रा - yóganidrá, San.). From (yóga, san. union + nidrá, san. sleep). The sleep of devotion or abstraction, the active principle of illusion personified; also termed Mauyay [q.v.] and Maha mauyay, and also Anyaunam [q.v.] or ignorance. ——Yogappan (యోగప్ప - yógappa, Tel.). From (yogí, san. ascetic + appa, tel. father, titular affix). Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar].——Yogendran (యోగీంద్రుడు - yógíndrudu, Tel.). From (yógí, san. a saint + índra, san. chief); chief among yogies. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar].——Yogeshan (யோகேசன் - yógésan, Tam.). From (yógí, san. sage + ísha, san. lord); lord among yogies. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar].——Yogeshwaran (யோகீசுவரன் - yógísuvaran, Tam.). From (yógi, san. a saint + íshvara, san. lord); lord among yogies. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar].——Yogivullabhan (யோகிவல்லபன் - yógívallaban, Tam.). From (yógí, san. sage + vallabha, san. friend); friend of yogies. Hindoo 2nd or pers. name [peyar]. ——Yogy (योगी - yógí, San.). A follower of the yogam [q.v.] system of philosophy. A sheiva ascetic [yaty]. The tamulian idea however is rather that of spiritual union with deity than that of asceticism. Compare the following from Cooral:—மலர்மிசையேகினான் மாணடி சேர்ந்தார் நிலமிசை நீடுவாழ்வார்—"they who are united to the glorious feet of him who "occupies swiftly the flower of the mind, shall flourish in the "highest of worlds."—வேண்டுதல்வேண்டாமை யிலானடி சேர்ந்தார்க் கியாண்டு மிடும்பை யில—"to those who "meditate the feet of him who is void of desire or aversion, evil "shall never come."—இருள்சே ரிருவினையுஞ் சேரா விறைவன் பொருள்சேர் புகழ்புரிந்தார் மாட்டு—"the two-fold "deeds that spring from darkness shall not adhere to those who "delight in the true praise of god."—பொறிவாயி லைந்தவித்தான் பொய்தீ ரொழுக்க நெறிநின்றார் நீடுவாழ்வார்—"those shall long prosper who abide in the faultless way of "him who has destroyed the five desires of the senses."—தனக்குவமை யில்லாதான் றாள்சேர்ந்தார்க் கல்லான் மனக்கவலை மாற்ற லரிது—"anxiety of mind cannot be removed, "except from those who are united to the feet of him who is "incomparable."—அறவாழி யந்தணன் றாள்சேர்ந்தார்க் கல்லாற் பிறவாழி நீந்த லரிது—"none can swim the sea "of vice, but those who are united to the feet of that gracious "being who is a sea of virtue."—கோளில் பொறியிற் குணமிலவே யெண்குணத்தான் றாளை வணங்காத் தலை—"the head that worships not the feet of him who is possessed of eight attributes, is as useless as a sense without the "power of sensation."——Yojanam (योजन - yójana, San.; யோசனை - yósanai, Tam.). From (yuj, san. to join).—"a" A stage in travelling, league. Linear measure. 4 croshams = 1 yojanam [alavay, 1f]. Approximate actual value, 1 yojanam = 9 miles. Varies however with the crosham from 4 to 18 miles. Compare Hind. gow, Can. gauvada, Tel. aumada, Tam. cautham. See vol. I, 609.—"b" An astronomical measure, deduced from the ratio of the diameter of the earth [bhoomy] to the circumference [paridhy] of its equatorial circle [niracsham]. The Hindoo mathematicians divide the diameter of the earth into 1,600 parts, whence they have this expression $\sqrt{10 \times 1600^2} = 5059{\cdot}04$ yojanams for the value of the equatorial circle. An angle of one minute [calay] of a degree [bhaugam] is supposed to be subtended by 15 yojanams, at the mean distance of the moon [chundran]; so that dividing the earth's semi-diameter or 800 yojanams by 15, there is given 53′ 20″ for the moon's mean horizontal parallax [sheeghram]. It follows from this result that 53′ 20″ of the moon's orbit [cacsham] will measure 15 yojanams, and that her whole orbit or 360° will measure 324,000 yojanams. Hence 5,059 or the circumference of a great circle [mundalam, raikhay] of the terrestrial globe [bhoogolam] in yojanams, is to 800 yojanams its semi-diameter, as 324,000 or the circumference of the moon's orbit [cacsham] in yojanams is to 51,235 yojanams her mean distance from the earth. From which it follows that this distance according to the estimates of Hindoo astronomers is about 64 semi-diameters of the earth. As the moon is supposed to complete 57,753,336,000 sidereal revolutions [bhaganam] in a Calpam [q.v.], this number drawn into 324,000, gives 18,712,080,864,000,000 yojanams for her absolute motion during that time. It is a principle in Hindoo astronomy that the absolute motion of each planet [graham] in a day, or any other given time, is equal to the absolute motion of the moon in the same time. Hence if the absolute motion of the moon during a Calpam [q.v.] be divided by the number of mean revolutions [bhaganam] completed by any planet, during that period, it will give the Cacsham [q.v.], or circumference of the planet's orbit in yojanams. To convert degrees of latitude [acsham] and longitude [deshauntaram] into yojanams, Hindoos use the following proportion:—as 360° to the proposed number of degrees; so 5,059 yojanams or the circumference of the equatorial circle, to the number of yojanams sought. The shastrams sub-divide the yojanam into a great number of parts, in the following manner:—yojanam ÷ 4 croshams ÷ 1,000 dhanoos, or dandams ÷ 4 hastams, or cubits ÷ 2 vitasties, or spans ÷ 2 padams, or foot breadths ÷ 6 ungoolams, or finger breadths + 4 yavams. Some make the crosham = 2,000 dandams or half a yojanam, which agrees better with that in which the distances are usually computed [jyotisham].——Yoocty (युक्ति - yukti, San.; உத்தி - utti, Tam.). From (yuj, san. to join). Rule of criticism. There are according to the Nunnool [q.v.] thirty-two yoocties, which an author employs in reference to literary subjects:—"a" stating the author's aim beforehand;—"b" proper arrangement of parts of the antecedents and consequents;—"c" giving the substance or summary;—"d" specification or sub-division;—"e" adducing eminent examples and applying them to practice;—"f" reference to authorities;—"g" citations from ancient authors;—"h" mere mention of the principles of others;—"i" explication, or supplying terms to bring out the author's meaning;—"j" using related or compound words;—"k" using terms by which one thing is employed and another implied;—"l" subsequent explanation of what was previously introduced or left unsettled;—"m" applying one rule to another when subjects are similar;—"n" attaching one rule to another when the subjects depend on one another;—"o" rejection of obsolete usage;—"p" adoption of modern usage;—"q" frequent recurrence to a previously established hypothesis;—"r" transposition of words and subjects according to circumstances;—"s" using a particular expression to render a subject intelligible;—"t" making apparent a particular by a general subject;—"u" a hint put forth with a view to subsequent explanation;—"v" referring to a subject already explained;—"w" siding with one or other of two contrary authorities;—"x" producing examples for rules or opinions laid down;—"y" making adduced examples apparent;—"z" resolution of dubious passages;—"aa" inferring an omitted subject by its dependence upon what has been already stated;—"bb" adoption of, or acquiescence in, the opinions or conclusions of others;—"cc" continuation of the use of technical terms and phrases peculiar to an author;—"dd" an evident and easy transition from words to thoughts;—"ee" statement of all kindred subjects in one view for the sake of conciseness;—"ff" use of such terms, descriptions or definitions in a written work as may require the exercise of thought, and reference to other parts in order to comprehend them. True criticism consists in:—"a" showing the connection or consistency of the subject of a work with generally received opinions as well as with those of approved authors;—"b" in a nicety of judgment by the exercise of which fit places are awarded to appropriate topics.——Yooga pattricay (युगपत्त्रिका - yugapattriká, San.). From (yuga, san. pair + pattrika, san. leaflet); from leaflets in pairs. Blackwoods, otherwise East indian rosewoods. Botanically the Dalbergia genus, leguminosæ [vricsham, 48]. Hard-wooded, wing-leaved trees, native of east indies; pods thin, flat, not winged; timber employed for railway sleepers and valuable furniture. The species best known to the natives are:—lanceolaria [caunooga], latifolia [malabar blackwood] paniculata [yellow mountain ebony], sissoo [q.v.].

YOONOOS (يونس - yúnus, Ar.). Jonas. Mahomedan alam; as Yoonoos ally, double alam [ism].

YOOSOOF (يوسف - yúsuf, Ar.). Beautiful. Joseph. Adonis of the east. Common alam among Mahomedans; as Yoosoof beg, alam + alaumat [ism].

YOOVAM (युव - yuva, San.). Young.——Yoova rajah (युवराजा - yuvarájá, San.). From (above + rájá, san. king). The young rajah, eldest son of a rajah who succeeds to the raj [q.v.] by primogeniture [elliah rajah].

YOWM (يوم - yaum, Ar.). Day [shamba, vauram].—"a" Yowm ool ahad (يوم الاحد - yaumulahad, Ar.). From (ahad, ar. one). Sunday.—"b" Yowm ool isnein (يوم الاثنين - yaumulisnain, Ar.). From (arbaá, ar. four). Wednesday.—"e" Yowm ool khamees (يوم الخميس - yaumulkhamís, Ar.). From (khamís, ar. fifth). Thursday.—"f" Yowm ool joomah (يوم الجمعة - yaumuljuma, Ar.). From (juma, ar. meeting). Friday.—"g" Yowm ool sabat (يوم السبت - yaumussabt, Hind.). From (sabt, ar. rest). Sabbath day or Saturday.

Z (ذ zál, ز ze, ض - zád, ظ - zoe, Hind.). Hind. ز - denotes 700 in arithmetic; contraction for the last Mahomedan month [maheena]. Hind. ز stands for the numeral seven [haft, saptam]; and for Saturday in almanacs [punchaungam] and the sign [raushy] Scorpion [akrab, vrishchicam]. Hind. ض symbol for 800. Hind. ظ symbol for 900.

ZABARJAD (गारुड - gáruda, San.; حجر ازرق - hajariazrak, Ar.; ياقوت كبود - yákútikabúd, Pers.; زبرجد - zabarjad, Hind.; ವೈಡೂರ್ಯ - vaidúrya, Can.; గరుడపచ్చ - garudapattsa, Tel.; വൈഡൂര്യം - vaidúryam, Mal.; படிகப்பச்சை - padigappaççai, Tam.). Title from hindostany. San. from (garuda, san. braminy kite); so called as antidote to snake-bite, garoodan being enemy of snakes. Ar. from (hajar, ar. stone + azrak, ar. blue). Pers. from (yákút, pers. garnet + kabúd, pers. blue). Can. from (vidúra, san. the mountain). Tel. from (garuda, san. braminy kite + pattsa, tel. emerald). Tam. from (sp'hatika, san. crystal + paççai, tam. green). Tam. also (shamuttiravannakkal), meaning sea + colour + stone. Otherwise Aqua marina. Beryl. Greek βήρυλλος. The πυνδάτα ἐν ᾗ βήρυλλος of Ptolemy was Seringapatam. A mineral composed of silicate of alumina and glucina, crystallizing in the hexagonal system, and usually occurring in hexagonal pyramids. Bluish-green stones brought from Ceylon and Pegu. They are so analogous in their properties and composition to emeralds or zamarrood [q.v.] that they have been called varieties, but chrome has not been discovered in the beryl, and to this is ascribed the rich green color of the emerald [ratnam]. See vol. II, 40.

ZABAUN (زبان - zabán, Hind.). From persian. Tongue, language.——Zabaun bandee (زبان بندی - zabánbandí, Hind.). From (above + bandí, pers. binding). Deposition of a witness [kyfiyat, vaukmoolam].——Zabaunee (زبانی - zabání, Hind.). Means by mouth. Viva voce statement.

ZABH (ذبح - zabh, Hind.). From (zabaha, ar. to cut lengthwise). A sacrifice, slaughter agreeably to the Mahomedan law [halaul].

ZYECHA (زائچہ - záichah, Hind.). From (zái, pers. brought forth + chah, pers. diminutive sign); from original use in ascertaining the fortunes of a new-born child. Horoscope.—"a" Mahomedans distribute the hours of day and night of the seven days of the week [vauram] among the seven principal planets, which include sun and moon, as in the annexed table. The orbits of the planets are supposed to be in the following order, sun, venus, mercury, moon, saturn, jupiter, mars; and the progressive hours of the week beginning with 6 a.m., on sunday are assigned to them in that order in rotation. As the sunday day regents happen to coincide with the wednesday night regents, the table is clubbed; but to see the rotations continuously alternating day and night the columns have to be read in the order 1, 5, 2, 6, 3, 7, 4, 1, 5, 2, 6, 3, 7, 4. It may be added that in point of nomenclature mahomedans call sunday night, the night of monday, and so on; reckoning from sunset to sunset. However this does not affect the table, and the english designations are there given. When a person is born at a certain hour, it is considered that the person is born under the planet thus assigned to the hour, and his fortunes are then predicted according to the following canons:—Shums or sun, the person will be generous, irascible, respected in word, very wealthy, addicted to drinking, little inclined to do pious acts, long-lived and auspicious to parents. Zohra or venus, will be fond of music, of dress and scents, amorous, accomplished, of good voice, a good singer, a delight to men and women, will enrich himself at expense of others, and maintain his parents and relations. Ootaurid or mercury, will be wise, learned, of good memory, skilled in painting, affectionate, social, friendly, obliging and will exalt whom he likes and avoid whom he dislikes. Cumr or moon, will be a liar, drunkard, gambler, afraid of water, subject to cold and debility, a great traveller and exposed to danger to life in travelling, propitious to parents and friends. Zoohal or saturn, will be of dark complexion, thin, bilious, hasty, perverse, cruel, forgetful and a good warrior. Mooshtary or jupiter, will be good-looking, a judge, a king versed in arts and politics, will have many foes, but will overcome them, skilled in handicraft, drawing, writing, charitable, firm in mind, high-spirited and persevering. Mirreek or mars, will be a rapid talker, irascible, cruel, desirous of knowledge, ambitious, and covetous of neighbour's money:—

—"b" The above table is also used in choosing a name for a new-born child; the initial or final letter of the planet under which it is born being taken for initial letter of the name intended to be given; thus if born under cumr or moon, the name may be either Cootb ood deen, pivot of religion, or Rookn ood deen, pillar of religion.—"c" When a marriage is arranged, the following table is consulted by masheikhs to see whether the parties will make a happy match. A person can be born under a zodiacal sign; that is to say the sign which is in the ascendant otherwise orient at the hour of his birth is his sign through life [raushy, 1j]. And each sign has in arabic astrology for quality a predominating element, thus:—I, V, IX are signs of fire; II, VI, X of earth; III, VII, XI of air; IV, VIII, XII of water. Compare the terrestrial applications of hindoo signs at Raushy (1) j. These signs and their elements are shown in columns 1 and 2 of the table. Again each sign has its planetary regent, these being identical with those in the hindoo system; see Raushy (1) k. While each planetary regent has a sex in that capacity, thus:—mars is hermaphrodite, or male for I, female for VIII; venus is hermaphrodite, or female for II, male for VII; mercury is hermaphrodite, or male for III, female for VI; moon is always female, having but one sign, IV; sun is always male, having but one sign, V; jupiter is hermaphrodite, or male for IX, female for XII; saturn is hermaphrodite, or female for X, male for XI. These differ from the sexes in the hindoo system; see Vauram, c. These planetary regents and their sexes are shown in columns 3 and 4 of the table. Certain letters of the arabic alphabet are again arbitrarily held to correspond with certain signs. Then by a combination of these different considerations with the initials of the names of the contracting parties the masheikhs tell their fortunes as a married couple:—

Sign of zodiac.	Its predominating element.	Planetary regent of the sign.	Its gender as such.	Alphabetical letters assumed to correspond with the sign.	Ditto transliterated in english.

—"d" The following table is used in sickness for ascertaining the probability of survival. In this case for ascertaining the zodiacal sign which rules the case the patient's alam [q.v.] and that of his mother are ascertained, and the numerical value of the consonants therein is calculated according to a certain formula. That is to say the consonants in this verse, 'abjad hawwaz, huttí, kalaman, safas karashat, sakhazzazigh,' which is supposed to enumerate the names of some celebrated kings of midian, are held to have the following numerical values:— ا, a = 1; ب, b = 2; ج, j = 3; د, d = 4; ه, h = 5; و, v, w = 6; ز, z = 7; ح, h = 8; ط, t = 9; ى, y = 10; ك, k = 20; ل, l = 30; م, m = 40; ن, n = 50; س, s = 60; ع, a = 70; ف, f = 80; ص, s = 90; ق, k = 100; ر, r = 200; ش, sh = 300; ت, t = 400; ث, s = 500; خ, kh = 600; ذ, z = 700; ض, z = 800; ظ, z = 900; غ, gh = 1,000. Then the values of all the consonants of the two names are added together, and divided by 12 being the number of signs; if 1 remains the patient is under sign I or hamel, if 2 remains he is under sign II or sowr, and so on. But according to the sign thus ruling there are certain critical years of age for the patient, and these are shown in the table:—

Sex.	I Hamel.	II Sowr.	III Jowzah.	IV Sartaun.	V Asad.	VI Soomboola.	VII Meezaun.	VIII Akrab.	IX Kows.	X Jaddy.	XI Dalo.	XII Hoot.

—"e" There are other tables for finding lucky and unlucky days of the month. A familiar fixed rule for this is to count the days of month on the 5 fingers of the hand beginning with little finger and then beginning again, thus 1—5, 6—10, &c.; the days which fall on middle finger are lucky. Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday are lucky days of the week; the other three not so. For making journeys see Rijaul ool gheib.

ZYLE (ذيل - zail, Hind.). From (zála, ar. to have a tail), as the skirt of a garment reaching the ground. Otherwise zeyl by corruption. Appendix; supplement to a letter or book; margin of a book with annotations; any supplementary detail of particulars. Specification of rates in which rent is to be paid by a ryot [q.v.], whether in money or kind, annexed to the puttah [q.v.] granted by a zemindar [q.v.].

INDEX.

[Words other than the first in the index not preceded by a hyphen indicate capital titles in the text. Words in the index preceded by a hyphen indicate italic sub-titles in the text under the word last preceding the hyphen. Numerical figures in the index not preceded by a hyphen indicate clarendon numbers in the text. Numerical figures in the index preceded by a hyphen indicate ordinary numbers in the text under the clarendon number given by the figure preceding. Single letters in the index indicate the sub-heads of matter in the text denoted by italic single letters within inverted commas.

When either the commencement or the termination of a compound word falls quite naturally within the alphabetical arrangement of the main text, the reader is left to trace the word for himself; but in all other cases assistance is given through the index.]
